Five Per Cent Reduction on Goods in U. S. Ships Is Cause of Trouble

BILL PLEASES DEMOCRATS

Secretary Bryan Indorses Measure as Best Passed Since Civil War

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Officials of e treasury department are at sea know what congress actually meant the provision of the new tariff law lowing a 5 per cent reduction of du- s on goods imported in American ips, with the condition that the fferential should not be construed to [illegible]gate or impair any existing treaty tween the United States and a forn nation.

Literally interpreted, it is declared e provision would give a 5 per cent crease to goods in American botms and automatically grant the me privilege to the same ships of e many nations whose treaties with e United States guarantee no disimination between their vessels and ose of America. This construction, ugh would be a horizontal reduction 5 per cent in the tariff for importan from most of the great countries the world, involves probably $10,- [illegible] in revenue for the government, [illegible]ting a deficit instead of a surplus [illegible], as has been [illegible]ated the tariff [illegible]. BANKER AND $90,000 MISSING IN PUEBLO

Police Believe He Left City Last Monday With Creditors' Deposits

PUEBLO, Oct. 4.—Police of Pueblo tonight are looking for Sava Radakovich, a Servian merchant and banker of this city, who is believed by them to have left the country last Monday, taking with him some $90,000 of his creditors' deposits. The bank which the Servian conducted was an unlicensed one. Servian laborers in the local steel mills were wont to deposit their weekly pay checks with him, and his disappearance was not noticed until tonight when the laborers went to Radakovich's place of business to make their weekly deposits and found the place locked. Police were called and investigation tended to show, they said, that the Servian had left the city Monday with the bank's deposits.

"I bring to the French people the salutation of a brother people, who are passing through hours of trials such as those which occur in the history of all peoples

"My country certainly will come forth strengthened from this painful crisis

"My government in the work of pacification has been extraordinary

"The economic vitality displayed in Mexico and the patriotism of her children are guarantees of this happy issue

PROTEST AGAINST MERGER OHIO TELEPHONE CONCERNS

COLUMBUS O. Oct 4.—In a petition filed today with the state utilities commission that body is asked to prevent the proposed merger of independent telephone companies with the Bell Telephone system. The petition which was filed by H. P. McGraw of Cleveland recites what the petitioner alleges to be a scheme to check all competition in the telephone business and give full control to the American District Telephone and Telegraph company.

The petition also alleges that H. P. Davidson the member of the Morgan banking firm who closed the [illegible] for the independent interests [illegible] stockholder in the American Telephone and Telegraph company. The commission is asked to investigate the telegraph companies in the state.

OFFER BIG REWARD FOR BOMB THROWERS

No Clew of Striking Miners Who Attacked Mining Camp Near Boulder

BOULDER, Oct. 4.—Five hundred dollars reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons who last night attacked the [illegible] mine at Lafayette was offered tonight by Sheriff Sanford D. Buster of Boulder county after a conversation with Deputy District Attorney Harold Martin, J. V. Hickman and G. M. Babcock representing the Rocky Mountain Fuel company.

Heavy rains this morning obliterated the tracks of the assailants who last night threw six bombs into the stockade and fired upon the panic-stricken nonunion miners within. Elbert Stewart, representative of the federal department of labor spent the afternoon among the camps.

Expect Fight at Louisville.

LOUISVILLE Colo., Oct 4. A clash between the forces of Sheriff Buster of Boulder county and the union strikers in this section is expected here tonight from declarations made by the two factions. Edward Doyle secretary-treasurer of the local union tonight addressed the miners, declaring that they had an "excellent right to picket in any peaceful manner and that they would keep the officials of the county busy arresting the pickets should the authorities object to their presence.

Sheriff Buster hearing of the defiance, immediately communicated with Governor Ammons in Denver who told him, according to Buster, to enforce the law against picketing.

"And I will instruct my deputies to arrest all strikers who go on picket duty tomorrow," continued the sheriff.

Secretary Doyle and other union officials declared subsequently that picketing would begin at daybreak tomorrow.

Quiet at Trinidad.

TRINIDAD Colo. Oct 4. The only new development in the strike situation here today was the declaration of Colonel Owenby of the Wootton mines in which he stated that he would close the mines on Monday and that they would remain closed indefinitely.

The Santa Fe railroad for this district has been using the entire output of the Wootton mines and it is said this will work a hardship on the company. It is understood the Santa Fe would not meet the increase in price asked by Owenby occasioned by the cost of production during the strike. The Wootton mine is the property of the late J. Pierpont Morgan.

BLOODY ENCOUNTER AT SANTA ROSALIA

Federals Rout Rebels After Fierce Battle; Many Noncombatants Dead

EL PASO, Tex., Oct. 4. "Meager details of the battle of Santa Rosalia, Chihuahua, in which Gen. Francisco Castro and his 4,700 feds [illegible] Villa and his 4,000 combined rebel forces, tend to show that the battle was a desperately fought and bloody one. General Salazar of the federal forces in a private telegram to friends at Juarez placed his estimate of the total number of dead at 700. The casualties were mostly on the rebel side. The loss of life among noncombatants in the town, resulting from the federal artillery fire, he stated, was enormous.

The principal building and most of the residences of the town were practically ruined by the cannonading. The Mission, one of the most costly buildings in Santa Rosalia, was badly damaged.

Federals at Juarez have no news of the direction taken by the rebels who were defeated in the fight. General Castro has not made his report of the engagement and aside from his message announcing the federal victory has not given the Juarez officials any information concerning the battle or the course taken by Villa's troops.

Rebels Victors at Sinaloa

DOUGLAS, Ariz. Oct 4. Constitutionalists and federals clashed in an all day battle at the city of Sinaloa today according to tonight's rebel advices which asserted the insurgents had the advantage although the fighting was still in progress. The number of troops engaged was said to number 2,000.

Two federal gunboats stationed in Guaymas harbor are said to have been ordered south with troops to reinforce the Sinaloa garrison.

In the last week the federals repaired the railroad between Empalme and Cruz de Piedra but the constitutionalists again put it out of commission by dynamiting the trackage.

American Consul Simpich arrived here today from Cumpas Sonora, having accomplished the release of James Bennett and his son who were held at Santiago on charges of having fomented political disorders.

SULZER WILL GIVE PRESS HIS STORY

Attorneys Won't Let Him Talk on Stand, Governor Will Issue Statement

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 4. Governor Sulzer tonight was said to have perfected a plan for getting his whole story before the public and at the same time escaping cross-examination on more than a part of it.

It was generally reported that if his attorneys continued to insist on his curtailing his sworn testimony as they are said to be doing, he will abide by their demands but will issue a statement to the newspapers containing that part of his narrative barred by his legal advisers. He will give out the statement on taking the witness stand it is reported.

One thing that he has told many callers and expounded in talking with his counsel is that the people are entitled to know everything that he does about the inner workings of political organizations in the state. But his attorneys have pointed out repeatedly that if he lets his anxiety for divulging information carry him too far, he will open the way for the severest cross-examination for counsel for the board of managers. So if the governor's counsellors have their way his sworn testimony will be much less sensational than the statement he now is said to be planning.

Board Wants Him to Talk.

The asserted eagerness of the attorneys for the board of managers to have the governor take the stand has made his attorneys somewhat chary about him "telling everything." Counsel for the board made no secret of their hopes that the testimony of Sulzer will open the way for introduction of much new evidence which they cannot introduce if he fails to testify.

The governor's eagerness to make public that which his statement is expected to contain has caused endless argument between him and his counsel. More than two weeks ago it is said he planned an expose of 3,500 words and was ready to give it to the newspapers when his counsel checked him.

UNDERWOOD TO MAKE RACE FOR SEAT IN THE SENATE

Democratic Leader in House Will Enter Alabama Primaries With Hobson and Clayton

WASHINGTON Oct 4.—Representative Oscar W. Underwood majority leader in the house, issued a formal statement late today announcing his candidacy for the United States senate from Alabama to succeed the late Joseph F. Johnston.

Mr. Underwood will enter the Democratic primaries in Alabama next spring with several other prominent Alabama Democrats including Representatives Henry D. Clayton and Richmond P. Hobson. It is understood also that Representative J. Thomas Heflin may be a candidate.

"With the enactment of the tariff bill," he said "I have completed the work in the house that has been my ambition to accomplish. Before retiring from public life I should like to have the honor of representing the state of Alabama in the United States senate."

The Democratic leaders in the senate are almost unanimous in the opinion that Governor O'Neal had no authority to make the appointment of Representative Clayton to the senate.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. Oct 4. Nathan L. Miller, an attorney and former state attorney, announced tonight his candidacy from the Ninth Alabama congressional district to succeed Oscar Underwood, who today announced his candidacy for United States senator.

GOVERNOR FELKER WANTS TO SEND THAW TO PENN.

Defense Submits Wires From 33 Executives Saying No Requests Ever Received for Extradition of Lunatic

CONCORD N. H. Oct 4.—Supplementary briefs opposing the extradition of Harry K. Thaw were filed with Governor Felker today. With the briefs were submitted telegrams from the governors of 33 states, all of whom said that they had no knowledge of a request ever having been made in their states for the extradition of a lunatic.

POUGHKEEPSIE N. Y. Oct 4. The grand jury that has been considering charges in connection with the escape of Harry Thaw from Matteawan asylum will be discharged Monday. The jury took a recess last week until October 7 and it is understood that no indictments were found against Thaw.

District Attorney Conger applied for the discharge of the jury and County Judge Hasbrouck promised to grant the request Monday. Conger said that after a conference last night with William T. Jerome, it has been decided that New York and Dutchess county hereafter would leave the Thaw case in the hands of the attorney general.

CONCORD N. H. Oct 4. Governor Felker was quoted as saying: "If any legal process can be found I am inclined to send Thaw to Pennsylvania. At any rate Thaw must leave New Hampshire. I favor sending Thaw to his own state rather than to New York."

GARDNER WILL RUN ON OWN PLATFORM

Massachusetts Congressman Breaks With Republican State Convention

BOSTON Mass Oct 4. Congressman Augustus P. Gardner who had before repudiated the state committee declared at the end of a sharp fight in the Republican state convention today that he would run on a platform of his own.

He would fulfill he said his promises to the forty thousand people who chose him at the primaries despite his obligation to the party as represented by the majority of the delegates present.

This new turn in the political situation followed the defeat in four successive attempts to amend the resolution so as to make the platform conform with his assertions on the stump.

When the fight was ended Mr. Gardner figuratively tore up his prepared speech of acceptance and submitted a three minute talk on Progressive Republicanism. He explained that as the four cardinal points in his address had been arranged his set speech was useless.

In his speech he said:

Principal Issues Omitted

"I am not unmindful of the duty I owe to the other candidates or the duty I owe to this convention but there are omitted from this platform four of the principal issues upon which I have been waging my campaign. Now I know that my duty to the other candidates conflicts with my duty to the 46,000, or whatever the number was, who nominated me. I went throughout the length and breadth of this country and I advocated the real restriction of immigration.

"I advocated a minimum wage for women. I advocated the use of the state credit to assist suburban homeseekers and relieve the congestion in the cities. I advocated the compulsory publicity of the facts in important labor disputes and to all these things I am committed, gentlemen, and I cannot consent to go before the people of this commonwealth and take one position before I am nominated, and another position after I am nominated.

"I was asked what would I do if this convention would not put these planks in the platform. I said I would make my own platform and run on that. These 46,000 people voted for me on the supposition that I meant what I said and I am not going to make any change.

"I regret very much that I must make a campaign before the people of the commonwealth asking them to support me in putting through certain measures."

ROOSEVELT STARTS ON LONG TRIP

Will Spend Six Months in Exploring Wilds of South American Nations

BARNES GIVEN PARTING SHOT

Statement of Progressive Merger With Democrats One of His Lies

NEW YORK, Oct. 4. Theodore Roosevelt and party bound for South America where the colonel will first lecture and then explore portions of the continent hitherto untrod by white man sailed on the steamship Vandyck shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Roosevelt held a reception in his suite before the boat got under way and replied to William Barnes Jr. chairman of the Republican state committee who issued a statement last night, saying that the Democrats and Progressives were in league to nominate Supreme Court Justice Seabury of this city for the court of appeals.

"That is one of Barnes' habitual lies," said Colonel Roosevelt. "There has been no agreement whatever with reference to Justice Seabury."

Commenting on the fact that he had omitted from his set speech delivered at a banquet in his honor last night, reference to the Panama canal zone and complimentary allusions to Brazil, Chile and Argentina Republic—the countries he is now to visit—Colonel Roosevelt explained he had done so merely because he thought other things more important. The trip to South America will occupy 17 days. The colonel will be joined there by his son, Kermit.

Mr. Roosevelt set out for the second time since he left the white house on a long journey. The sailing of the Vandyck was timed for 1 o'clock, but he and his party were astir early with final preparations for embarking, and many of the Progressive party leaders, who tendered a great farewell dinner at the top of a New York theater last night, arranged to be on hand to give him a good sendoff at the foot of Montague street, Brooklyn.

Not for Pleasure Alone.

Like his East African trip the South American journey is undertaken with the colonel proposing to make it one of many aspects aside from the pleasure of it.

His chief interest probably lies in the proposed penetration of the interior of Brazil with a party of fellow naturalists under the auspices of the American Museum of Natural History, but the earlier part of the six months which he will spend in South America will be devoted to addresses on American democracy which he has been invited to deliver before universities and other bodies. A trip into Patagonia to visit an out[illegible] mission and two crossings of the continent to Santiago de Chile and [illegible] to Buenos Ayres will be other features of his journey.

Those who prepared to embark with him today were Mrs. Roosevelt [illegible] Miss Margaret Roosevelt [illegible] make the round trip on the Vandyck; Anthony Fiala the Polar explorer who has charge of the expedition's equipment; G. K. Cherry and Leo E. Miller, naturalists of the American Museum of Natural History; Frank Harper, Colonel Roosevelt's secretary, and the Rev. Father John Augustine Zahm, provincial of the Order of the Holy Cross, a former field companion of the colonel.

The naturalists will start [illegible] interior shortly after their arrival [illegible] Brazil to be joined by the colonel [illegible] after he has finished his lectures which will be in December. It will probably be April before the party returns to civilization.

ISS. STATE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION IS PEACEFUL

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 4.—Without a discordant note on any topic, the Democratic state convention in Faneuil hall adopted the platform prepared by the resolutions committee and indorsed the state ticket headed by Lieutenant Governor David I. Walsh, which was nominated in the recent primaries.

PRESIDENT'S AUTOMOBILE STRIKES MESSENGER BOY

Lad, Slightly Injured, Immediately Taken to Hospital by Dr. Grayson, Wilson's Physician

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—While President Wilson was motoring through the southern section of the city early tonight, returning to the White house from a long ride through Maryland, his automobile struck Robert Crawford, a 15-year-old messenger boy, slightly bruising him about the knees.

Young Crawford was taken to a hospital at once by Dr. Grayson, the president's physician. An examination showed that no bones were broken, and that his injuries were not at all serious. The boy was riding a bicycle and trying to dodge stones being hurled at him by other youngsters, when suddenly he swerved directly in front of the president's car as it rounded a corner.

Crawford's personal solicitation was his wheel. "My wheel, my wheel, my wheel," he whimpered. "I'll have to carry the messages on foot now." The president promptly assured him that he would buy him a nice, new wheel, and directed Dr. Grayson to attend him constantly. The boy was taken in the secret service automobile to a hospital at which his mother is employed.

STRIKE FIRST SNAG

Best Tariff Since the War.

"The tariff law that went into force last night is the best tariff measure since the war, and all who have taken part in preparing and passing it are entitled to great credit. It is a better bill than we were able to pass 20 years ago and I rejoice that political conditions are such as to make the present law possible.

"The Wilson bill was compelled to carry a burden that will not fall on the present law and ought not to have fallen on that law. The Wilson law provided for an income tax which was held unconstitutional by a divided vote, the one majority having been secured by a change of opinion on the part of one judge between the two hearings of the case.

The nullification of the income tax portion of the Wilson law reduced the government's income until it would not meet the expenses of the government and this compelled an increase of indebtedness that threw on the bill an undeserved odium, which, along with the fact that the senate deprived the bill of some of its best faults, robbed the party of the benefit which would ordinarily come to it by a reduction in import duties. Then, too, the bill went into operation when financial conditions were bad, and many attributed to the law the defects for which it was not at all responsible.

Honors Go to All Who Took Part.

"I mentioned the law of 19 years ago because it is the only thing since the war with which we can compare the present law. Both economic as well as political conditions make it possible to do now what could not be done then.

"We have, too, at this time, a united party, which is a great asset. The president and the Democrats of the house and senate have been in full sympathy and have worked unitedly in the accomplishment of this important work. They share the honors together and the honors are sufficient to give distinction to all who have participated.

"October 3 marks an important epoch in the economic history of the generation and I am confident that it will not be long before the country will be able to celebrate a second triumphant president, congress, the party and the country when the new currency bill passes and receives the president's signature."

Regulations on Meat Imports.

Secretary Houston of the department of agriculture today promulgated the regulations governing the importation of meat and food products under the new tariff act.

The regulations require foreign certifications of both ante mortem and post mortem inspection where the animals are slaughtered and inspected at ports of entry by agents of the department of agriculture.

Very rigid regulations govern the imports, even after entry to the United States. They are placed under the meat inspection act and thus transmitted to federal inspecting establishments and governed by the same inspection system as surrounds meat transported in interstate commerce.

Generally, the regulations relate to only the meat or meat food products derived from cattle, sheep, swine and goats. Products from any other animals are governed by the regulations of the food and drugs act.

If it is found that the inspection of meats in any foreign country is not adequate and efficient, no meat or meat food products may be admitted to the United States from that country.

PRIEST-SLAYER AGAIN TO BE EXAMINED BY ALIENIST

If Found to Be Legally Insane, Schmidt Will Be Sent to Matteawan Hospital

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The authorities in charge of the prosecution of Hans Schmidt, the priest, who dismembered the body of Anna Aumuller and threw the pieces into the Hudson river, announced tonight the next step that will be taken in the case, following the formal verdict of the coroner's jury yesterday that Schmidt was responsible for the woman's death.

On Tuesday, A. R. Diefendorf, alienist, of New Haven, Conn., will examine Schmidt and make a report as to his sanity to the alienists who already have tested the priest's mind. On Wednesday the doctors will place their report in the hands of District Attorney Whitman. If Schmidt is eventually found legally insane, he will be taken to the Matteawan State hospital for the criminal insane. If the report finds the priest mentally sound, the case will go to the grand jury, probably Friday. Because of crowded court calendars, the trial, if one is held, will be deferred until November.

Effects of Bill Won't Be Felt for Some Time

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Those who expect to find American stores immediately cutting prices because the new tariff bill is now law will be disappointed in the opinion of Representative Underwood, one of its authors. It will be many months, Mr. Underwood believes, before the effect of the new tariff bill becomes apparent to the consumer.

"It is only competition caused by the new law that is going to reduce prices," said Mr. Underwood today. "It will be several months before the effect of the new tariff on commodities is felt and in many cases it may be a year. The effect on wool probably will not show until next spring, the full effect on sugar not for several years."

Mr. Underwood left Washington today for Atlantic City for a week's vacation. He is suffering from a bad cold.

Receipts of N. Y. Bonded Warehouses Are Doubled

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—After the bonded warehouses closed tonight it was announced that receipts for the day amounted to $920,000, a sum representing an approximate increase of 100 per cent over the average Saturday receipts on bonded warehouse withdrawals.

Bonded warehouses, jammed to capacity with imports roughly valued at $70,000,000, began today to disgorge themselves as importers released their products under the reduced rates of the new tariff law. The New York customs house opened an hour before the usual time and with 17 additional clerks pressed into service was [illegible] until midnight. Duties were assessed on the basis of the Payne-Aldrich law but refunds where necessary will be made when official copies of the new laws are received.

The condition confronting the importers today was the reverse of what it was four years ago when the Payne-Aldrich law went into effect. Then instead of holding goods in bonds and releasing them at reduced rates, steamships raced to port with commodities on which higher duties were to be charged. Several [illegible] ocean greyhounds came in just in the nick of time.

How to Destroy the Dandruff Germ

BY A SPECIALIST.

That the dandruff germ is responsible for nearly all the diseases to which the scalp is heir as well as for baldness and premature gray hair is a well known fact, but when we realize that it is also indirectly responsible for many of the worst cases of catarrh and consumption, we appreciate the importance of any agent that will destroy its power. We are therefore particularly pleased to give herewith the prescription which an eminent scientist states he has found, after repeated tests, to completely destroy the dandruff germ in from one to three applications. It will also almost immediately stop falling hair and it has in numerous cases produced a new hair growth after years of baldness. This prescription can be made up at home or any druggist will put it up for you: 6 ounces Bay Rum, 2 ounces Lavona de Composee, one half drachm Menthol Crystals. Mix thoroughly and after standing half an hour it is ready for use. Apply night and morning, rubbing into the scalp with the finger tips. If you wish it perfumed add half a teaspoonful of To-Kalon Perfume, which unites perfectly with the other ingredients. While this preparation is not a dye it is unequaled for restoring gray hair to its original color.

HOT WEATHER BAD FOR BLONDES; THEY THRIVE IN CLOUDY LANDS

From the Chicago Tribune.

Brunettes can live and thrive when the sun shines hot, but blondes must live in climates where there is less sunlight.

Researches conducted recently by J. [illegible], a scientist, have developed some interesting facts in regard to fair haired and dark haired people.

It is only in dark climates, where the sun is often hidden by clouds and where the light is never intense, that blondes thrive. In the light, hot climates blondes are not at home. They are found but they are exceptional. Cleopatra was a blonde and there is evidence that there were red haired Egyptians. There is a mummy in the British museum with a lock of red hair, but plainly it did not survive, and the Roman women, with regret be it said, bleached their tresses or borrowed from their northern captives.

[illegible] advantage in the north, [illegible] radiates less [illegible] the dark, but when the blondes migrate to a lighter country they suffer and ultimately perish. Blonde races have been flowing southward constantly in Europe, but they do not survive.

In the Philippines blondes suffer more than brunettes. They break down and [illegible] of neurasthenia in much larger numbers.

[illegible] the percentage of [illegible] The light [illegible] comparison [illegible]

An [illegible] that even in our American cities the brunettes are gaining. That might be explained by the fact that our cities are made up largely from foreigners who belonged originally to the brunette type.

Interesting observations have been made among our soldiers. The cloudiest part of our country is the northwest. There it is found that not only do blondes maintain their own better, but the soldiers as a whole show the lowest sick and death rate.

The cloudy, moist climate also has its effect on nerves. It is a well established fact that mental disorders and suicide are more frequent in the lighter months. The dark, gloomy weather has a soothing effect [illegible] such people.

The blonde nations from northern Europe who have settled our western plains are another illustration to the point. They have come from a dark climate and have been plunged into the intense heat and light of that western country. The degeneration of these blonde families through nervous instability is a fact that must be faced and adjusted.

PRESIDENT'S AUTOMOBILE STRIKES MESSENGER BOY

Lad, Slightly Injured, Immediately Taken to Hospital by Dr. Grayson, Wilson's Physician

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—While President Wilson was motoring through the southern section of the city early tonight, returning to the White house from a long ride through Maryland, his automobile struck Robert Crawford, a 15-year-old messenger boy, slightly bruising him about the knees.

Young Crawford was taken to a hospital at once by Dr. Grayson, the president's physician. An examination showed that no bones were broken, and that his injuries were not at all serious. The boy was riding a bicycle and trying to dodge stones being hurled at him by other youngsters, when suddenly he swerved directly in front of the president's car as it rounded a corner.

Crawford's personal solicitation was his wheel. "My wheel, my wheel, my wheel," he whimpered. "I'll have to carry the [illegible] on foot now." The president promptly assured him that he would buy him a nice, new wheel, and directed Dr. Grayson to attend him constantly. The boy was taken in the secret service automobile to a hospital at which his mother is employed.

STRIKE FIRST SNAG

[illegible] the early passage of the currency bill. Mr. Bryan issued this statement:

Best Tariff Since the War.

"The tariff law that went into force last night is the best tariff measure since the war, and all who have taken part in preparing and passing it are entitled to great credit. It is a better bill than we were able to pass 20 years ago and I rejoice that political conditions are such as to make the present law possible.

"The Wilson bill was compelled to carry a burden that will not fall on the present law and ought not to have fallen on that law. The Wilson law provided for an income tax which was held unconstitutional by a divided vote, the one majority having been secured by a change of opinion on the part of one judge between the two hearings of the case.

The nullification of the income tax portion of the Wilson law reduced the government's income until it would not meet the expenses of the government and this compelled an increase of indebtedness that threw on the bill an undeserved odium, which, along with the fact that the senate deprived the bill of some of its best faults, robbed the party of the benefit which would ordinarily come to it by a reduction in import duties. Then, too, the bill went into operation when financial conditions were bad, and many attributed to the law the defects for which it was not at all responsible.

Honors Go to All Who Took Part.

"I mentioned the law of 19 years ago because it is the only thing since the war with which we can compare the present law. Both economic as well as political conditions make it possible to do now what could not be done then.

"We have, too, at this time, a united party, which is a great asset. The president and the Democrats of the house and senate have been in full sympathy and have worked unitedly in the accomplishment of this important work. They share the honors together and the honors are sufficient to give distinction to all who have participated.

"October 3 marks an important epoch in the economic history of the generation and I am confident that it will not be long before the country will be able to celebrate a second triumphant president, congress, the party and the country when the new currency bill passes and receives the president's signature."

Regulations on Meat Imports.

Secretary Houston of the department of agriculture today promulgated the regulations governing the importation of meat and food products under the new tariff act.

The regulations require foreign certifications of both ante mortem and post mortem inspection where the animals are slaughtered and inspected at ports of entry by agents of the department of agriculture.

Very rigid regulations govern the imports, even after entry to the United States. They are placed under the meat inspection act and thus transmitted to federal inspecting establishments and governed by the same inspection system as surrounds meat transported in interstate commerce.

Generally, the regulations relate to only the meat or meat food products derived from cattle, sheep, swine and goats. Products from any other animals are governed by the regulations of the food and drugs act.

If it is found that the inspection of meats in any foreign country is not adequate and efficient, no meat or meat food products may be admitted to the United States from that country.

PRIEST-SLAYER AGAIN TO BE EXAMINED BY ALIENIST

If Found to Be Legally Insane, Schmidt Will Be Sent to Matteawan Hospital

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The authorities in charge of the prosecution of Hans Schmidt, the priest, who dismembered the body of Anna Aumuller and threw the pieces into the Hudson river, announced tonight the next step that will be taken in the case, following the formal verdict of the coroner's jury yesterday that Schmidt was responsible for the woman's death.

On Tuesday A. R. Diefendorf, alienist of New Haven, Conn., will examine Schmidt and make a report as to his sanity to the alienists who already have tested the priest's mind. On Wednesday the doctors will place their report in the hands of District Attorney Whitman. If Schmidt is eventually found legally insane, he will be taken to the Matteawan State hospital for the criminal insane. If the report finds the priest mentally sound, the case will go to the grand jury, probably Friday. Because of crowded court calendars, the trial, if one is held, will be deferred until November.

Effects of Bill Won't Be Felt for Some Time

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Those who expect to find American stores immediately cutting prices because the new tariff bill is now law will be disappointed in the opinion of Representative Underwood, one of its authors. It will be many months, Mr. Underwood believes, before the effect of the new tariff bill becomes apparent to the consumer.

"It is only competition caused by the new law that is going to reduce prices," said Mr. Underwood today. "It will be several months before the effect of the new tariff on commodities is felt and in many cases it may be a year. The effect on wool probably will not show until next spring, the full effect on sugar not for several years."

Mr. Underwood left Washington today for Atlantic City for a week's vacation. He is suffering from a bad cold.

Receipts of N. Y. Bonded Warehouses Are Doubled

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—After the bonded warehouses closed tonight it was announced that receipts for the day amounted to $920,000, a sum representing an approximate increase of 100 per cent over the average Saturday receipts on bonded warehouse withdrawals.

Bonded warehouses jammed to capacity with imports roughly valued at $70,000,000 began today to disgorge themselves as importers released their products under the reduced rates of the new tariff law. The New York customs house opened an hour before the usual time and with 15 additional clerks pressed into service was to remain open till midnight. Duties were assessed on the basis of the Payne-Aldrich law, but refunds where necessary will be made when official copies of the new law are received.

The conditions confronting the importers today is the reverse of what it was four years ago when the Payne-Aldrich law became effective. Then instead of holding goods in bonds and releasing them at reduced rates, steamships raced to port with commodities on which higher duty was to be charged. Several last consignments came in just in the nick of time.

How to Destroy the Dandruff Germ

BY A SPECIALIST

That the dandruff germ is responsible for nearly all the diseases to which the scalp is heir, as well as for baldness and premature gray hair, is a well known fact, but when we realize that it is also indirectly responsible for many of the worst cases of catarrh and consumption, we appreciate the importance of any agent that will destroy its power. We are therefore particularly pleased to give herewith the prescription which an eminent scientist states he has found, after repeated tests, to completely destroy the dandruff germ in from one to three applications. It will also almost immediately stop falling hair and it has in numerous cases produced a new hair growth after years of baldness. This prescription can be made up at home or any druggist will put it up for you: 6 ounces Bay Rum, 2 ounces Lavona de Composee, one half drachm Menthol Crystals. Mix thoroughly and after standing half an hour it is ready for use. Apply night and morning, rubbing into the scalp with the finger tips. If you wish it perfumed add half a teaspoonful of To Kalon Perfume, which unites perfectly with the other ingredients. While this preparation is not a dye it is unequalled for restoring gray hair to its original color. Adv.

HOT WEATHER BAD FOR BLONDES: THEY THRIVE IN CLOUDY LANDS

From the Chicago Tribune

Brunettes can live and thrive when the sun shines hot, but blondes must live in climates where there is less sunlight.

Researches conducted recently by J. Jamieson, a scientist, have developed some interesting facts in regard to fair haired and dark haired people.

It is only in dark climates where the sun is often hidden by clouds and where the light is never intense that blondes thrive. In the light, hot climates blondes are not at home. They are found, but they are exceptional. Cleopatra was a blonde and there is evidence that there were red haired Egyptians. There is a mummy in the British museum with a lock of red hair, but plainly it did not survive, and the Roman women, with regret be it said, bleached their tresses or borrowed from their northern captives.

Blondness is an advantage in the south, the white surface radiates less heat than the dark, but when the blondes migrate to a lighter country they suffer and ultimately perish. Blonde races have been flowing southward constantly in Europe, but they do not survive.

In the Philippines blondes suffer more than brunettes. They break down and become victims of neurasthenia in much larger numbers.

In European cities the percentage of brunettes is greater than in the surrounding country districts. The light and glare of the city in comparison with the shaded streets and the foliage [illegible] make the former unfavorable to the blonde.

Anthropologists tell us that even in our American cities the brunettes are gaining. That might be explained by the fact that our cities are made up largely from foreigners who belonged originally to the brunette type.

Interesting observations have been made among our soldiers. The cloudiest part of our country is the northwest. There it is found that not only do blondes maintain their own better, but the soldiers as a whole show the lowest sick and death rate.

The cloudy, moist climate also has its effect on nerves. It is a well established fact that mental disorders and suicide are more frequent in the lighter months. The dark, gloomy weather has a soothing influence on all such maladies.

The blonde natives from northern Europe who have settled our western plains are another illustration to the point. They have come from a dark climate and have been plunged into the intense heat and light of that western country. The degeneration of these blonde families through nervous instability is a fact that must be faced and adjusted.

THE HUB

APPAREL OF THE BETTER SORT FOR MEN AND BOYS

The Nurse and the Community

Her Responsibilities to Prevent and Promote Public Health.

LILLIAN D. WALD

Head Resident, Nurses Settlement, New York.
(Exclusive Service The Survey Press Bureau)

During the last decade there has been wide propaganda upon public health measures, and perhaps at no time before in the history of the world have there been so many "campaigns" for instruction concerning health and hygiene and the prevention of illness. To the trained nurse has properly fallen the responsibility of making practical application in the homes of the people of the results of scientific thought and research.

How best is it possible to expand for the community the nursing care that has been cherished for centuries by women everywhere as their duty to their own sick, and which trained nurses since the days of Florence Nightingale have been taught to give in institutions, on the battlefield and in the homes of the rich? This was what nurses from the west and the east, from the north and the south sought when they met recently in convention at Atlantic City. Three national organizations of trained nurses came together to discuss and to gain inspiration from each other on matters affecting their profession and its place in the community. The conference was distinctive and, it may be said, epoch making because the National Organization for Public Health Nursing met for the first time. This organization created a year ago but in actual existence not more than seven months, demonstrated throughout its own meetings and the meetings held jointly with the other national organizations an eagerness for guidance and a longing for the word from pioneer nurses who had established themselves in the service of the people. In all its conferences there was not a word or implication of desire to promote nurses' interests for themselves. Although many represented visiting nurses associations or city departments of health and education, almost all paid their own expenses out of salaries that are meager and the whole spirit was one of service.

A Wonderful Attendance.

A thousand nurses were in attendance. They were eager to promote methods by which people of small means might secure nursing when ill, on the most dignified basis possible. They were gratified that insurance for nursing had made such great advance. They reminded each other of the fact that the greater proportion of people who are sick are sick at home, and urged that the technique for visiting nursing and the standards [illegible], which had been promoted by a few, should be adopted by all. Visiting nursing service in many instances had been established in a casual way. They wanted it recognized as a community necessity.

Other forms of public health work were represented and reference was made to almost every phase of public health and the promotion of right living. Nurses were at the convention who are engaged in prenatal work, before life itself is brought forth; others are at work for the reduction of infant mortality, for instruction in sex hygiene with its touching appeal to repair the omissions of the past and finally to help potential parents to do better for themselves and the oncoming generations.

The Scope of Discussions.

Nurses came to the convention to testify to their responsibility to help in the prevention of premature employment of children, and in the protection of men and women who work, that dangers may be removed from them and that they may not risk health or life while earning their daily bread. Nurses who are engaged in the inspection of school children and in follow up work intrusted with the mission of completing the treatment that patients receive in hospitals, were there. Nurses discussed their interest in mental hygiene measures, in the abuses of the midwifery practice, in blindness that may be prevented, in school feeding, in the segregation of defectives, in the facts of physical deterrence that bring children before the courts, in general movements for welfare in the homes, shops, factories and schools.

Society needs the new nurse, needs her inspired, needs her well trained, with such training as was not conceived of before excepting perhaps in the master mind of Florence Nightingale. The significant fact about this convention was that the nurses felt that their call is not only to the care of the sick but to seek out the deep-lying and basic causes of illness and misery, and to use their training so to protect and prevent that there may be in the future less sickness to nurse and to cure.

Brewers Favor Giving Women Political Power

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 4.—The United States Brewers association today adjourned its fifty-third annual convention to meet next year in New Orleans. The organization declared itself in favor of granting more political power to women and praised the work done by them in wiping out disorderly houses, which it was asserted was a detriment to the brewery interests. The association also accepted the vigilant committee's report which placed the organization on record as favoring the movement for civil improvements. Concentration of the organization to meet the attacks of prohibitionists was declared to be one of the policies of the officers elected today. Edward A. Schmidt of Philadelphia was elected president.

JUDGE HUMPHRIES IS HOLDING 38 PEOPLE

Socialists Who Refused to Pay Fines in Contempt Cases Still Held in Jail

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 4.—Thirty-eight persons—six women and 32 men—are still in the county jail for refusal to pay fines imposed upon them for contempt of court by Superior Judge John E. Humphries. One man grew weary in his cell today and paid the $100 fine assessed against him.

The women in jail are Mrs. Minnie E. Parkes, who told Judge Humphries that the "resolutions of defiance" she signed were not half strong enough to express her contempt for him; Mrs. Mary Jarvis, who exclaimed in court that in England judges had less power than in America; Mrs. Ella Price, Mrs. L. Freed, Mrs. Catherine Stiltan and Mrs. Hannah Anderson.

At tomorrow night's meeting called by the Free Speech Defense league a resolution will be presented asking Governor Lister to pardon the persons committed by Judge Humphries.

When Judge Humphries' court opened this morning there was only one contempt case on the docket, that against Mrs. A. J. Allen who had spent almost two whole days in the court room awaiting trial and then had gone outside of the room shortly before her case was called yesterday. The judge ordered her bail bond forfeited. It is expected that she will be assessed the costs and set free. Except for notices of appeal to the supreme court Mrs. Allen's case will conclude the contempt of court proceedings in Judge Humphries chamber. Some of the defendants who went to jail rather than pay $2.10 costs were released last night and the others who were taxed nominal costs and refused to pay will be out tonight. Those who were assessed $5 and costs will be kept in jail over Sunday. It is intended by the Free Speech Defense league to appeal all the cases where heavy fines or terms of imprisonment were imposed.

The Free Speech Defense league has called a meeting in a large hall for Sunday night to discuss Judge Humphries. More than 500 signatures to the resolutions of defiance have been ignored by the judge. As the street speakers in whose behalf the resolutions were drawn have been discharged, circulation of the petition has been discontinued.

Louis Wadum, a Scandinavian who signed the resolutions, testified yesterday that he was not a citizen. He was ordered locked up in the county jail with a view of deportation by United States authorities to whom his offense was reported. There is no charge against him except contempt of court.

No More Ragging for Cadets at N. M. M. I.

ROSWELL, N. M., Oct. 4.—Officials of the New Mexico Military Institute have announced that no more will the tango, bunny hug, turkey trot or other such animal or any kind of rag, dancing be allowed at any of their social club dances. Not only cadets, but citizens using any of these dances will be expelled from the floors. Heretofore these dances have played a great part in the school life.

DRAW GRAND JURY VENIRE TO PROBE DYNAMITE CASES

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 4.—The United States grand jury venire for the November term of court was drawn today on the order of Federal Judge A. B. Anderson.

The grand jury will investigate the latest phases of the dynamite conspiracy as brought out by the confession of George F. Davis, alias George O'Donnell, who was arrested Thursday in New York. The names of the grand jurors were not made public.

Girl's Confession Causes Dismissal of Oelrichs

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Herman Oelrichs, millionaire law student at Columbia university, was discharged in police court today when arraigned on the charge of stabbing Lucile Singleton, daughter of a Texas mine owner. The case against young Oelrichs was dismissed at the request of Assistant District Attorney James O'Malley, to whom Miss Singleton confessed yesterday that there was no basis for her previous declaration that Oelrichs had stabbed her.

Miss Singleton was not in court today, as she is still confined to her room as the result of injuries sustained in the accident several nights ago to the automobile in which she was riding with Oelrichs. Her signed statement asserting that her injuries were caused by being thrown against the windshield was read to the court.

"It must be comforting to the community to know that we have a district attorney who will save from further humiliation and protect the interests of an innocent man accused of crime," said Magistrate Krotel in discharging Oelrichs.

"Here is another proof of the necessity of careful scrutiny of human motives and particularly cases of this character. It is terrible to contemplate that a respectable person should be made to suffer like this at the hands of another who may be for the moment under the influence of intoxicants. There is little or no satisfaction in an expression of regret by the accuser, save that it spells vindication."

left tonight for Pueblo, where they will address a mass meeting tomorrow.

County attorneys today are prosecuting an investigation into the explosion that last night blew up the powder house and partially wrecked the store of the Primrose Coal company at the Primrose mine, 35 miles north of here.

The destruction of property is believed to have been the work of striking miners, but no clew as to the identity of those who set off the powder and dynamite has been found. A number of arrests may follow.

Loss is $1,700.

The loss and damage to property is estimated today at $1,700. Operators throughout southern Colorado are concerned by the explosion last night, fearing attempts to destroy property will be made elsewhere.

The officials of the United Mine Workers disclaim knowledge of the affairs.

Officials of the Victor American Fuel company and the Colorado Fuel & Iron company today made emphatic statement that they had no intention of signing contracts with the United Mine Workers or recognizing the union.

The statements say that more men are coming back to work.

DENVER, Oct. 4.—Tom Mann, the English labor leader, arrived in Denver today on his tour of the United States. He will deliver an address tonight. He denied positively that his visit had any connection with the Colorado miners' strike.

PALMER IMPLICATED IN THE FUNK CASE

Former Representative Took Part in Defamation Case, Says Attorney

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—Maclay Hoyne, state's attorney for Cook county, today admitted that the man he is searching for as the companion of John C. Henning is [illegible] Palmer.

Both disappeared from Chicago when the alleged conspiracy to defame the character of Clarence S. Funk collapsed. Palmer is said to be Democratic committeeman of Fulton county, in which is situated his home town, Canton.

Attaches of the state's attorney's office went to Canton today to interview Palmer, who is a former Democratic state representative and one of the men who voted for Lorimer for United States senator.

Palmer said early today that he had been in Canton continuously except for a few months when he, together with Joseph Lowe and Clarence Hicks of Canton, was in Indianapolis.

"I voted for Lorimer while a state representative and I suppose that's why I am drawn into the case," said Palmer. "I met Mr. Funk slightly when he was manager at the Harvester company. But I had no reason to make any effort to defame him or to aid in any plot which had that as an object."

CANTON, Ill., Oct. 4.—Charles Z. Palmer, former state representative, left Canton on a westbound train at 9 o'clock this morning. His destination is not known and efforts to get in communication with him had failed.

MINER ENTOMBED

and there were plenty of willing hands to carry him, but he would have none of it. His whole attitude from the time of rescue until he disappeared beneath the blankets in his own bed at home was one of semistolidity. Toshesky was glad to get out of his prison, but he acted as if it were an old story to him and nothing over which to make a great fuss. Once before he had been entombed for nearly 48 hours.

Jokes With Rescuers.

"Hello," he said to everybody who spoke to him. His one reply to questions as to how he felt was "bully."

Just before the tunnel was enlarged enough to permit the passage of his body the rescuers were chatting with him.

One asked what he was doing. "I get ready to move," he said. "This is no boarding house, no good bed, no spring, no nice boarding house Missus."

Toshesky wanted to walk home. He was persuaded to ride in an ambulance the first mile after which he was taken to an automobile and driven home.

Inhabitants of the town turned out to see Toshesky as he was whirled along the streets. His wife and five children waited for him at the door of his home. He got out of the car and walked up the steps to his family, embracing them all in turn and kissing the baby repeatedly.

Describing his experience Toshesky said that when he was closed in, he thought he would be crushed to death as several thousand wagon loads of coal piled towards him from the bottom of the breast. In fact two breasts of coal gave way. Toshesky said through an interpreter:

"My dinner bucket and cot at the bottom of the breast were lost as the coal rushed. I had all my mine tools with me and my lamp was burning. I had a half quart of oil in a can by my side, and, sizing up the situation, I found I was entombed in a space seven by 15 feet. I had been entombed twice before, and rescuers soon got me out. I felt that they would again take care of me. From Friday until Tuesday I was without anything to eat or drink, and on the last day my oil gave out. I was in darkness. It was a dismal period from then until the rescuers drove the bore hole through. After I got several drinks of eggnog, I felt like a new man."

SMALLPOX IS FOUND IN PIEDRAS NEGRAS

EAGLE PASS, Tex., Oct. 4.—An international quarantine probably will be declared by American authorities here within the next 24 hours, owing to spread of smallpox in Piedras Negras, Mex., across the river from this city. The count kept at the international showed yesterday that 10,000 persons have crossed into Eagle Pass within the last week. The greater number of these are penniless refugees who abandoned their homes and sought safety on the United States side of the boundary with the approach of the Mexican federal army. Many are without shelter or food, and the task of caring for them here is proving a serious problem.

M'Adoo Working on Plan for Enforcement of Law

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—With the Democratic tariff law consummated, activity today was transferred from the halls of congress to the treasury department, where Secretary McAdoo and Assistant Secretary Hamlin began the development of a plan of enforcement. Treasury officials declared that the new act will be the lowest tariff law in the history of the country with the possible exception of the Walker tariff of 1846 and its successor, the tariff of 1857. With President Wilson and the congressional framers of the law, they declared it was "a competitive tariff" and freely expressed the conviction that business would be invigorated and sustained through its operations. Officials were equally confident that it would afford the government ample revenue.

Bonded Merchandise Withdrawn.

It is roughly estimated that $100,383,000 worth of merchandise, held in bond, soon will be withdrawn and payment of duty made under the new law. Compared with the Payne-Aldrich act, this will mean a loss of $16,[illegible] to the government, [illegible] maintained that there [illegible] would have no perceptible effect on the business of the country.

General regulations will be issued within a few days for the tariff as a whole and these will be followed by specific rules regarding each of the intricate schedules.

The most difficult administrative feature of the new act is the income tax provision. This [illegible] will require the [illegible] to draft a workable plan that will insure the government receiving its lawful dues from every taxable citizen.

William H. Osborn, commissioner of internal revenues, today began the task of formulating as simple a plan as possible.

While no official announcement has been made it is believed L. F. Speer of Bangor, Pa., at present chief of the corporation tax division of the treasury department will be appointed deputy commissioner of internal revenue in immediate charge of the income tax.

House Asked to Consider No Important Matters

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Democratic Leader Underwood told the house that he hoped an agreement would be reached among leaders on both sides to take up no more important matters of legislation after its meeting next Tuesday for three or four weeks. He said that yesterday it would be impossible to get the senate to agree to a 30-day recess, but hoped that most of the members would be able to absent themselves for several weeks, leaving only a few here to adjourn three days at a time.

Speaker Clark asked members that a quorum appear on Tuesday when the urgent deficiency appropriation bill probably will come back from its visit to the senate.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

TAKE SALTS AT FIRST SIGN OF BLADDER IRRITATION OR BACKACHE

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water beverage and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time. Adv.

ISABELLA REPORT SHOWS MINE NOW FLOURISHING

Indebtedness Cut Down, Waste Carried From Properties, and Better Grade of Ore Taken Out

Stockholders of the Isabella Mines company yesterday received reports of the company's operations for the last six months. Ira Harris, president, sums up features of the report as follows:

"First, the very material reduction that has been made in the heritage of indebtedness both secured and unsecured left us by a former management.

"Second, the material saving that has been made in the reduction of salaries of officers of the company, the same amounting to $3,500 per annum, being a saving of approximately 50 per cent over what was formerly paid.

"Third, the great amount of development work that has been done by lessees without the entailment of any material expense upon the company apart from the lease work on which the company has rendered assistance.

"Fourth, the many improvements that have been made, consisting of the erection of one ore house, the recovery of a large amount of air which will enable the company to put in additional machines without added cost, building of pipe line and the installation of a large air receiver which materially increases the capacity of the compressor, and the installation of a washer system which will add to the income and also make a saving of at least 65 cents a ton in wagon freight.

"Fifth, also by the better system that has been adopted by the general manager, the company has been enabled to double its lessees, with an expectation that even this number will be increased in the near future, from which it is hoped an additional amount of ore will be produced."

Ore Grade Increased.

The report of General Manager John T. Hawkins is more extended and shows the physical condition of the mine, the amount of development work and improvements during the last six months. He points out that by careful superintendence of the lessees the grade of ore has gradually increased and that there is reason to believe that a steady increase in values and quantity will be maintained. Included in the improvements are a washer system, new ore house, additional switches to the ore bins, equipment to store a large amount of air pressure under ground and the addition of 1,200 feet of pipe line to the surface plant and an air receiver at the [illegible] pipe shaft.

During the last few months the company has participated in the development work among the different lessees which resulted in opening up new ground and new ore bodies. The work consisted of drifts and crosscuts to the extent of 1,973 feet, raises 1,425 feet and winzes 40 feet, which does not include a large amount of development work done by lessees. The company has hoisted from the mine an enormous amount of waste which has gone into the account of development and miscellaneous mine expense and which was left by the former management. Other improvements will be made as soon as financial conditions permit. About 30 sets of lessees are working the property and this number will be increased.

Net Total $26,772.

The report of J. R. Young, secretary and treasurer, shows the receipts from ore sales to have been $181,692, disbursements account of ore sales, $159,403, and net receipts from ore sales, $22,288. Receipts from other sources were $4,483, making the total 26,772.

Disbursements other than ore sales and including mine development, etc., amounted to $13,152; interest, $1,239; salaries of officials, $1,634, and the Colorado Springs office, including legal, traveling, telephone and telegraph expenses, $2,256, a total of $18,283. Earnings in excess of expenses for the six months were $8,490. The treasury stock on hand is 477,299 shares.

Tax Schedules Delayed; May Affect Levies Here

The work of extending tax schedules already made has been stopped by the various assessors. There is little likelihood that the equalization of assessed valuations in the various counties in Colorado will be completed by October 20. It is practically certain that when the board of equalization makes its report most of the assessors will be compelled to secure extra help in order to get the revised valuations out as soon as possible. Whether this delay will affect the legality of the levies is a question yet to be determined.

SPRINGS PICTURES IN LESLIE'S WEEKLY, OCT. 2

CITY BONDS POPULAR

From indications, the local sale of Colorado Springs refunding bonds will reach $100,000 within the next few days. Many inquiries have been received and the sale has exceeded the expectations of those interested. The council felt that there would be a demand sufficient to warrant giving local people the first chance at the bonds.

ROBINS WITH BELLS ON JOIN NATURE FAKERS

Birds Like Tinkling Sound, but Find It Difficult to Surprise Worms and Bugs

Robins with bells on are the latest addition to the nature-faking department of birdland. Four redbreasts with tiny tinkling bells hanging from their necks are living in the trees and hopping on the lawns in the neighborhood of Prospect and High streets.

The musical jinglers are of the same variety as those frequently tied around the necks of kittens and are attached to the birds with baby ribbon.

The robins did not join the ranks of the bell ringers from choice alone but were initiated into the profession when quite young by B. M. Weinsheim. The affair all took place last May. Weinshiem then lived at 819 East High street and one morning discovered that four baby robins not old enough to fly had fallen on his lawn from their nest in a tree. Some way or other the idea of attaching bells to the young birds entered his mind and he acted accordingly. Now those little ones have grown to birdhood and are the belles of their set as it were.

Residents in the neighborhood frequented by the birds often hear the ringing of the bells, and while they rarely ever mistake it for the approach of the milkman, yet they are often fooled into answering the doorbell or telephone.

The bells are of different tone and as there are four of the birds they may be expected to organize a quartet at any time. If they do so they probably will give their farewell migratory concert in the near future, at which time they may render such touching ballads as "When the Swallows Homeward Fly" or "Birdie's Bunglow Baby."

There is only one real objection to the bells so far as the robins are concerned—the worms of the neighborhood have grown wise to the proposition and know it is time to run when they hear the bells coming.

GIRL SUES STREET CAR COMPANY FOR DAMAGES

Goldie Merrill yesterday filed suit in the district court against the Colorado Springs & Interurban Railway company for $5,000 damages, because of injuries sustained when she was struck by a street car at El Paso and Kiowa streets. The plaintiff alleges that July 31, 1913, she was struck by one of the company's cars which was going west on the Institute street line. She claims that the motorman on the car failed to give her sufficient warning of the car's approach.

ACCUSED OF FORGERY, SUSPECT HAS ESCAPED

An unidentified man is being sought as one who, representing himself to be an employe of the Labor News, is said to have secured checks from various business men and cashed them, using the name of C. J. Haase, proprietor of the Labor News.

It is claimed that the man solicited advertising for the State Federation of Labor year book, saying that it was being prepared by the Labor News and exhibited what appeared to be credentials from Haase. The police were notified of the matter several days ago.

RUSSELL PRODUCE CO. FORMED BY LOCAL MEN

Articles of incorporation of the Russell Produce company, incorporated at $20,000, have been filed with the secretary of state. J. R. Friedline is president, A. H. Schisler, vice president and manager and J. J. Eubank, treasurer. The Russell Produce company was originally formed April 1 when J. J. Eubank took over the local branch of the Russell-Gates Mercantile company in exchange for his stock in the company and entered into copartnership with A. H. Schisler. Recently, Mr. Friedeline, formerly connected with the Friedline & Taggart commission firm, acquired an interest in the company and incorporation was decided upon.

PREPARING BRIEFS IN HYDRO-ELECTRIC SUIT

Mayor McKesson who was city attorney at the time suit was filed by the city against the Hydro-Electric company to secure a most favored consumer's rate, is preparing a reply to a motion made by the defendant company to the supreme court for rehearing of the case. The decision of the court last spring was in favor of the city, giving it the right to demand power from the Hydro-Electric company at 585 cents per kilowat hour, which was then made to its most favored consumer.

POLICE JUDGE TO ASSIST MEN WHO SEEK WORK

Police Judge Manning is working on a plan whereby the vagrants that are haled into his court may be given work instead of being committed or "floated" out of town under suspended sentences. By means of arrangements that have been made with Superintendent Daley of the state employment bureau, men of the mendicant type may now be given employment. Three men from various parts of the country and machinists by trade were given work yesterday by means of the newly formed plan.

DR. WILLIAM FOWLER DIES AFTER LINGERING ILLNESS

Dr. William Fowler died yesterday morning after a prolonged illness. Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock from The Hallett & Baker undertaking rooms, after which the body will be taken to Denver for cremation and the ashes sent to Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, for interment.

Dr. Fowler practiced dentistry in this city for more than 30 years, practically all the time in one building. He was born in London, [illegible] years ago, but came to Boston when about 16 years of age, where he studied his profession. He came to Colorado Springs in 1883 and for a time was associated with Dr. Edwards, a pioneer dentist. Some 25 years ago he was married to Miss Marietta Ryerson of Nova Scotia, who survives him.

During his early life here Dr. Fowler was active in the social affairs of the town. He was prominent in the order of Odd Fellows, having reached the office of noble grand, and was captain of the canton of Patriarchs Militant. He was a charter member of the Elks lodge and formerly quite active in its work. Dr. Fowler was one of the most prominent members of the Jackson Hose company in the days when the volunteer firemen were a power in the city's affairs.

Dr. Fowler was of a quiet and modest disposition, avoiding publicity, but was recognized by members of his own profession as a skilled operator. He was a member of the national, state and county dental associations and had held offices in all of them. The governor of the state appointed him a member of the first board of state dental examiners a quarter of century ago.

Doctor Fowler spent many years working upon various mechanical inventions, and perfected one that is of considerable merit according to experienced fire fighters. It is an electrical hose signaling device, by which the nozzlemen may signal with bells to the men at the engine or water plugs.

LOCAL GROCERY UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

The Golden Rule grocery at 128 South Nevada avenue has just been purchased by Messrs. Tracey and Stewart from T. Stillings. They are live business men, and from recent reports its business is on the increase under the new management. The Golden Rule is a store that makes it a point to live up to its name in every respect, and the same excellent service will be maintained as heretofore.

COUNTY FAIR SHOWS THAT FARMING IS NOW PROMINENT IN INDUSTRIES OF THE REGION

Dry Farming Crops Best in Years; Merchants Interested in New Exhibits

The El Paso county fair at Calhan closed yesterday with a record breaking crowd in attendance. The fair was the most successful of its kind ever held in this county. The exhibits were above the average and the racing program was exceptionally good. All those who went from this city during the week came back with good reports of the exhibit and say that much praise is due those who had the events in charge.

The agricultural exhibits were an important part of the fair as the produce displayed showed that Colorado, and especially El Paso county, is capable of raising crops that in the past have been spoken of as not suited to an altitude as high as that of this county. Nearly all the products on exhibition were raised either on the plain section in the eastern part of the county or around the Divide country, and in all cases the dry farming method was used.

The corn exhibit was one of the principal ones and showed corn raised on the plain section by the dry farming method that averaged 15 to 20 bushels per acre, which goes to show that Colorado can raise corn in this altitude if the proper methods are used. In fact the Colorado corn exhibit was much better than some of the famous eastern corn states could have shown this year.

The potatoes on exhibition were also good and showed that proper cultivation, right methods of soil preparation, proper treatment of seed and judicious selection and rotation of crops will bring the spud crop back to where it once was in this county.

All of the root and forage exhibits were good. One of the most interesting of the forage exhibits was a sample of Milo maize which was grown and ripened at an altitude of 6,400 feet which again went to prove that the altitude of El Paso county is not too high to raise good forage.

Feterita was a new product on exhibition for the first time, although it has been experimented with for the last three years at the State Agricultural college. The sample shown, however, was raised by farmers in this county.

From the Divide section there was an exhibit of small grains including wheat, oats, barley and emmer. This last is a new product springing from a cross between wheat and barley. It is a black grain.

Prof. P. K Blinn of Fort Collins gave a talk on alfalfa during the fair and introduced his Grimm alfalfa which he has been experimenting with for the last three years. It comes from Wisconsin and has proved itself well adapted to this altitude and soil.

W H. Lauck, county agriculturist, had a special exhibit of his own which was highly interesting. It consisted of a series of illustrations dealing with methods of soil treatment and silo building. He used 25 large pictures to show the different stages of silo building of the various types. He also had an exhibit of poultry.

CALEDONIAN SOCIETY TO MEET TUESDAY NIGHT

Reminders of the old country in the form of bits of heather gathered from the bleak moors of Scotland will be given to each member of the Caledonian society when it holds its annual meeting at the Alta Vista hotel Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. The Weekly Scotsman of Edinburgh is the donor of the gift to the local society.

The annual election of officers and the transaction of other business will take place at this meeting. Music on the bagpipe will be furnished by John Morrison as a part of the usual informal program.

According to the annual report of the society just prepared by Secretary Peter D Campbell, the membership is now 88, but few old members having left the city during the year and 10 new ones having been added. During the year six meetings were held, and many needy Scotchmen were given substantial aid in sickness and distress. The assets of the society are $291 41.

Doctor De Luxe not up to Expectations

By H. H. F.

A meager audience at the Opera house last night saw a frayed and shop worn re-vamp of the burlesque order entitled "Dr De Luxe." There are some clever people in this production, a considerable amount of comedy of the type which is broad enough to appeal to the most blase gallery god, and a hodgepodge of songs, including "The Tango Tea," and "For Every Boy Who's Lonely, There's a Girl Who's Lonely Too." Just why such an affair as this should be dignified as musical comedy, and offered at top-notch prices only the Semetic gentlemen who constitute that inner circle known as the threatrical trust can tell.

Otto Hauerbach and Karl Hoschna, the composers and authors of "Three Twins," and "Madame Sherry" are the guilty perpetrators of last evening's offense. A shabby chorus in shabby gowns and unspeakably mussy tights add little to the enjoyment with a not particularly musical set of voices. Oscar Figman, whose drolleries as the ambassador in "The Merry Widow" have endeared him to so many showgoers is refreshingly funny, has a number of good lines and provides many a laugh. Genevieve Victoria sings several poor songs well and dances with considerable degree of grace.

Monday and Tuesday nights the Opera house is to offer a brand-new musical play "The Candy Shop," which has "made good" sensationally as near home as Denver. This is gratifying as something is needed to remove the recollection of "Dr De Luxe" from the mind of the defenseless playgoer.

Wilbur's

Coats, Suits and Millinery

On the street, in the playhouses, at balls, receptions and other society functions in Colorado Springs, it is a fair guess that the most stunning costumes, suits and wraps are worn by patrons of the Wilbur lines. And Wilbur apparel is readily distinguished from the ordinary kind. It carries character and individuality of style—points so often lacking in even the best of other garments and is always absolutely perfect in fit, finish and workmanship. As to price we claim and a look will prove that our values at every price are quite a little better than can be secured elsewhere. The range is almost unlimited, as we show.

Tailored Suits	$15.00 to $175.00
Costumes	$25.00 to $250.00
Dresses	$15.00 to $185.00
Street Coats	$15.00 to $75.00
Evening Wraps	$25.00 to $175.00

Wilbur Smart Hats

When hundreds of Colorado Springs best-dressed women buy numbers of Wilbur Hats season after season, Wilbur Hats must be just about right. The immense collection of foreign and New York models makes choosing a pleasure, and no matter what the choice may be the patron is sure that the style is correct and the quality unquestionable. Come in this week and try on some of the late arrivals! Wilbur Hats priced

$3 00 TO $15.00 EACH

Quality Furs

A good fur wears for years and may be remodeled at intervals at small expense, while inferior qualities are worn faded or otherwise ready to discard in a season or two. Come in and look through a really first-class stock of furs. The present prices are at least 25% less than furs will cost at any future season, as the supply is growing smaller and the demand greater from day to day and our next purchases will surely be made at a decided advance in price. At present we quote as follows:

Furs and Sets	$10.00 to $[illegible]
Coats up to	$675.00

Junior Dept.

This stock includes everything of a dependable quality for girls of all ages. Suits, Dresses, Coats, etc., at the most reasonable prices. Mothers avoid all of the worry and part of the expense of making things by patronizing this department.

Deaths and Funerals

The funeral of Miss Laura Wills Edinger, who died yesterday, will be held this afternoon at 2 o clock from the home of her uncle Judge I. W Cunningham, 105 Monroe avenue, Colorado City. It will be private. Interment will be in Evergreen cemetery. Miss Edinger was well known in this city, as she had been bookkeeper at the Union Printers home for the last 10 years.

DON'T SCOLD AN IRRITABLE CHILD

If little tongue is coated, surely give "California Syrup of Figs"

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals California Syrup of Figs for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing." Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Counterfeits are being sold here. Don't be fooled. Adv.

DENVER MAY NOT PAY POLICE AND FIREMEN

Civil Service Commission May Refuse to Approve Payrolls, Claiming Several Men Ineligible

DENVER, Oct 4.—No action yet has been taken by Commissioner of Safety Nisbet on the list of eligibles approved by the civil service commission for appointment on the police force and to the fire department. "They sent down a certified list," says Mr. Nisbet, "and that's as far as the matter has gone."

The civil service commission, according to Secretary Cochran, has not decided just what action will be taken when the police payroll comes up to the commission for approval.

"In case the commission will not approve the payrolls for the police force, carrying provisional policemen who are not and never have been on the eligible list, will it cut out the ineligible names and approve the rest, or will it refuse to approve the entire payroll?" the secretary was asked. He said the members had not decided.

If the commission disapproves the rolls insofar only as the men on it not certified by the commission are concerned but 15 or 20 men will be affected. But if it will not approve any of the payrolls for the police and fire departments nearly 600 men will be without money, and many may be forced to hunt up loan sharks for money to meet their household expenses.

Cochran thinks the matter will be straightened out before the first of November. Commissioner Nisbet is noncommittal.

FORESTRY DEPARTMENT ESTABLISHED IN CHINA

New Bureau in Eastern Republic Fashioned After the One in Operation in United States

WASHINGTON, Oct 4.—China, which recently followed the example of the United States by turning republic, is taking lessons from this country in other respects. D. Z. T. "In the matter of forest conservation," he said, "the United States profited much by looking upon the disasters which were the result of Chinese neglect of forestry. Our losses were your gain. Now we wish to profit by the improved methods which you have discovered and applied."

POLITICIANS REPAIRING FENCES AND PRIMING GUNS FOR GREAT BATTLE EXPECTED IN 1914

Senate Must Fight Before People: Has Bare Majority of Six Members at Present

By JONATHAN WINFIELD

WASHINGTON, Oct 4.—A year in advance of the big struggle, preparations are now in progress for the 1914 campaign which is a[illegible] to be a unique and bitter contest for the control of the legislative branch of the government. Republicans and Democrats have named their congressional campaign committees. Bull Moosers are strengthening their lines here and with their encouraging words given by the Colonel before his departure for Brazil and there is a general feeling of old time political fighting in the air.

The 1914 congressional campaign will be bitter because the Democrats for the first time in more than sixteen years are in complete control of the government at large so far as [illegible]. The struggle will be unique because the first wholesale effect of the direct election law for the United States senators will be felt at the polls next summer.

Senate Now With People

In off years heretofore members of congress have had to think mainly of controlling the house of representatives as the state legislatures elected the senators and, in a majority of instances it was a foregone conclusion that this legislature would elect a Republican and another legislature a Democrat.

Now the dignified members of the upper branch of congress have to go before the people just as do the house members and the campaign committees must wage a double-jointed fight.

Thirty-two senators are to be named in the 1914 campaign the terms of this number expiring on March 3, 1915.

The death of Senator Johnston of Alabama reduced the Democratic majority in the senate to 6 with one or two Democrats declining to stand hitched to all party questions. The Republicans number 44, the Democrats 50, the Progressives one and there is no vacancy.

From the Democratic viewpoint these figures are entirely too close for party comfort, while they are encouraging to the Republicans who may gain control of the upper branch of congress by winning less than half a dozen seats from the Democrats, switching the majority to the other side.

The Democratic majority in the house, of course, is topheavy and there is little danger of its being overturned but the party doesn't want to lose ground because of the effect it might have in the quadrennial election of 1916 when a president is to be elected.

House Always in Hot Water.

Members of the house come up for election every two years and are always in hot water and envious of the senators with nothing to worry about except six-year terms. This condition keeps the house in a political uproar all the time and a campaign is virtually in progress month in and month out. The 1914 campaign will be the same old contest from the house's point of view but the "direct elections" law and the possibility of seeing the senate go Republican is one that complicates the situation and worries the Democratic campaign managers.

Both parties are planning to use their heaviest artillery in the 1914 fight. The administration is expected to take a hand in the Democratic struggle and all the old Republican war horses will be put into harness again under the present plans.

The Republican congressional campaign committee is headed by Congressman Frank P. Woods of Iowa who is to have the aid of trusted lieutenants—members of the senate and house—who are given the title of vice chairman. The Democratic war hosts will be led by Congressman Frank E. Doremus of Michigan who likewise will have an able corps of lieutenants and will have the further advantage of conference with an executive committee named by the national Democratic committee.

This executive committee of the national committee is presumed to look after the sinews of war. It has been rather difficult heretofore for the Democratic congressional committee to get all the funds it needs and a few alert gentlemen from the national committee may help out appreciably along this line.

Repairing Fences

In anticipation for the coming struggle members of the senate and house are said to be repairing their fences. The debates are replete with home consumption speeches which may be enclosed in frank envelopes to boost the party in whose behalf they were delivered [illegible] the opposition. The [illegible] committees are getting [illegible] campaign material and several dozens of letters will be [illegible] with literature to the intelligent vote.

During the next 12 months millions of letters and pamphlets will be sent through the mail to every congressional district in the United States. The pamphlets will come along in the spring and summer and then late next year the general elections will be held and the issue will be clear cut between parties.

The Democrats are not so uneasy about the house, nothing but a landslide could overturn the majority there. But that slim senate majority is bothersome and there is also the additional danger that the house majority may be materially reduced. If this were to occur it would give the opposition fresh courage for 1916 and might cause the voters to think the Democracy was on the downgrade again.

There are now in the house 256 Democrats with four vacancies, there are 127 Republicans and 18 who style themselves Progressives, Progressive Republicans and Independents. The Democratic majority is consequently so large that it is cumbersome, but no party leader wants to see it reduced and the campaign committee and individual candidates will fight just as hard next year as though only a dozen votes separated the parties.

G. O. P. managers have little hope of overturning the Democratic majority but they are going to wage a mighty battle to cut it down considerably and if the tariff and currency bills do not pan out for the best the Republicans really believe they have a "look in."

Neither side is losing any time in getting down to business and the campaign is already being fought on paper.

SOME DON'TS

For Stomach and Liver Sufferers

Don't take medicine for your Stomach ailments morning, noon and night as usually such medicines only give temporary relief and simply digest the food that happens to be in the Stomach.

Don't permit a surgical operation. There is always serious danger in operations and in many cases of Stomach, Liver and Intestinal Ailments the knife can be avoided if the right remedy is taken in time.

Don't go around with a foul smelling breath caused by a disordered Stomach and Liver to the discomfort of those you come in contact with.

If you are a Stomach Sufferer don't think you cannot be helped; probably worse cases than yours have been restored by Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy.

Most stomach ailments are mainly caused by a catarrhal condition. Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy not only removes the catarrhal mucus, but allays the chronic inflammation and assists in rendering the entire alimentary and intestinal tract antiseptic, and this is the secret of its marvelous success.

Don't suffer constant pain and agony and allow your stomach ailments to physically undermine your health. No matter how severe your case may be or how long you have suffered, one dose of Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy should convince you that you can be restored to health again. Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy has been taken and is highly recommended by Members of Congress, Justice of the Supreme Court, Educators, Lawyers, Merchants, Bankers, Doctors, Druggists, Nurses, Manufacturers, Priests, Ministers, Farmers and people in all walks of life.

The boys' cabinet laid all plans Wednesday night for the big whirlwind membership campaign which starts October 15.

All of the boys will be given a feed Tuesday night, October 14, and at this time the whole membership week's program will be laid out.

Great interest is being taken by every boy and the next two weeks will prove the ability of everybody to land a new member and get a button, which says "I got one" for his reward.

The campaign will be in the nature of a record-breaking airship race and points will be given for a new member, pennants, pillows, games, gymnasium contests, endurance hikes, etc.

The winning team will be given a supper, at which consolation speeches will be made in respect to the losing team.

Hikes to the cabin and a real balloon race will be the features of the campaign.

The Magnetic Girl

How She Compels Others to Obey Her Will

100,000 Copies of Remarkable Book describing peculiar Psychic Powers to be distributed Post Free to readers of "The Colorado Springs Gazette"

The wonderful power of Personal Influence, Magnetism, Fascination, Mind Control, call it what you will, can surely be acquired by everyone, no matter how unattractive or unsuccessful, says Mr Elmer Ellsworth Knowles, author of the new book entitled "The Key to the Development of the Inner Forces." The book lays bare many astounding facts concerning the practices of the Eastern Yogis and tells a simple though effective system of controlling the thoughts and acts of others, how one may win the love and friendship of those who might otherwise remain indifferent, how to quickly and accurately judge the character and disposition of an individual, how to cure the most obstinate diseases and habits without drugs or medicines; even the complex subject of projecting thoughts (telepathy) is explained. Miss Josephine Davis, the popular stage favorite whose portrait appears above, declares that Prof Knowles' book opens the door to success, health and happiness to every mortal no matter what his or her position in life. She believes that Prof Knowles has discovered principles which, if universally adopted, will revolutionise the mental status of the human race.

The book which is being distributed broadcast free of charge is full of photographic reproductions showing how these unseen forces are being used all over the world and how thousands upon thousands have developed powers which they little dreamed they possessed. The free distribution of the 100,000 copies is being conducted by a large London institution and a copy will be sent post free to anyone interested. No money need be sent, but those who wish to do so may enclose 5 cents (stamps of your own country) to cover postage, etc. All requests for the free book should be addressed to National Institute of Sciences, Free Distribution Dept. 572 C, No. 258, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S.E., England. Simply say you would like a copy of "The Key to the Development of the Inner Forces" and mention The Colorado Springs Gazette.

Do not enclose coins in your letter. Postage to England two cents. Adv.

COLORADO FORESTS A GREAT RESOURCE

Held Wonderful Possibilities for Industrial Development, Says Graves

DENVER, Oct 4—Paying a tribute to the grandeur of Southern Colorado's scenery and possibilities for industrial development, Chief Forester Henry S Graves outlines the result of his recent trip through Colorado forests as follows

"My trip to southern Colorado has brought me into personal touch with a number of national forests which I have not before had an opportunity to visit, such as the Leadville, San Isabel, Cochetopa, Uncompahgre, and Battlement. The purpose of the trip is both to acquaint myself with local conditions and to see the progress of the work which is being carried on

"No one travelling in the mountains of Colorado can fail to be impressed by the grandeur of the scenery. As on this trip we were in the snow most of the time, the beauties of the mountains were intensified many fold I can only emphasize the more what I said in my address before the Denver chamber of commerce about the necessity to open up these areas by roads to make the mountain wonders available both to the citizens of the state and to visitors from other states and other countries.

Must Have Fire Protection.

"The trip emphasized to me further the absolute necessity to protect the mountain forests from fire Everywhere one sees the immense destruction by old fires which occurred before the national forests were established The loss to the people by the destruction of timber alone through these fires runs into the millions of dollars and the effect of this on the industrial development is difficult to estimate. Aside from the timber problem it is absolutely necessary to have cover on the steep slopes of the mountains to conserve the water resources It is unnecessary to point out the importance to the people of Colorado of maintaining every safeguard which affects the supply and steady flow of water. Every encouragement should be given to the development of reservoirs for irrigation and power. Such reservoirs aid in stream regulation, aside from their importance in building up industry. But the forests exert also a powerful influence in water conservation, and their destruction is followed by direct injury.

Developing Resources

"One of the problems I have been considering in the present visit to Colorado is the problem of development of resources in the forests. [illegible] purpose of the forests is to [illegible] their resources render the greatest [illegible] service in the permanent [illegible] of the country. The aim is [illegible] their resources available to as many people as possible. They are not reservations locked up from use, nor are they areas to be handed over a few people for special privileges, to the exclusion of all others For the development of the forests people are needed to use the ripe timber and the various other resources We want permanent settlers to occupy such agricultural land as may occur, to have the utilization of the ripe timber result in building up permanent lumber businesses here and there in the forest, to contribute to other industrial enterprises, and to have the use of the mountain forage maintain in a stable condition the stock industry. This is at the basis of the work of classifying the agricultural lands in the forests. This work is now being pushed in several of the forests to the extent of the funds available. I visited the land classification party in the Uncompahgre national forest and had occasion to observe agricultural areas that had been applied for and taken in the Cochetopa forest."

THE NEW IDEA IN PUBLIC PLAYGROUNDS

Grant M Hyde in the Popular Mechanics Magazine

The playground movement in America is one by which it is sought to place the natural activities of children of both sexes under the direct supervision of competent instructors that they may attain high standards of physical and moral development A great many interesting experiments have been made in connection with the playgrounds and location and equipment vary widely

One playground in New York city occupies a site that is valued at $1,800,000 but this is unusual Vacant lots in congested districts, areas useless for commercial purposes and bits of land in out-of-the-way places are rapidly being made into playgrounds Philadelphia has laid out tiny playgrounds under railroad viaducts, Reading Pa., has a playground on the concrete roof of a water reservoir. Springfield O is utilizing the grounds around a city standpipe Amusement piers have been built in some cities, and Boston has floating bathhouses for the small boys

'Certain standard forms of play and apparatus are pretty generally present in all playgrounds Swings seesaws, slides giant strides and gymnastic apparatus are always the first things that are provided Swimming pools are quite as common. For the smaller children most playgrounds have sand piles and wading pools The love of competitive play has brought facilities for group games baseball tennis, basketball volleyball and in some places football and lacrosse These are for the older children, but war games "hikes hare and hounds folk dances and other games, invented sometimes by the attendants and sometimes by the children themselves are being developed for the little tots In some cities the competitive games of the larger boys have grown into organized athletics with playground teams and interplayground games and track meets All furnish play under direction

'Directed play naturally leads to instruction through play In many cities such as St John N B there is regular kindergarten work for the little children. In others, sewing, embroidery, basket and raffia work are provided for the older girls along with manual training and gardening for the older boys. Springfield, O., has this. New Orleans has regular gardens laid out in the playgrounds and prizes are given for the best crops raised by the children. In Glen Ridge, N. J., and other cities, manual training and cooking are moved from the schoolhouse to the summer playground. Columbus, O., has this. New Orleans has regular gardens laid out in the playgrounds and prizes are given for the best crops raised by the children. In Glen Ridge, N. J., and other cities, manual training and cooking are moved from the schoolhouse to the summer playground. Columbus, O and Holyoke, Mass, do the same thing by teaching the older boys to clean the playground and erect and repair the apparatus. At Youngstown, Pa., the boys dug their own swimming pool on the playground and made water wheels

"Many novelties in methods and apparatus have been brought out in various parts of the country. East Liverpool, O., has found that if hammocks are provided the smaller children can be persuaded to sleep in them during the afternoon, benefiting both themselves and the playground's peace Croquet and quoits have appeared among the other games at Springfield, O. Kite day is a regular feature at Akron, O The boys on one of the playgrounds at Buffalo revived the old pastime of stilt walking and the city had a hundred pairs of stilts made for them Competitive athletics for the boys brings very complete organizations in many cities At Jacksonville Fla regular athletic meets and an annual circus are held

UNDERWOOD MAY DROP REINS IN THE HOUSE SOON

GREAT WHIPHAND LEADER READY TO QUIT

Who Will Succeed Him Is Big Question Among Big Politicians

By SIDNEY ESPEY.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4—The report that Representative Oscar Underwood of Alabama may quit the leadership of the house to become a senator from his state has set the gossips on Capitol hill agog with speculation as to who will be his successor. Of course, if Mr. Underwood decided to seek a toga he would not leave the house until the end of the present congress and the job of selecting a new leader would be left to the members of the next congress. If the Democrats should be in the minority, it is not believed that Speaker Champ Clark would, if still a member of the house, assume the leadership which was his in the days when the Democrats were not the controlling force in that body.

It is quite likely that the speaker would occupy much the same [illegible] in that event as Uncle Joe Cannon did in the last congress. Uncle Joe [illegible] aside and Representative James R. Mann was in charge of the minority, as he is in the present congress.

[illegible]

The [illegible], it is admitted, with [illegible] of [illegible] to be a most unwieldy body and the [illegible] of leadership is more onerous than ever before. Underwood is the possessor of a good physique and steady nerves, but even he is [illegible] that some day, if he [illegible] too long, may not be able to stand it. Politics in the [illegible] is of the rough and tumble [illegible]. [illegible] are [illegible] in a hotly [illegible] part of a [illegible] that requires [illegible] of [illegible].

[illegible] is of the type of leader who [illegible] "I." His [illegible] to do [illegible] "You [illegible] do it." The [illegible] achieved much [illegible]. Some of the members of the senate declare he is possessed of [illegible] power. By many persons Underwood is believed to be one of the [illegible] leaders the house ever had. He is declared to have all the powers of a "boss" without [illegible] the resentment either of the members of his own or other parties, or furnishing campaign material to the other side.

Nevertheless many observers maintain that his leadership is just as effective in some respects as was that of Uncle Joe Cannon and his organization.

Who Will Replace Him?

Considering the magnitude of the job which Underwood holds and the remarkable ability he possesses, the [illegible] where could be found, either in congress or out of it, a man to fill his shoes.

[illegible] Democratic members of the ways and means committee, by virtue of the fact that that committee is considered the [illegible] committee of the house, are in [illegible] active rank eligible to [illegible] Underwood. Ordinarily, the ranking member of a committee is made chairman. The chairmanship of the ways and means committee carries with it the leadership but this does not mean that the ranking member of the committee necessarily will be leader. On the contrary, it is the custom of the dominant party in the house to select for leader the man best qualified for that position. Of course, he undoubtedly would be selected from the membership of the committee.

Kitchin-Rainey-Hull.

The other Democratic members of the committee in their relative order of membership are as follows: Claude Kitchin of North Carolina, Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, Lincoln Dixon of Indiana, Cordell Hull of Tennessee, Winfield S. Hammond of Minnesota, Andrew J. Peters of Massachusetts, A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania, Timothy T. Ansberry of Ohio, John N. Garner of Texas, James W. Collier of Mississippi, Augustus O. Stanley of Kentucky and Clement C. Dickinson of Missouri.

Kitchin is a debater of great force, a keen stump speaker and a stickler for regularity on party questions. His friends are interested in the possibilities of promition that lie before him.

Rainey also is a debater of much eloquence. He is the author of several investigation propositions and takes great interest in conservation and industrial questions. How hot a contest he would make for the leadership, even his friends do not profess to know. He is a man of striking appearance physically, being about six feet tall and of massive proportions. He has bushy hair and has been described by one of his colleagues as the lion of the committee.

Cordell Hull essentially is a student of political questions who frankly tells his friends that he is more interested in studying great questions than being made the possessor of great power. He is the author of the income tax bill, yet when the senate changed the bill, and wrote in some important particulars, he did not display any wounded feeling on account of pride of authorship. Hull never loses his temper and talks as he thinks, in methodical, logical fashion, no matter how impassioned and heated the proceedings about him may be.

Hammond and Peters also are of the scholar type. A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania, on account of his friendship for President Wilson and the fact that the president has consulted him, figures in all the speculation over a future leader. Palmer is a resourceful politician and ambitious. He probably would accept the leadership if it be offered him. He is rated as one of the most forceful men on the committee and often is in consultation with Underwood.

AT ONCE! CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN AND COLD-IN-HEAD OR CATARNH VANISHES

Instantly Relieves Swollen, Inflamed Nose, Head, Throat—You Breathe Freely—Dull Headache Goes Nasty Discharge Stops

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear. Adv.

POOR OLD WOMAN, AGED 99, BEING CARED FOR BY HER DAUGHTER, JUST OVER 80

LONDON, Oct. 4.—A pathetic story of an old woman in humble circumstances who had forgotten her name is being told here by Mr. E. Hoddinott, an inspector under the Housing and Town Planning act.

The inspector was visiting a number of cottages near Swindon, when he called at one for the first time.

"What is your name?" he inquired of the feeble old dame who came forward to reply to his questions.

"Mary," was the brief reply.

"Yes, but what is your other name, madame?" he persisted.

"Lord, I don't know," she ejaculated, "but I can find it in the Bible."

After much diligent search the family Bible was produced and the surname discovered on the flyleaf with the date of birth. "Mary" was 99 years old.

"I've lived in this house for 70 years, sir," she pleaded, "and I've brought up 10 children, and I do hope you are not going to turn me out?"

"Good gracious, no!" exclaimed the inspector; "but you must have some-one to look after you."

"My eldest daughter does, sir," was the reply, and the inspector was amazed to see another old lady step forward, who stated simply that she was "just over 80 years old."

Mysteries of Rheumatism Practically Solved

Action in the Tissues of a Remarkable Antidote

S. S. S. is a Regular Wizard in Driving Out Rheumatism.

Rheumatism is often the effect of some other blood affliction that has left its impress in the joints, muscles and mucous coverings of the body. It works into the tissue cells, those tiny, little bodies in which nutrition goes on. And it is here that a most remarkable medicine known as S. S. S. does its most active and most effective work.

Its action is marvelous. Bed-ridden rheumatics get on their feet as if by magic. That cold, clammy sensation that made you hug a red hot stove is gone in a twinkling. That excruciating pain that made a feather lay as heavy as a ton of coal on the skin is gone. You get up and dance with glee.

Your rheumatism is gone absolutely! It is an actual logical fact, that Swift's Sure Specific flushes your blood, gives your entire blood circulation a [illegible] thorough bath. COLORADO FORESTS A GREAT RESOURCE

Hold Wonderful Possibilities for Industrial Development, Says Graves

DENVER, Oct. 4. Paying a tribute to the grandeur of Southern Colorado scenery and possibilities for industrial development, Chief Forester Henry S. Graves outlines the result of his recent trip through Colorado forests as follows:

"My trip to southern Colorado has brought me into personal touch with a number of national forests which I have not before had an opportunity to visit, such as the Leadville, San Isabel, Cochetopa, Uncompahgre and Battlement. The purpose of the trip is both to acquaint myself with local conditions and to see the progress of the work which is being carried on.

"No one travelling in the mountains of Colorado can fail to be impressed by the grandeur of the scenery. As on this trip we were in the snow most of the time the beauties of the mountains were intensified many fold. I can only emphasize the more what I said in my address before the Denver chamber of commerce about the necessity to open up these areas by roads to make the mountain wonders available both to the citizens of the state and to visitors from other states and other countries.

Must Have Fire Protection.

"The trip emphasized to me further the absolute necessity to protect the mountain forests from fire. Everywhere one sees the immense destruction by old fires which occurred before the national forests were established. The loss to the people by the destruction of timber alone through these fires runs into the millions of dollars and the effect of this on the industrial development is difficult to estimate. Aside from the timber problem it is absolutely necessary to have cover on the steep slopes of the mountains to conserve the water resources. It is unnecessary to point out the importance to the people of Colorado of maintaining every safeguard which affects the supply and steady flow of water. Every encouragement should be given to the development of reservoirs for irrigation and power. Such reservoirs aid in stream regulation, aside from their importance in building up industry. But the forests exert also a powerful influence in water conservation, and their destruction is followed by direct injury.

Developing Resources.

"One of the problems I have been considering in the present visit to Colorado is the progress of development of resources in the forests. The purpose of the forests is to make their resources render the greatest possible service in the permanent upbuilding of the country. The aim is to make their resources available to as many people as possible. They are not reservations locked up from use nor are they areas to be handed over a few people for special privileges to the exclusion of all others. For the development of the forests people are needed to use the ripe timber and the various other resources. We want permanent settlers to occupy such agricultural land as may occur, to have the utilization of the ripe timber result in building up permanent lumber businesses here and there in the forest to contribute to other industrial enterprises and to have the use of the mountain forage maintain in a stable condition the stock industry. This is at the basis of the work of classifying the agricultural lands in the forests. This work is now being pushed in several of the forests to the extent of the funds available. I visited the land classification party in the Uncompahgre national forest and had occasion to observe agricultural areas that had been applied for and taken in the Cochetopa forest."

THE NEW IDEA IN PUBLIC PLAYGROUNDS

Grant M. Hyde in the Popular Mechanics Magazine.

The playground movement in America is one by which it is sought to place the natural activities of children of both sexes under the direct supervision of competent instructors that they may attain high standards of physical and moral development. A great many interesting experiments have been made in connection with the playgrounds, and location and equipment vary widely.

One playground in New York city occupies a site that is valued at $1,500,000, but this is unusual. Vacant lots in congested districts, areas useless for commercial purposes and bits of land in out-of-the-way places are rapidly being made into playgrounds. Philadelphia has laid out tiny playgrounds under railroad viaducts. Reading, Pa., has a playground on the concrete roof of a water reservoir. Springfield, O., is utilizing the grounds around a city standpipe. Amusement piers have been built in some cities and Boston has floating bathhouses for the small boys.

Certain standard forms of play and apparatus are pretty generally present in all playgrounds. Swings, seesaws, slides, giant strides and gymnastic apparatus are always the first things that are provided. Swimming pools are quite as common. For the smaller children most playgrounds have sand piles and wading pools. The love of competitive play has brought facilities for group games, baseball, tennis, basketball, volleyball and in some places football and lacrosse. These are for the older children, but war games, hikes, hare and hounds, folk dances and other games invented sometimes by the attendants and sometimes by the children themselves are being developed for the little tots. In some cities the competitive games of the larger boys have grown into organized athletics with playground teams and interplayground games and track meets. All furnish play under direction.

Directed play naturally leads to instruction through play. In many cities, such as St. John, N. B., the regular kindergarten work for little children. In others, sewing, embroidery, basket and raffia work are provided for the older girls, along with manual training and gardening for the older boys. Springfield, O., has this. New Orleans has regular gardens laid out in the playgrounds and prizes are given for the best crops raised by the children. In Glen Ridge, N. J., and other cities, manual training and cooking are moved from the schoolhouse to the summer playground. Columbus, O., has this. New Orleans has regular gardens laid out in the playgrounds and prizes are given for the best crops raised by the children. In Glen Ridge, N. J., and other cities manual training and cooking are moved from the schoolhouse to the summer playground. Columbus, O., and Holyoke, Mass., do the same thing by teaching the older boys to clean the playground and erect and repair the apparatus. At Youngstown, Pa., the boys dug their own swimming pool on the playground and made water wheels.

Many novelties in methods and apparatus have been brought out in various parts of the country. East Liverpool, O., has found that if hammocks are provided the smaller children can be persuaded to sleep in them during the afternoon, benefiting both themselves and the playground's peace. Croquet and quoits have appeared among the other games at Springfield, O. Kite day is a regular feature at Akron, O. The boys on one of the playgrounds at Buffalo revived the old pastime of stilt walking and the city had a hundred pairs of stilts made for them. Competitive athletics for the boys brings very complete organizations in many cities. At Jacksonville, Fla., regular athletic meets and an annual circus are held.

FOREST NOTES

The railroads of the United States use about 100,000,000 wooden ties each year.

Cadillac, Mich., is reported to be the foremost city in the country for varied and close utilization of forest products.

More than one fourth of all the sheep in the eleven states nearest the Pacific coast are grazed on the national forests.

GREAT WHIPHAND LEADER READY TO QUIT

By SIDNEY ESPEY.

WASHINGTON, Oct 4—The report that Representative Oscar Underwood of Alabama may quit the leadership of the house to become a senator from his state has set the gossips on Capitol hill agog with speculation as to who will be his successor. Of course, if Mr Underwood decided to seek a toga he would not leave the house until the end of the present congress and the job of selecting a new leader would be left to the members of the next congress. If the Democrats should be in the minority it is not believed that Speaker Champ Clark would, if still a member of the house, assume the leadership which was his in the days when the Democrats were not the controlling force in that body.

It is quite likely that the speaker would occupy much the same position in that event as Uncle Joe Cannon did in the last congress. Uncle Joe stepped aside and Representative James R. Mann was in charge of the minority, as he is in the present congress.

House Too Unwieldy.

The house, it is admitted, with its membership of 435 is getting to be a most unwieldy body and the task of leadership is more onerous than ever before. Underwood is the possessor of a good physique, and steady nerves, but even he is fearful that some day, if he undergoes the strain too long may not be able to stand it. Politics in the house is of the rough and tumble sort. When scores of astute men are jockeying for advantage in a hotly contested battle, it requires much patience and endurance on the part of a leader to succeed in anything that resembles a definite program of procedure.

Underwood is of the type of leader who never uses the word "I." His favorite expression when announcing what is to be done, is either "We will pass the bill," or "The Democrats of the house will pass the bill." When inviting malcontents to join him in perfecting a piece of legislation to which [illegible] he [illegible] asks: "Don't you think we ought to do so and so?" Never is he guilty of "You must do it." The emphasis nevertheless is not just on the persons appealed to, for Underwood has achieved much in his quiet way. Some new members of the house declare he is possessed of hypnotic powers. By many persons Underwood is believed to be one of the greatest leaders the house ever had. He is declared to possess all the powers of a "boss" without exciting the resentment either of the members of his own or other parties, or furnishing campaign material to the other side.

Nevertheless many observers maintain that his leadership is just as effective in some respects as was that of Uncle Joe Cannon and his organization.

Who Will Replace Him?

Conceding the magnitude of the job which Underwood holds and the remarkable ability he possesses the gossips wonder where could be found, either in congress or out of it, a man to fill his shoes.

The Democratic members of the ways and means committee by virtue of the fact that that committee is considered the leading committee of the house, are in their respective rank eligible to succeed Underwood. Ordinarily, the ranking member of a committee is made chairman. The chairmanship of the house ways and means committee carries with it the leadership but this does not mean that the ranking member of the committee necessarily will be leader. On the contrary, it is the custom of the dominant party in the house to select for leader the man best qualified for that position. Of course he undoubtedly would be selected from the membership of the committee.

Kitchin-Rainey-Hull.

The other Democratic members of the committee in their relative order of membership are as follows: Claude Kitchin of North Carolina, Henry T Rainey of Illinois, Lincoln Dixon of Indiana, Cordell Hull of Tennessee, Winfield S Hammond of Minnesota, Andrew J. Peters of Massachusetts, A Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania, Timothy T. Ansberry of Ohio, John N Garner of Texas, James W Collier of Mississippi, Augustus O Stanley of Kentucky and Clement C Dickinson of Missouri.

Kitchin is a debater of great force, a keen stump speaker and a stickler for regularity on party questions. His friends are interested in the possibilities of promition that lie before him.

Rainey also is a debater of much eloquence. He is the author of several investigation propositions and takes great interest in conservation and industrial questions. How hot a contest he would make for the leadership even his friends do not profess to know. He is a man of striking appearance physically, being about six feet tall and of massive proportions. He has bushy hair and has been described by one of his colleagues as the lion of the committee.

Cordell Hull essentially is a student of political questions who frankly tells his friends that he is more interested in studying great questions than being made the possessor of great power. He is the author of the income tax bill, yet when the senate changed the bill, and wrote in some important particulars, he did not display any wounded feeling on account of pride of authorship. Hull never loses his temper and talks as he thinks in methodical, logical fashion, no matter how impassioned and heated the proceedings about him may be.

Hammond and Peters also are of the scholar type. A Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania, on account of his friendship for President Wilson and the fact that the president has consulted him, figures in all the speculation over a future leader. Palmer is a resourceful politician and ambitious. He probably would accept the leadership if it be offered him. He is rated as one of the most forceful men on the committee and often is in consultation with Underwood.

AT ONCE! CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN AND COLD-IN-HEAD OR CATARNH VANISHES

Instantly Relieves Swollen, Inflamed Nose, Head, Throat—You Breathe Freely—Dull Headache Goes—Nasty Discharge Stops

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils, penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat, clears the air passages, stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed, nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in Ely's Cream Balm and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear. Adv.

POOR OLD WOMAN, AGED 99, BEING CARED FOR BY HER DAUGHTER, JUST OVER 80'

LONDON, Oct 4—A pathetic story of an old woman in humble circumstances who had forgotten her name is being told here by Mr E Hoddinott, an inspector under the Housing and Town Planning act.

The inspector was visiting a number of cottages near Swindon when he called at one for the first time.

"What is your name?" he inquired of the feeble old dame who came forward to reply to his questions.

"Mary," was the brief reply.

"Yes, but what is your other name, madame?" he persisted.

"Lord, I don't know," she [illegible], "but I can find it in the Bible."

After much diligent search the family Bible was produced and the surname discovered on the flyleaf with the date of birth. Mary was 99 years old.

"I've lived in this house for 70 years, sir," she pleaded, "and I've brought up 10 children and I do hope you are not going to turn me out."

"Good gracious, no," exclaimed the inspector, "but you must have someone to look after you."

"My eldest daughter does, sir," was the reply, and the inspector was amazed to see another old lady step forward, who stated simply that she was "just over 80 years old."

WALES, "PRINCE PETER PAN"

From the New York American.

LONDON—Oxford university undergraduates, who dubbed the Prince of Wales "Flagger Wagger" last year when he took up his abode in Magdalen college, have now given him the new title, "Prince Peter Pan."

PANAMA CANAL COMPLETED; ATLANTIC PACIFIC MEET TOMORROW; HUGE TASK

Blow up Gamboa Dike Next Friday; Ships Pass Through in December; Take 10 Hours for the Passage

COLON, Panama Oct 4—The Pan- a canal has been completed. Tomorrow at word from Colonel ethals the waters of the Atlantic d Pacific will be joined except for intervening locks. Through four inch pipes inserted in the Gamboa e the waters of Gatun lake will flow o the Culebra cut, the only portion of the canal in which at present there is no water.

On next Friday it is expected that sufficient water will have filled the nine-mile cut to act as a cushion when the Gamboa dike is blown up. Workmen are now drilling 30-foot holes in the dike to take the charges of dynamite. But these charges will not demolish the dike; they will merely loosen the material so that the water will be able to trickle through and cut its own channel. The steam dredges will complete the work of opening the channel and once this is done a clear passage from the Atlantic to the Pacific will result.

Ships Through in December

It is expected that by December the waters in Gatun lake will have risen high enough to bring the waters in the entire canal up to the deep water level when the large ships can be sent through.

Without the mighty Gatun lake, a large artificial body of water made by impounding the waters of the Chagres river in the valley, the entire canal system would be a failure. Gatun lake is the feeder for the canal. At one end is the Culebra cut leading down through the Pedro Miguel locks into the Miraflores lake and from there through the Miraflores locks into the inlet from the Bay of Panama. At the other end of Gatun lake the canal leads through a series of three pairs of locks into the channel which has been dug to Limon bay. The water level in Gatun lake when the full supply is accumulated will be 8[illegible] feet above sea level.

It was just a month ago that the last bit of rock was taken out of Culebra cut with the steam shovels. Since that time the workmen have been removing the shovels, the tracks and other machinery necessary to the digging work. Any dirt taken out of the canal system from now on will be removed with the steam dredges which will be able to pass from the Atlantic to the Pacific groping with their iron hands beneath the waters for any remaining obstructions.

World's Greatest Task

When the waters at Gatun rise tomorrow the canal virtually will be declared complete, for the remaining work will be mere child's play compared with the Herculean feats which have already been performed. The Americans have finished in nine years the task which baffled the French after as many years of work. It is interesting to read the account of the beginning of work in Culebra cut by the French on February 1, 1882. It was a gala event. A huge banquet was given amidst flowers, flags and champagne, ending with a grand ball in the evening. Even the motor boats in which the enthusiastic Frenchmen were going to cruise over the canal they intended building so quickly were on hand. These motor boats were never used. After several years of heartbreaking toil the French [illegible] and admitted their defeat.

Was it strange then that when the Americans began work in 1904 that the world should scoff? But after the American engineers had been on the job for a year or more the world began to lose its scornful smile and to realize that the Americans meant business. As usual many mistakes were made. Twice as much earth has been excavated as the plans originally called for and it has cost twice as much money as was at first estimated.

The Americans started out with the machinery left by the French. This they soon found to be hopelessly inadequate and they now say that they could have accomplished little more than did the French with the same equipment.

In November of 1904 the first steam shovel made its appearance in the canal zone and by the following year every bit of the antiquated machinery used by the French had been superseded by modern equipment.

Great Equipment.

At the beginning of this year there were at work on the canal 101 steam shovels of the latest type, ranging in size from the 36-ton model to the 103-ton giants, capable of scooping up five cubic yards of rock and earth, weighing about nine tons, at a time. Also included in the list of equipment were 307 locomotives, 353 flats, 4,572 cars, [illegible] dredges, 26 spreaders, nine track shifters, 30 unloaders, 14 pile drivers and 104 other pieces of equipment including cranes, derricks and boats of all kinds.

This list is exclusive of the equipment used by the Panama railroad, which had 62 locomotives, 1,491 cars, four cranes, two pile drivers and 16 boats, including a tug boat, two motorboats, a steam ditcher and steel and iron lighters.

This equipment is practically all new, the old French machinery having been relegated to the junk heap.

40,000 Men Employed.

To operate this equipment a force of over 40,000 men was required. Most of this force is still employed in putting the finishing touches on the big ditch. These men together with their families total about 65,000 persons, all of whom are dependent upon the government. The task of feeding, clothing and housing these people who are scattered along the entire length of the canal has been carried on by the subsistence department. Every morning at 4 a. m. a supply train leaves Cristobal. It is composed of refrigerator cars containing ice, meats and other perishable articles along with a number of cars containing other supplies. These are delivered at the stations along the line and distributed by the quartermaster's department in the various settlements.

The Panama canal does not, as is generally supposed, cross the isthmus in an east and west direction. On the contrary its general direction is from northwest to southeast. The Pacific entrance to it at the city of Panama is 22 miles east of the Atlantic entrance at Colon. The length of the canal from shore to shore line is about 40 miles, but the additional dredging of a deep waterway in both approaches really makes the canal 50 miles long.

Lake and Lock Canal

The canal is a lake canal as well as a lock canal, the dominating feature being Gatun lake, an artificially created body of water covering about 164 square miles in the northern half of the portion of the isthmus through which the canal passes. The channel of the canal through the lake is about 24 miles in length. It is intended that the surface of the water in the lake shall be maintained at 87 feet above sea level. This level will not only extend through the lake but through the Culebra cut, which takes off at the southeast end of the lake. As the cut is nine miles in length this means that about [illegible] miles of the journey traversed by a ship in passing through the canal will be at a height of 87 feet. At both the sea ends, on both the Atlantic and Pacific sides, there is an approach channel which is an inlet from the sea extending from deep water to the locks which will lift the vessels to the level of the lake through which they are to pass.

In passing through the canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific a vessel will enter the approach channel in Limon Bay, which has a bottom width of [illegible]0 feet and extends to Gatun a distance of seven miles. Here it will enter a series of three locks and be raised 87 feet to the level of the lake. Steaming through the dredged out channel of the lake it will enter the Culebra cut. The channel in the lake varies in width from [illegible]00 to 1,000 feet. After passing through the cut, which has a bottom width of [illegible]00 feet, the vessel will enter the Pedro Miguel lock and be lowered [illegible] feet to Miraflores lake, which has an elevation of 54½ feet above sea level. Steaming for 1½ miles through the lake the vessel will then enter the two Miraflores locks and be lowered to sea level, passing out into the Pacific through a channel about 8½ miles in length, and having a bottom width of 500 feet. The water in the Culebra cut, as well as the approaches in both the Atlantic and the Pacific will be about 45 feet deep. In Gatun lake the depth of the water varies from 45 to 85 feet.

Gatun Dam Immense.

In order to form this gigantic artificial lake it was necessary to impound the waters of the Chagres river behind a big dam. This huge barrier, called the Gatun dam, is located about seven miles south of Colon at the northern end of the lake. It is a mile and a half long and nearly a half mile wide at its base, about 400 feet wide at the water surface and about 100 feet wide at the top, which is about 10 feet above sea level or 20 feet above the normal level of the lake. It is in reality a low ridge uniting the high hills on either side of the Chagres valley so as to convert the valley into a huge reservoir. The dam contains about 21,000,000 cubic yards of material, most of which is spoil from the Culebra cut.

Almost in the center of the dam is located the spillway. At the head of this spillway are vertically sliding gates to regulate the flow of water so that at all times the level of the water in the lake will be under almost perfect control. By raising the gates to a higher level the surface level of the water in the lake is also raised and by lowering the gates the surface level is reduced. It is estimated that even in the three or four months of the dry season enough water will be impounded in the lake to give a minimum depth of 39 feet of water in the canal, which will be ample for all navigation as no ships at present draw this amount of water.

Adjacent to the north wall of the spillway is located the electric power house. The water carried from the lake through a flume will be more than sufficient to generate all the power necessary for the operation of the locks and other canal machinery. It is also planned to furnish light and power to the two cities of Colon and Panama besides the various towns along the route of the canal. The range lights built along the canal for steering purposes will also be supplied with current from this central station.

Engine Will Tow Ships

No ship will be allowed to pass through the locks under its own power. Electrically operated towing locomotives will be provided for this purpose. To each ship there will be four locomotives, two on either side of the bow and two at the stern. The towing cables will be attached to the locomotives by winding drums so that it will be possible for the cable to be paved out or taken in while the locomotive is stationary on the tracks. Thus the big ships will be under absolute control at all times. To further safeguard the locks from accident, fender chains will be stretched across them. These chains will be capable of stopping a 10,000-ton ship running at four knots an hour within 73 feet, which is less than the distance that will separate the chains from the lock gates. These chains can be lowered into grooves in the bottom of the locks when the ship is ready to pass out.

Another safety device in the locks is the system of double gates which have been provided at the entrances to all the locks and at the lower end of the upper lock in each flight, the guard gate at each pair protecting the lower gate from ramming from a ship which might possibly get away from the towing locomotives and break through the fender chains.

In addition to this there is a movable emergency dam placed at the head bay above the upper locks at both ends of the Gatun lake. These can be swung into place in case of an accident and stop the flow of water from the lake into the remainder of the canal.

Ten Hours Through

The time of transit through the canal for a vessel of the largest type has been estimated at from 10 to 12 hours depending on the rate of speed maintained in passing through Gatun lake. It will take an hour and a half to send a ship through the three locks at Gatun and the same time to pass it through the three locks on the Pacific end, the Pedro Miguel and the two Miraflores locks. The feat of raising a large ocean going vessel with a full cargo afloat 1[illegible] feet and lowering it to its initial level in the space of three hours would have been considered impossible a half century ago. Yet that is exactly what can be done and it will be done when the canal is thrown open for navigation.

The total cost of the canal, including the purchase from the New Panama Canal company (the French combine) and the payment to the republic of Panama, will closely approach the $400,000,000 mark. Three fifths of a billion dollars to dig a 40-mile ditch! This is by far the most costly engineering project in the world. No other engineering project ever cost $10,000,000 a mile [illegible] as has the Panama canal.

$15,000,000 for Sanitation

Over $1[illegible] of this sum has been spent in making the canal zone habitable and sanitary. At first glance this seems to be an enormous amount of money to spend in cleaning up a place in which few people will reside permanently, yet the engineers say that the sanitation of the canal zone was the chief factor in making the canal a reality. Much of the failure of the French was due to the fact that workmen could not survive in the fever and pest-ridden country.

The canal zone contains about 436 square miles, about 9[illegible] of which are under the waters of the canal and Gatun and Miraflores lakes. It begins at a point three marine miles from mean low-water mark in each ocean and extends for five miles on each side of the center line of the route of the canal. It includes the group of islands in the Bay of Panama named Parido, Naos, Culebra and Flamenco. The cities of Panama and Colon are excluded from the zone, but the United States has the right to enforce sanitary ordinances in those cities and to maintain public order in them in case of republic of Panama should not be able, in the judgment of the United States, to do so.

Of the 436 square miles of zone territory, the United States owns about 363 and 73 are held in private ownership. Under the treaty with Panama the United States has the right to acquire by purchase or by the exercise of the right of eminent domain any lands, buildings, water rights or other properties necessary and convenient for the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation and protection of the canal, and it can therefore at any time acquire the lands within the zone boundaries which are owned by private persons. The United States will also control the area to be covered by Gatun lake, which extends beyond the lines of the canal zone.

The population of the canal zone, official census, is 62,810; of Panama city 35,368; of Colon 17,149.

Mixtures of Races at Work

In the construction of the canal most of the manual labor was performed by Spaniards, Italians, West Indians and natives of the republic of Panama. To them much credit is due, but the major part of the glory in such a remarkable achievement must be given to the American engineers and to the officials, clerical force, construction men and skilled artisans who were practically all Americans. The Panama canal has been a big undertaking and has developed some big men, chief among them being Gen. G. W. Goethals, who is known as the man who made the dirt fly.

A comparison of 6,5[illegible] star athletes of the Naval academy with [illegible]90 non-athletes, in both cases from the classes of 1892-1911, shows that apparently the non-athletes are in better physical condition than the athletes.

"UNTO THE LEAST OF THESE"

Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into the eternal fire which is prepared for the devil and his angels: for I was hungry, and ye did not give me to eat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye clothed me not; sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not."

Then shall they also answer, saying, "Lord, when saw we thee hungry, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee?"

Then shall he answer them, saying, "Verily I say unto thee, Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of these least, ye did it not unto me."

And these shall go away into eternal punishment: but the righteous into eternal life. (Matt. 25:41-46.)

Those are old, old words, so well known that perhaps in reading them over, or in listening to them as they are read from the pulpit, we lose all their meaning. But they are nevertheless the words upon which every individual, every community, every society, must be judged in the final day. Have we, as individuals, as a community, as society, fed the hungry, given drink to the thirsty, cared for the stranger, clothed the naked, healed the sick, visited the prisoners?

This week citizens of Colorado Springs will be asked to contribute money towards the support of Sunnyrest sanatorium. The work of that institution is described elsewhere in this paper. Nowhere else in Colorado Springs is a work being done that corresponds so nearly to the work enjoined upon his followers by Jesus. A mere description cannot do it justice; one must visit the place to realize to the full the splendid Christian spirit that animates the work, and to grasp its need, as exemplified in the cases of the men and women now there for treatment.

At Sunnyrest those who else would perish are given their only chance. Into its doors go those upon whom has been laid the hand of the dread disease, and for whom there is no other place of refuge. Out of its doors come those same men and women, restored to health, made useful citizens again.

But into those doors go also many of those for whom there is no hope. Society has neglected them until too late. Those who might have been saved for great usefulness are thrown upon the scrap heap. And all Sunnyrest can do for them is to atone in some slight measure for the great sin of society by making somewhat more comfortable and homelike the last days of those whom we should have reached before, and did not.

But the best thing about Sunnyrest is that it is not a charity. Those patients who can pay do so; those who cannot get their chance, without any distinction for it is owed them by society, and Sunnyrest merely gives them their due. The whole spirit of Sunnyrest is that of Christian service, and that spirit never pauperizes nor injures anyone.

But, as Sunnyrest stands in place of society here in Colorado Springs a socialized Samaritan, ministering to our sick, giving them their chance of new life yet it can do its work only as it has behind it the cordial support and cooperation of every individual. It has a splendid right to ask such support. It offers us the opportunity to help those in sickness and in suffering whom, in the busy struggle of our lives, we overlook but for whose welfare, nevertheless, God will hold us rigidly accountable.

It did not avail those men of old to plead that they did not see the sick. They were there, and it was the business of those who professed to love God to find them and to minister to them. No more will it avail us to close our eyes. We all know the helpless sick and suffering are here. It only remains for us to say whether we shall merit the divine approval or condemnation, according as we minister, or fail to minister, "unto one of these least."

SUPPRESSING PROGRESSIVE NEWS

WITH the exception of the signing of the tariff bill by the President the most important news story on the wire yesterday morning was the farewell dinner to Colonel Roosevelt, given in New York. Yet the Denver News, through some oversight, failed to print a word of it. People who depend solely on that enterprising journal for their information as to current events are doubtless unaware that such a meeting was held.

The incident is worthy of comment only because it is typical of the attitude of a large section of the press which is opposed to the Progressive movement. Indeed, it is doubtful whether any subject which has entered so continuously and so prominently into the news of the day has ever been so distorted in print as the Progressive movement has been and now is. Even the press reports have been tinged with unfairness, and in the columns of standpat Republican organs especialy and in those of the anti-Progressive press generally, they appear in such garbled form that the reader is sometimes lucky if he gains even a faint idea of the truth.

For instance, the Republican papers have attempted for months to show that the Progressive party is about to be absorbed by, or amalgamated with, or otherwise swallowed up by the remnant of the Republican organization a thing which has never been even probable and is more unlikely now than ever before. It would be a different matter if the Republican papers limited their efforts to spread this impression to the arguments in their editorial columns, but when they deliberately distort their news reports it becomes a serious indictment of journalism.

"O, UPRIGHT JUDGE!"

AN attorney for the prisoners fined, disbarred and ordered removed to jail as soon as he began talking; a former candidate for mayor, an attorney, disbarred and fined without being permitted to speak a word in his defense; a woman sent to jail with a baby at her breast and a small boy; a war veteran fined $100 and sent to jail; two men fined $300 each and sent to jail for six months.

That is only part of one day's court record in Russia? No, in Seattle, Washington, U. S. A. And the heinous crime of which these persons had been guilty was that of violating an injunction of very doubtful legality, and which they considered entirely illegal.

That any scatter-brained and [illegible] old judges can go as far as this in the supposedly free United States is an irrefutable argument in favor of the recall of judges, is it not? For, if Judge Humphries of Seattle could carry off his high-handed proceedings, would not other judges emulate him? And are there many Americans who would consent long to endure such tyranny?

OTHER STRAWS.

On July 1 the 35 liquor saloons in the Panama canal zone were closed and henceforth none will be licensed. The North American in a recent issue remarks: "Judging from their cries of distress at the prohibition of booze in the canal zone, the brewery interests must have thought they were to have the privilege of filling the canal with beer."

It is noted by readers that much greater space is given the liquor question than heretofore.

A SOUND COLLEGE VIEW.

President Flavel S. Luther made the following wholesome and wise statement in his baccalaureate sermon this year:

"No amount of training in the laboratory, in the library, in the lecture room, no appeal to the fiery courage of youth, no hard service into which the servant is driven by the relentless pressure of material things can go far toward reconstructing the world and purifying civilization unless it be yoked together with that self-consecration which is possible only to the disciples and followers of the Son of God. I do most earnestly proclaim the doctrine that a religionless and godless education will never make straight the path of man. Nor are the colleges backward in recognizing this truth, for there is nothing more strange, more encouraging, in the college life of today than the outgrowth of the religious sentiment among our young men."

THE TABOO ON MODERATE DRINKING.

From American Medical Journal.

"The use of alcohol is receiving some hard knocks these days. A prominent railway system, not content with the general rule heretofore in force on railways forbidding employes to drink while on duty, now forbids employes to indulge at all in drinking out of employment hours, or in any other conduct which will impair their health or make them less alert and less capable while on duty. The owner of one of the nation's pets—a prominent baseball team—announced that moderation in drinking is not sufficient; the players on his team must leave alcohol entirely alone and abandon cigarettes. The justification for such rules may be found not only in the difficulty of being moderate in indulgence, but also in the cumulative and after-effects of dissipation. The world is moving; the old fetish of "personal liberty" at whatever cost of danger to the public at large seems to be losing its power. The time may come when every man to whom the life and safety of others are intrusted may be expected or even required to be as abstemious as the ball players and railway employes just mentioned."

THE CHURCH'S DUTY TOWARD EDUCATION.

From New York Christian Advocate.

The church has not done its duty until every form of secular education has been supplemented by the closest and most patient training in the principles of morality and religion. We may plume ourselves as we choose upon the advances we are making in educational methods, but we shall reap a bitter harvest of lawlessness, disorder, infidelity and crime if we do not lay a stronger emphasis upon the spiritual training of childhood. We may try to take refuge in the fact that the American public school system cannot legitimately be employed for this purpose; the fact remains that we are under compulsion to find some way out of the equivocal position in which we now stand. Either we must insist, despite the opposition of arrogant sectarianism and blatant secularism, that the children of our public schools shall be taught the essential principles of morals and religion as a part of the regular curriculum, or the churches of the country must set themselves the task, however expensive it may be, of providing separate schools for religious instruction throughout the entire land.

WHY FELIX DIAZ IS CALLED BACK.

From the Christian Science Monitor.

From the city of Mexico comes the information that no turn in the political situation has caused greater surprise than the order of General Blanquet, Mexican minister of war, that Felix Diaz return to the capital forthwith. General Diaz is, of course, immediately responsible to General Blanquet, but that the latter is simply executing a command promulgated by the chief executive goes without saying. From Paris General Diaz is expected to return to Mexico on the first steamer bound for his country. His arrival must mean renewed interest in the presidential campaign that is close at hand, for there is scarcely any doubt that Provisional President Huerta has decided it would be best to have the nephew of Porfirio Diaz enter the race—a matter, in fact, agreed upon in that momentous hour when the opponents, facing each other in the street battles of the capital, ceased hostilities, thereby sealing the fate of President Madero.

Granted that the Huerta administration and the followers of Felix Diaz are satisfied to abide by a vote, with Diaz as candidate, what about the northern states, where the constitutionalists, as they call themselves, are still actively opposing the federal authorities? The elimination of General Huerta from the presidential campaign, if such is really decided upon in Mexico City, may be agreeable to Washington, because it removes one barrier to the international understanding, but there can be no ignoring what Venustiano Carranza thinks of the situation. Perhaps the leader of the constitutionalists is himself preparing to enter the presidential fray as the candidate of his followers. At all events, the October elections, if they come off as scheduled, should advance the whole Mexican problem so that the present uncertainty can be superseded by something definite. The first step may come when General Diaz reaches Mexico City and enters into conference with the provisional president.

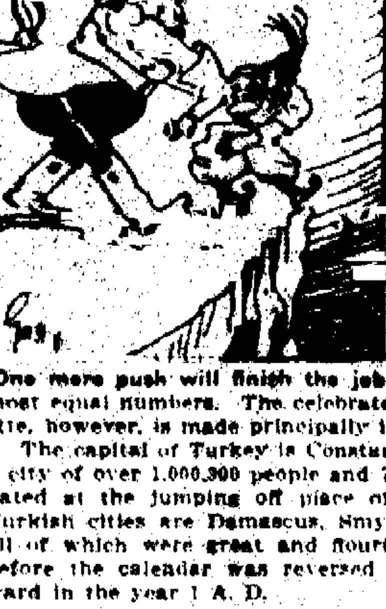
TURKEY

BY [illegible] CAMERON

Turkey is a large [illegible] of the [illegible] in a state of almost [illegible] conservation. It is situated in full retreat at the [illegible] of [illegible] and also extends over [illegible] of Asia. There are 1,-576,000 square miles in Turkey, or were before Balkan states began carving it. If the officials of Turkey had been half as square as the miles the country would have gotten along better.

Turkey is a very old country and smells like it. It began to get ambitious in 500 B. C., and by the Fifteenth century has spread up the Danube like a heavy rash almost to Vienna. Since then the European nations have spent their spare time pushing Turkey back into Asia and have gotten so far along with the task that one more push will finish the job.

Turkey in Asia is composed mostly of sand and is drier than Kansas when the county attorney is making good. Its principal resource is sand and its principal products are dates, figs, wool, moslem priests and smells. Turkey exports olive oil, old hair rugs and Midway dancers in enormous quantities, and imports wives from the Caucasus and missionaries from America in almost equal numbers. The celebrated Turkish cigarette, however, is made principally in New Jersey.



"One more push will finish the job."

The capital of Turkey is Constantinople, which is a city of over 1,000,300 people and 7,000,000 dogs situated at the jumping off place of Europe. Other Turkish cities are Damascus, Smyrna and Bagdad, all of which were great and flourishing cities long before the calendar was reversed and started forward in the year 1 A. D.

The Turkish people consist of two classes workers and officials. The laboring Turk is honest and very industrious. Because of this he is able to support the official class and even at times to support himself. The easiest way to get rich in Turkey is to escape and come to America.

Turkey adheres to the Mohammedan form of religion which allows unlimited wives and does not interfere with politics or business. Turkey has given America the Hoochee Coochee dance, the Turkish bath and the Oriental rug, but has kindly retained the harem as an exclusively home feature.

Turkey was an absolute monarchy governed by a sultan until a few years ago, when the young Turks arose and fired Abdul Hamid with a great bang. It is now a constitutional monarchy. Trying to find the constitution is the latest Turkish diversion.

Turkey has long been detested by Europe because of its playful habit of slicing up its Christian citizens with a scimitar on holidays and feast days. Because of this Europe has been slicing off Turkey a little at a time, preferring the white portions. However, no one has yet been found with courage enough to slice off and assimilate Constantinople which will continue to be 100 per cent Turkish until the next fire.

SCRIPTURE

Proverbs, 18th Chapter verses 1 to 9.

Through desire a man, having separated himself, seeketh and intermeddleth with all wisdom.

A fool hath no delight in understanding, but that his heart may discover itself.

When the wicked cometh, then cometh also contempt, and with ignominy reproach.

The words of a man's mouth are as deep waters, and the wellspring of wisdom as a flowing brook.

It is not good to accept the person of the wicked, to overthrow the righteous in judgment.

A fool's lips enter into contention, and his mouth calleth for strokes.

A fool's mouth is his destruction, and his lips are the snare of his soul.

The words of a talebearer are as wounds, and they go down into the innermost parts of the belly.

He also that is slothful in his work is brother to him that is a great waster.

ODDS AND ENDS

"I will never abandon the principles to which we Progressives have pledged ourselves, and I will never abandon the men and women who drew around me to battle for these principles. They and I stand with our faces toward the morning; we will never be sundered from one another; and we will never yield the ground we have taken or flinch from the fight to which we are pledged."

This, on Theodore Roosevelt's part, is political sentimentalism. Any practical politician will tell you so. But it is a sentimentalism that wakes an answer in the hearts of millions of men and women in America today. It is the sentimentalism that means that the Progressive party is here to stay, and that, though defeat after defeat, if need be, it will go forward towards the goal it has set before it.

The Republican compromisers cannot understand. They have ears, but they hear not; eyes have they, but they see not. That is their limitation as selfish seekers after political place. They have never understood and they never will be able to understand the men and women to whom principle means more than place.

And for that reason, under their leadership, the Republican party is doomed.

The Trinidad Chronicle-News is congratulating itself, with reason, on its increase in circulation from 1,855 a year ago to 2,336 in its present statement to the government. Very evidently the C.-N.'s espousal of Progressive doctrines has not hurt it.

"We used to be told," remarks the Grand Junction Sentinel, "that the only people narrow enough to stop to such small things as 'quitting a paper' because they did not agree with its policy on some moral issue were the 'drys' and the 'church people.' Well, it isn't so," and the Sentinel goes on to say that the boycott to which it was subjected by the "drys" in previous fights is nothing to what it is now being subjected to by the "wets," since the Sentinel in this campaign has changed sides and is now "dry."

"Nothing could stimulate the 'back to the land' movement so much," thinks the Fort Collins Review, "as the announcement that a large number of Larimer county farmers will come under the provisions of the federal income tax law."

The sprightly Review also opines that "When Assessor [illegible] of Denver finishes his work [illegible] of the state tax [illegible] he will have a vague idea that he has been [illegible] and had not all [illegible] done to him."

No wonder Guy U. Hardy, editor of the Canon City Record, spends so much time away from home. "We haven't seen a single slit skirt or X-ray garment in Canon City this summer," he mourns, "and now the weather is so cool we have no hopes until another season."

Only 144 votes were cast in the Montrose election for delegates to the charter convention. But there was only one ticket in the field.

Someone is spending a lot of money printing and distributing free from New York a weekly paper named "Below the Rio Grande," the chief purpose of which is to advocate the recognition of President Huerta of Mexico by the United States. And it's safe to say the money thus spent doesn't come from Dr. J. L. Pardo, who figures as editor.

To advance Colonel Goethals in rank to major general is certainly the very least the American government can do to show its appreciation of his wonderful work at Panama. But Colonel Gorgas, who made Goethals' work possible, should not be forgotten in the distribution of honors.

"It even occurs to the thoughtful at times," muses the Christian Science Monitor, "that a commission form of congress would make for the expedition of business."

A surplus of $10,000,000 in the postal department is indicated for this year, due entirely to the parcel post. Which suggests that the parcel post should therefore be at once and much farther extended.

The New York Sun charges that, in Senator Owen, a greenbacker, is in charge of the currency bill. Senator Owen may be a greenbacker, but he is also largely interested in a great new bank being organized in St. Louis, as he has just admitted, so it is not likely he will be too severe on the banking interests.

The New York Sun is also responsible for the statement that importers are disappointed in the new tariff bill. They assert that the administrative features are such as to offset in many cases the lower rates, thus permitting a continuation of the old protective policy.

When Theodore Roosevelt admitted, in his Rochester speech, that the constitution should be made more easily amendable, it was the last straw with the New York papers. Any hope the poor colonel might have had of gradually working back into their good graces was irretrievably lost by that treasonable utterance.

Charles Sumner Bird, Progressive, was the first of the Massachusetts gubernatorial candidates to begin his speaking campaign. They are going to have to show Mr. Bird that the Progressive party is dead.

"We are proud that our leader has made a record of things done for humanity unequaled by that of any man now living, proud that he goes abroad tomorrow, the highest voice of righteousness and social good which any country can send forth. But we are prouder that he gave us the courage to found the party of the future, that he has made abominable the words 'compromise,' 'merger' and every other misleading term with which the people have been tricked out of their rights; and that once more on every hill top of our country the fires have been lighted of that ancient American spirit which dared all and gave all for the right."—Albert J. Beveridge.

"YOU EARN BREAD, AND I'LL EAT IT"

Gifford Pinchot, in Address at [illegible] Dinner, Fully [illegible] Story of the Evils of the Magnate System [illegible] and Explains Why the Progressive Party is [illegible] Agency for Destroying [illegible]

At the farewell dinner to Colonel Roosevelt in New York, last Friday, Mr. Gifford Pinchot said:

Miss Kellor, Colonel Roosevelt, members of the [illegible] service and of the Progressive party: [illegible] whose great purpose it is to take our government [illegible] our people. We are [illegible] to give [illegible] his [illegible] [illegible] during the [illegible] of his [illegible] party [illegible] for the public [illegible] [illegible] system. [illegible] [illegible] of the Progressive party, and [illegible] great [illegible] No [illegible] That is [illegible] our [illegible] have long [illegible] for profit by the [illegible] behind the political boss. Not only are our laws largely [illegible] made, but they are so often interpreted in the interest of magnates that in constitutional [illegible] our platform advocates the recall of judicial decisions [illegible] a necessary remedy. We all know that the men who control the great corporations dominate business in America.

The control of business and politics necessarily carries with it the domination of the government. Instead of a genuine democracy, we have in fact today a magnate system of government, that system of control by the very rich for their own profit and for the protection and perpetuation of their own class which Senator Beveridge has so fitly called "the invisible government."

The unanswerable proof of the power of the magnate class is the concentration in their hands of the material wealth which 50 years ago belonged to all the people. Thus, through their control of our government the magnates have had given to them in land grants more than 250,000,000 acres of public land, as against the 150,000,000 acres that have been given or sold to poor men under the homestead law. A single associated group of lumbermen now control a thousand million dollars worth of what was once public timber, or half as much as, in the national forests, is still owned by all the people of the United States.

The Civil war destroyed physical slavery, which was founded upon the privilege of controlling the bodies of men and women, but it left untouched economic slavery, which is founded upon the privilege of controling the things which men and women must have to keep their bodies alive. This control is exercised mainly through great corporations, whose growth has been so rapid since the war that today, as all men know, they overshadow the industrial life of the nation. Their rise to power was accompanied by an era of corruption in high places which in our time has made the leadership of the Republican party a byword and a disgrace.

Through that leadership, the money power made its cunning appeal to the people until a concentration of our resources has taken place so monstrous that it is stated, and it may well be true, that 90 per cent of the wealth of our country is in the hands of 10 per cent of our people. Indeed there is but little exaggeration in saying that the magnates own and work this country as a miner owns and works his mine.

No man can say openly that he defends the permanent subjection, as at present, of the mass of our people to the privilege of a small class. One result of that privilege is that the income of the average family in this country is less than $600 a year. It is unthinkable that 90 per cent of our people should live permanently in a way which the other 10 per cent would regard as intolerable hardship that each member of a small class should always have a hundred times as much of the good things of this world as each member of the great mass of the people. The real economic need is for the 90 per cent to have something very much more nearly approaching 90 per cent of the general wealth than the 10 per cent they are said to have now.

Therefore, the one great task which lies before us is to replace the magnate system by a system frankly and effectively directed to make the many prosperous and secure, and not the few rich. What we have to do, in Lincoln's own language, is to take away the [illegible] of any [illegible] to say to [illegible] "You earn bread, and I'll eat it." [illegible] [illegible] can and be [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] with [illegible] their [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] is in [illegible] for the [illegible] of [illegible] ware. There is no [illegible] for the situation we face.

The tree of privilege [illegible] about through [illegible] which the [illegible] of what [illegible] the wealth of this [illegible] from the public [illegible] into [illegible] private [illegible] hands, and various tools will be [illegible] to cut it down. It has [illegible] and its fall will [illegible] But we can not stop, and we [illegible] not stop, until [illegible] of it has [illegible] divided and built into the homes of the people, and until its very root [illegible] dug out and split into [illegible] to keep the people warm.

To set this matter right is an [illegible] deserving too great for bitterness. [illegible] is a task for the wisest and [illegible] patient [illegible] manship. Let us approach it with a mind as large as [illegible] result we seek. Like Lincoln, w[illegible] malice toward none, with charity [illegible] all, yet with the inflexible [illegible] that nothing shall stop us until [illegible] final victory has driven the [illegible] out of power for good and all, un[illegible] the cost of the magnate system is [illegible] longer levied on the people in the co[illegible] of living, and the system itself h[illegible] been replaced by a true economic democracy. This is the splendid ta[illegible] to which the Progressive party has [illegible] its hand.

How shall we carry our wo[illegible] through? First, by letting the peop[illegible] know just what we propose to do; th[illegible] by letting them know exactly how w[illegible] propose to get it done; and final[illegible] bringing to bear the power of the pu[illegible] lic opinion we have created or o[illegible] ganized. For all this we have a mea[illegible] that is new in political history, t[illegible] most effective ever devised for t[illegible] permanent establishment of sou[illegible] politics. I mean, of course, the Pr[illegible] gressive service. No such body of m[illegible] and women, devoted to spreading t[illegible] principles of a political creed, has ev[illegible] been brought together before. N[illegible] similar evidence of high and unself[illegible] devotion to the public welfare has ev[illegible] before been given by a political part[illegible]

The bad forces in politics never sle[illegible] In the Progressive service, the go[illegible] forces of progressive politics are pe[illegible] manently awake.

CONVICTS OF SOUTH AFRICA MAINTAIN A BIG SECRET SOCIETY

Organisation Is Similar to Those Flourishing in Southern Europe

KIMBERLEY South Africa, Oct 4—A sensational story of a native convicts' secret society, the facts as to which are well known to South Africa udges and police authorities, has been unfolded in the course of a murder rial here. Five native convicts were ndicted for the murder of a fellow-convict, named Jacob Makba, at Duoitspan convict station The story for he crown was that Jacob had decided o withdraw from the "Ninevite society," abdicating the chieftainship, and ad persuaded others to withdraw also 'or this and for the fact that he was upposed to have carried tales to the tation superintendent he was sentenced to death He resisted endeavors o get him into a certain cell but ventually went, and was set upon and tabbed to death.

One of the accused was the society's octor, another a "judge" a third succeeded Jacob as chief, the fourth belonged to an opposing faction known s "The Scotchmen," and the fifth was eutral.

The Ninevites are a native convict ecret society The evidence showed at they have their own king, chief, eneral, judges, doctor, and other officers, and hold secret courts, sentence llow-convicts to death and issue orders for the execution of their sentences

Society Throughout Country

Judge Lange said that the Ninevites iginated in Pretoria convict prison d were represented all over the untry. A native witness said that rly all the convicts in Johannesburg re Ninevites. The deceased had been ief of the society. Secret prison eetings decided on the stabbings, and ose appointed to execute orders were ble to punishment if they failed. This itness said the rule was "Once a Ninevite, always a Ninevite" Jacob's death arrant was "verbally signed," and it as ordained that should the knife t be forthcoming, he should be killed hile working on the DeBeers floors.

Superintendent Dysson said the Ninevites caused immense trouble in e stations, and, although watched ntinually, held meetings, and reported to their king. IATOR DIES WHILE 900 FEET IN AIR; AEROPLANE TRAVELS FOR TEN MINUTES

Parallel in History of Aviation for Tragedy of Dr. Ringer at Johannistal.

BERLIN, Oct 4—No parallel can be ud in the history of aviation for tragedy which occurred at the Johannistal flying ground when Dr nger died at the wheel of his aeroplane, which remained for 10 minutes re in the air before it fell.

efore he made his ascent at 6 30 ock in the morning. Dr Ringer mplained of feeling unwell, nevertheless he rose. When his monoplane reached a height of about 900 feet was circling round the flying und Dr Ringer had a sudden heart ure and died apparently instantaneously His hands remained grasping the steering gear while the monoplane continued to ascend

The spectators below noticed nothing unusual, and the monoplane continued its steady flight A sudden gust of wind, however changed the position of the machine and the weight of the aviator's body was thrown over the steering wheel The loss of balance gave it an almost vertical position, and it fell

Dr Ringer's hands were still clasping the wheel, and his eyes had an expression of unspeakable anguish The post mortem examination proved that he had died fully 10 minutes before the fall of the monoplane

Corsets For the Comfortably and Correctly Dressed Women

In these days more importance than ever is attached to beauty of line in women's fashions. For several seasons the famous style creators have depended for effect almost entirely on the simple lines of the natural figure.

The new C. B models are designed to bring out the beauty of a good figure, and to develop beauty if the figure hasn't it to begin with. Ask at the corset department to be fitted with the C. B. model suited to your height and general proportions. * * * * * *

Look at yourself in the glass. Note the C. B.'s graceful lines carefully. You will not have to note its comfort, for, if it is the right model for your particular figure, you'll hardly be conscious by the feeling that you're wearing a new corset. * * * * * * * * *

This fall we are especially featuring models for Stout figures. Let us show you one or more of these: *

At $5- This superb model insures a perfect fit low bust with long hips and back, with fine elastic gores in both front and back of the corset skirt, made of strong English coutil with double boning throughout and spoon-shaped front steel six hose supporters. * * * * * * * * *

Another excellent model is $4. Medium low bust, long over the hips. A feature is the elastic goring one on each side of the front and an elastic strap across the lower edge of each side of the back; especially moulding and reducing figures of very large hips. Made of excellent materials, with three hooks below the lower clasp. * * * * * * * *

At $3.50 we offer this one. A strong English coutil model, doubly boned, with a spoon-shaped front steel. Low bust, medium long hips with reinforcement over the abdomen. *

$3 for an attractive model for tall, well developed figures, extra long over the hips and back, very softly and flexibly boned, yet strong and durable. Made of dainty pink broche, in a brocaded floral design. * * * * * * *

At $2.50 and $1.50 special models for the types of figure we've been specializing here. All the very best values that money can buy C. B. triumphs! * * * * * *

Of course, besides these stouter models we can fit any figure with a specially designed corset for its individual need. Let us show you. * * * * * * * * *

ENGLAND, GERMANY AND THE PEACE OF EUROPE

Sir Max Waechter in the Fortnightly Review

Nature history and tradition have evidently meant Great Britain and Germany to be united. The British and the Germans are of the same race They have sprung from the same stock Their languages are very similar and their views are almost identical in all the things that matter Church and school are the two greatest influences in national life They form the character of the people

It is significant that the same religious ideas prevail in Germany and in Great Britain Both countries have refused to accept a religion and a church discipline at the bidding of an absolute church domiciled in a foreign country Both have fought for a national religion and for the democratization of the church Both have become strongholds of Protestantism Great Britain and Germany have been equally strongly convinced that the people should be well educated Hitherto the British have copied German education to a large extent but now the British educational methods are being largely adopted in Germany

The British have made war upon many European nations but they have never fought against the Germans On the contrary British and German soldiers have fought shoulder to shoulder in numerous battles during many decades down to the crowning Anglo German victory of Waterloo

The two countries are bound to one another by strong economic bonds A glance at the official statistics published by the British and German governments shows how closely English and German trade is interwoven how indispensable one nation is to the other From information supplied by the board of trade it appears that the whole foreign trade of the British Empire amounted in 1911 to 1,837,000,000 pounds sterling Of this sum 183,900,000 pounds sterling or exactly 10 per cent, was trade with Germany No less than 18 per cent of Germany's foreign trade is carried on with the British Empire

It is a strange irony of fate that, in spite of all these unifying factors, the two nations should have arrived at such a state of mutual distrust that only a short time ago a war between them seemed possible Such a war would have cost a hecatomb of lives. It would have ruined millions of families It would have exhausted both nations to such an extent that their civilization would have been thrown back perhaps by a century It might have weakened them so much that other nations could easily have destroyed their independence Yet nothing could have been gained by either power through such a war

Many Germans complain that Great Britain has always been unfriendly to Germany that she has hampered that country in every way and has thwarted its desire for expansion oversea These assertions are largely unfounded England saved Prussia from annihilation in the time of Frederick the Great and of Napoleon I British diplomats may have erred now and then but on the whole they have endeavored to live in peace and harmony with Germany That is proved by the numerous Anglo-German treaties and conventions, most of which were entered upon on England's initiative with a view to abolishing all friction between the two countries Great Britain has concluded an arbitration treaty with Germany in order to make a conflict between the two countries impossible

The desire for friendly and cordial relations between Great Britain and Germany prevails not only in official circles in Great Britain but throughout British society This is evident from the fact that the intellectual leaders of Great Britain have been warm admirers of Germany and the Germans Carlyle was the greatest admirer of everything German Looking out for a hero fit to be held up as a model to his countrymen he wrote his magnificent history of Frederick the Great From Carlyle to Lord Haldane there is [illegible] long line of the most eminent Englishmen who have seen in Germany [illegible] intellectual [illegible] and [illegible]

Imitation is [illegible] sincerest form of flattery British admiration of Germany is clearly apparent in Great Britain's desire to shape its administration its education and its social legislation on Germany's model The idea which prevails in Germany that the expansion of Germany's trade has created jealousy and bitterness in England is erroneous English merchants are not shortsighted enough to be jealous of Germany's prosperity They know that they can do more business with a prosperous than with a poor and ruined Germany

In the United Kingdom there exists no rooted prejudice against Germany The number of those who dislike Germany is exceedingly small and their dislike is caused by their distrust of the German navy Its rapid expansion has made necessary a corresponding increase of the British navy It should be comparatively easy to wipe out any prejudices existing in England against Germany by full and frank discussion

BEASTS OF PREY KILLED BY FORESTERS

During the past fiscal year 4,686 predatory animals were killed by federal officers on the national forests according to an actual count of carcasses An indeterminate number of animals whose bodies were not found [illegible] have died from poison

The rangers' line of beasts of prey [illegible] shown by forest service figures was made up of 208 bears [illegible] coyotes, 1[illegible] mountain lions, 62 lynx [illegible] wild cats, 61 wolves and [illegible] wolf pups The figures indicate that the national forests are becoming cleared of wild animals that prey upon domestic live stock and game for the forest ranger fills in odd moments between other jobs by thinning out undesirable citizens of the animal world

Wolves are said to cause greater losses to western stockmen than any other of the predatory animals It is estimated [illegible] family of wolves will destroy [illegible] $[illegible] worth of stock per annum and that one [illegible] individual [illegible] the grazing industry $600 a [illegible]

The wolves are [illegible] two classes the [illegible] coyotes and the [illegible] [illegible] These [illegible] the greatest stock destroyers [illegible] which the campaign of the rangers has been waged

The methods of hunting wolves in the west vary On the plains, wolves are sometimes hunted with dogs and horses, but this way is considered expensive and often dangerous This sport is described by Roosevelt in his earlier hunting books On national forests the rangers either set out poison or baited steel traps or by watching trails and hiding near a wolf's den are able to shoot one or both of the old wolves when they return from foraging In no other way according to the forest service can the number of wolves be kept down so well as by finding their dens and destroying the young

The skins of the predatory animals killed by the rangers are either kept as souvenirs or sold for a price or for bounty Wolf skins in the west are said to bring from $4 to $6 for robes and rugs a mountain lion skin $10 to $20, and a bear skin anywhere from $20 to $150 according to size and species In addition to this there are bounties on bears lions and wolves in most of the western stock states Wyoming in 10 years has paid out it is said over $65,000 in bounties on wolves alone and $95,000 more on coyotes and mountain lions

Through his activity against these pests the forest ranger, it is said, has saved the stockmen many thousands of dollars during the year while the protection to game animals such as deer elk and antelope is of almost equal importance

Facts in Nature

FOR centuries it has been known that Nature's most valuable health giving agents for the cure of disease are found in our American forests. Over forty years ago Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N.Y, used the powdered extracts as well as the liquid extracts of native medicinal plants, such as Bloodroot and Queen's root, Golden Seal and Stone root, Cherry bark and Mandrake, for the cure of blood diseases. This prescription as put up in liquid form was called and has enjoyed a large sale for all these years in every drug store in the land. You can now obtain the powdered extract in sugar-coated tablet form of your medicine dealer, or send 50c in one-cent postage stamps for trial box to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N.Y., and tablets will be mailed, postage prepaid.

DR. PIERCE'S

The "Golden Medical Discovery" makes rich, red blood, invigorates the stomach, liver and bowels and through them the whole system. Skin affections, blotches, boils, pimples and eruptions—result of bad blood are [illegible] by this alterative extract as thousands have testified.

Mrs. Jewett Was Hostess.

Miraflores, the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Kennon Jewett, was the scene of a lovely luncheon party yesterday when Mrs. Jewett entertained the girls who are members of her Sunday school class in the First Church of Christ, Scientist. Fall flowers decorated the rooms and the luncheon table, among the varieties dahlias, marigolds and chrysanthemums. Covers were laid for Miss Edna Davis, Miss Lucy Lloyd, Miss Marion Lloyd, Miss Josephine Hamilton, Miss Sara Hamilton, Miss Helen Kingman, Miss Alethe Shoup, Miss Clarabelle Fisher, Miss Marguerite McKesson, Miss Adele Smith, Miss Geraldine Ellis, Miss Florilla Curtis and Miss Chell Hallock, all members of the class, and Miss Ruth Mills, Miss Ethel Anderson, the Misses Ruth and Hazel Davis and Miss Grace Ball.

Euterpe Club Tea

Mrs. Charles A. Baldwin and other members of the committee which is being formed to further the interests of the school of music of Colorado college, gave a tea at the beautiful Baldwin home at Broadmoor yesterday to the members of the Euterpe club, an organization of the pupils of the school that has been formed to care for the interests of the scholars, the wholesome nature of which is well expressed in its motto, "Good Work and Lend-a-Hand." This club, it is intended, shall have full charge of the social life of the school, a fostering of which can do so much to promote good will and enthusiasm. Moreover, one of its duties will be to create constant opportunities for recital work, both among themselves and in public, a part of musical education which the faculty considers of great importance toward achieving one of the main objects of the school, to promote good music and appreciation of the same in the schools and homes throughout the country.

Among the prominent society women who lent their presence yesterday toward making the afternoon pleasant and successful were the hostess, Mrs. Chester Alan Arthur, Mrs. Clarence Phelps Dodge, Mrs. Sidford Hamp and Mrs. Percy Hagerman. Dean Edward Danforth Hale and Mrs. George M. Howe, of the faculty of the school of music, were present and Mr. Baldwin gave great pleasure with his explanations, historical and otherwise of the splendid trophies of travel, pictures and other objects of unusual interest that are housed at palatial Claremont.

To Occupy Briarhurst.

The many friends of Dr. and Mrs. William A. Bell of Pendle court, Bletchingly, Surrey county, England, are delighted to learn that Dr. and Mrs. Bell intend to visit America this fall and will occupy their handsome home, Briarhurst, at Manitou, for six months or more, after October 15.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Alan Arthur entertained at dinner at their home on Wednesday evening in honor of the birthday of Mrs. Francis W. Goddard. Their guests were Mrs. Goddard, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Baldwin, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hagerman, Mr. Cholmondeley Thornton, Mrs. Stacey Richmond and Mr. Gordon Russell Thayer.

Reception and Tea.

Mrs. J. McKeen Ferriday was a gracious hostess at her Broadmoor home on Tuesday afternoon, when she gave an informal reception and afternoon tea to more than 50 of her friends, between the hours of 4 and 6 o'clock, and gave them the pleasure of greeting Mrs. Gregory McLaughlin, one of the summer's brides, who received with the hostess. Palms and ferns were used as a background for the fashionable function and magnificent yellow chrysanthemums were on the tea table and in vases in various rooms.

Mrs. Chaloner Schley, Mrs. Charles Farnsworth and Mrs. Charles Leaming Tuft presided in the dining room for the hostess and were assisted by Mrs. Douglass G. Colley-MacNeill of Mexico City, Mrs. Francis D. Pastorius, Mrs. William Randol, Mrs. Edward A. Rosenfeld, Mrs. Jefferson Hayes Davis, Mrs. Victor W. Hungerford, Mrs. William Irving Howbert and Miss Anna Eyre.

Lovely Autumn Luncheon.

In honor of her house guest, Miss Lutz of Washington, D. C., a beautifully appointed luncheon was given Wednesday by Mrs. Edward Harrison Heath at her home, Rockledge, in Manitou. The living rooms were decorated with branches of autumn vines, oaks and sumac in their brilliant shades, and the luncheon table was centered with a large bowl of yellow and gold nasturtiums. Around the table were the honor guest, the hostess, Mrs. Louis A. Gidding, Mrs. Edgar M. Marbourg, Mrs. Charles Barnes Seldomridge, Mrs. William Wells Price, Mrs. Frederick A. Faust and Mrs. Ernest A. Cronin.

Auction Bridge Teas.

Mrs. W. Arthur Perkins demonstrated her charm as a hostess at two auction bridge parties and informal teas which she gave Thursday and Friday afternoons of the last week. On each occasion Mrs. Perkins arranged three tables of bridge and had additional guests for tea. Autumn leaves and nasturtiums adorned the living rooms and the tea table was decorated with pink carnations. On the first day Mrs. Perkins was assisted at the tea and coffee urns by Mrs. Ralph O. Giddings and Mrs. Harry T. Lowe, who were assisted in serving by Miss Harriet Sheafor and Mrs. Samuel H. Kinsley. On the second afternoon, Mrs. John W. Sheafor and Mrs. J. E. Carruthers presided at the tea table, assisted by Mrs. Kinsley and Mrs. James P. Shearer.

Will Become Benedict.

The rector of St. Andrews Episcopal church, Manitou, the Rev. Charles H. Remington, announced at vestry meeting at his church last Monday evening, his engagement and approaching wedding to Miss Julie Denckla of Denver. The wedding will be celebrated early in the new year and Manitou residents, many of whom have met the bride-elect, look forward to her coming with pleasure.

Barnes-Crane.

Mr. Harold Barnes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clement H. Barnes, was married in Oklahoma City on Tuesday to Miss Gertrude Crane, and arrived in the Springs with his bride on Wednesday evening. The young couple are enjoying their honeymoon in the mountains, and the following account of their wedding, taken from the Oklahoman, will be of interest to their many friends here:

Miss Gertrude Crane, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Crane of 319 West Thirteenth street, and Mr. Harold Barnes of Colorado Springs, Colo., were united in marriage at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in St. Pauls cathedral, the Very Reverend William Neely Colton, dean of the cathedral, officiating at the service, at which only members of the bride's family, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Crane, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas B. Crane and three house guests, the Misses Dorothy Blinn of Adrian, Mich., Miss Beth Jordon of Saco, Me., and Miss Margaret Burrows of Denison, Tex., were present.

Following the ceremony in the church a supper of handsome appointments was served at 5:30 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas B. Crane, 407 West Sixteenth street. Covers for 36 guests were laid at one long table, arranged in the shape of a T, with the bride and groom surrounded with members of the former's family, seated at the head. The decorations were all pink. At frequent intervals were placed large baskets of Killarney roses and lilies of the valley, the handles tied with bows of delicate pink satin ribbon. Roses were entwined about the baskets and were strewn the entire length of the table. A very large basket adorned the bride's end of the table which was illuminated with pink-shaded candles. At the close of the supper, the bride cut her cake, wreathed with small pink roses.

Miss Crane was married in a very smart traveling gown of dark navy blue silk, the bodice formed of blue marquisette laid over white lace, with a flowered velvet ribbon just above the waist-line, and overlaid with the marquisette to give a touch of contrasting color. Her hat in two tones of blue was trimmed with a single uncurled ostrich feather in the back and a small American Beauty rose laid on the front of the brim. She wore a corsage bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. William H. Crane had a very handsome gown of heavy white charmeuse, with shell pink silk net, bordered with a design of black and silver in delicate tracery, forming the upper part of the bodice and a tunic. Pendant crystal beads hung from the lace on the bodice, partially concealing the waistline. Mrs. Douglas Crane's gown was a becoming one of yellow brocaded satin, with overdraperies of shadow lace. Miss Blinn wore a blue crepe de chine with a bodice of cream lace. Miss Jordon had a beautiful gown of pink charmeuse, the bodice veiled with white accordion-pleated silk net which also formed a tunic. Miss Burrows wore a very simple and effective gown of white crepe de chine, with a cluster of violets in the bodice draperies.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes left at 7:20 o'clock for Colorado Springs, Colo. They will spend two weeks of their honeymoon in a bungalow in the mountains, and will make their home in Colorado Springs. Mr. Barnes is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clement H. Barnes of that city. It was while Miss Crane was paying a visit to an uncle and aunt there more than a year ago that their acquaintance, which culminated in the wedding of yesterday afternoon, had its beginning.

Miss Crane has been away from Oklahoma City much of the time during the past three or four years, attending school during the winter months and traveling rather widely in the summer.

To Visit Home Folk.

Amy Ahrens is coming home. Not to stay very long, but long enough for her friends to have a chance to hear her play and to tell her how very proud they are of the unusual distinction she has won in Germany by her skill on her violin. A child of 15 when she left here five years ago, she has studied diligently, with purpose and with affection for her chosen instrument and the results she has demonstrated are remarkable to a wonderful degree.

Amy Ahrens is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Ahrens of this city. She is another of the violin pupils of Mr. Edwin Dietrich, to attain fame. She appeared in concert in Berlin last year and by her playing won a free scholarship in the Scharwenka-Klindworth conservatory, the first honor of that kind ever won by an American. Serato, the great Italian violinist, is her teacher and predicts a great future for her. Following are some translations of the appreciative things the German papers said about the Colorado Springs girl on the occasion of her debut, though they are not perhaps so attractive as in the original:

From "Signale"—"Last evening Amy Ahrens made her debut in the Singakademie. The concert player possesses such intensive musical and violinistic qualities that her playing of the E major Handel Sonata and Corelli's 'La Folia' afforded great pleasure."

From "Morgen Post"—"On the evening before appeared a young artist, Amy Ahrens, who is without doubt very talented. She played with noticeable surety in respect to her conception and the rendering of all according to the style."

From "Local Anzeiger"—"Last evening in the Singakademie was found in the young violinist, Amy Ahrens, who made her debut, a rare talent which leads to the greatest hopes. The young artist plays all the singing parts with much feeling, full of life and very beautiful in tone, especially the Corelli and Bruch D minor were most beautifully played and with great sureness of style.

The violinist will reach Colorado Springs about the 20th of this month, as she sails from Bremen next Tuesday. She is to appear as soloist with the world-famous Philharmonic orchestra in Berlin, in January, consequently her stay on this side will be short. Her friends are arranging a concert, when she will be heard at The Burns, in November.

California Girl's Wedding.

Miss Laura Ethel Mosier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Mosier of Los Angeles, who have spent the summer in Colorado Springs, was married on Thursday at noon to Mr. Edward Moorhead of Tulsa, Okla., at Mrs. Amelia Bartlett's home on North Cascade avenue, which Mr. Mosier and his family have occupied during their stay here. The Rev. Merle N. Smith of the First Methodist church read the ceremony which was witnessed by the family and a few close friends. An altar of beautiful pink chrysanthemums and palms and ferns had been fashioned for the ceremony. There were no attendants.

The bride was gowned in white satin trimmed with Princess lace and carried an arm bouquet of bride roses and valley lilies.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the Antlers hotel when covers were laid for those who witnessed the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Mosier, the Rev. Mr. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Lewis of Cripple Creek, Mrs. Eleanor Graham of Cripple Creek and the bride and bridegroom.

Mr. Moorhead and his bride left the same afternoon for a wedding trip in the east and will afterward go to Tulsa, Okla., to make their home.

Dougherty-Twitty

The wedding of Miss Maude Dougherty, daughter of Mrs. Belle Dougherty, 1123 North Cedar street, and Mr. Joseph E. Twitty, also of this city, was celebrated Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Samuel Garvin of the First Presbyterian church in the presence of relatives and a few close friends. The couple stood for the ceremony in front of a canopy made of clematis and smilax. Miss Gilbert played "Oh, Perfect Day" very softly during the reading of the ceremony.

The bride was gowned in white net made over white satin and carried a bouquet of bride roses and maidenhair fern.

After the ceremony, a three-course supper was served, the bride's and bridegroom's table being centered with a lovely cluster of white snapdragons and green smilax.

The newlyweds will spend their honeymoon in the Pikes Peak region and after the first of the year will go to Jacksonville, Fla., to make their home.

The bride is a graduate of the state normal school at Greeley and last year taught very successfully a kindergarten class at Rouse, Colo.

Mummah-Nolte.

An attractive church wedding which took place Wednesday at noon was that of Miss Glen Esta Mummah, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Mummah, to Mr. Henry Edward Nolte, son of Mrs. E. Nolte, all of this city. The ceremony was read in the First Christian church and palms, ferns and vases of white carnations made an artistic setting for the nuptial service. The Rev. Swan E. Brewster, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony.

Mr. Nelson Brett presided at the organ and just before the entrance of the bridal party the bride's younger brother, Dale Mummah, sang De Koven's "Oh, Promise Me." Mr. Brett played the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin as a processional and the Mendelssohn Wedding March as a recessional.

The bride was attired in a tailored suit of white serge and wore a white plush picture hat with long blue ostrich plumes drooping over the left shoulder. Her bouquet was a shower of bride roses and valley lilies.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was held at the home of the bride's parents on South El Paso street. Pink and white sweet peas and smilax adorned the breakfast table and a pink and white color scheme was prettily carried out. Covers were laid for the bride and bridegroom, Mrs. E. Nolte, Mrs. L. E. Mummah, Miss Alice Nolte, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Spooner, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph A. Mummah, Mrs. O. A. Mattison, Miss Erma Korsmeyer, Masters Dale and Gladstone Mummah, Alden and Ralph Spooner.

When the bride's cake, a handsome model of pastry and icing, with a wedding altar on it, had been cut and the good luck slices distributed, the bride donned her going-away suit of black and white cloth, black velvet hat with white French plume and white gloves and the young couple left for a wedding trip in the east. They will be at home to their friends in a cottage they have taken on Willamette avenue, after November 1.

The bride was born in Colorado Springs and has lived here all her life. She is a graduate of the local High school. She has a soprano voice of unusual sweetness, is identified with the choir of the First Christian church and is often heard on public programs. The bridegroom is a business man of energy and integrity, and is associated with the Sun Drug company.

WOMAN'S CLUB NEWS

Club Celebrated Birthday.

The Womans Study club of Colorado City celebrated its fifth birthday last Monday evening by giving a juvenile party to its members, each one being required to dress in accordance with the number of years she had been a member of the club. The affair was held at the parish house of the Church of the Good Shepherd, and the rooms were elaborately decorated with the club colors, lavender and white, and the club flower, the columbine. The evening's entertainment consisted of juvenile pieces, cleverly spoken; juvenile songs, individual and ensemble, and other stellar stunts on the part of the pro tem "little ones." Infants from one month to the entire five years were represented in the membership and long dresses, pinafores, Teddy Bears, dolls and go-carts, bibs and rattles, were all in evidence.

The evening opened with a grand march, when the guests each deposited five pennies in a birthday box as a gift to their club, and closed with the Virginia reel. The center of the dining table was occupied by a handsome birthday cake of two stories, iced in lavender and white and bearing five flaming candles.

Around the cake was a wreath of columbines. Mrs. L. A. Miller, who first organized the club, cut the first slice from the cake. Other charter members present were Mrs. V. O. Penley, Mrs. C. D. Taylor and Mrs. B. F. Irvin. The refreshments served included animal crackers, stick candy and cocoa with marshmallows floating in each cup. Among the members present were Mrs. Lamont, Mrs. Lewis, Miss Ruby Huff, Mrs. Miller, Miss Pearl Huff, Miss Elizabeth Ammerman, Mrs. Blanche Harrison, Mrs. Rose Stocker, Mrs. Priscilla [illegible], Miss Leah Brewer, Miss Estelle Thill, Miss Mary Wolfe, Mrs. Epperson, Mrs. Fannie Godfrey, Mrs. Mabel Hemenway, Mrs. Rose Holtby, Miss Mary Joyce, Mrs. Hattie Lyons, Mrs. Nellie Pearson, Mrs. Florence Pearson, Thrasher, Mrs. Helen Ellinwood, Mrs. May Ammerman, Mrs. Carrie Brazil, Mrs. Elizabeth Borst, Mrs. Laeta Best, Miss Ella Cadwell, Mrs. Harriet Daniels, Mrs. Gene Vinyard, Mrs. Bertha Waldron, Miss [illegible] Smelser, Miss Ella Culver, Mrs. Josephine Cowgill.

Surprised Their Friends.

Miss Barcie A. Holman of Great Falls, Mont., and Mr. Ralph A. Mummah, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Mummah of this city, greatly surprised their friends this week by being married a week earlier than their wedding had been scheduled to take place. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Merle N. Smith of the First Methodist church at the parsonage at 8:30 o'clock on Saturday evening.

The young married couple announced their wedding at a dinner party which they gave in their new home at 735 South Nevada avenue, Sunday evening, to which they had bidden the following relatives:

Mrs. Mummah, mother of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Spooner, Mr. and Mrs. John Norgard, Mrs. O. A. Madison, Miss Glenn Mummah, Mr. Henry E. Nolte and the children, Mr. and Mrs. Norgard, Spooner and Mr. and Mrs. Mummah.

Girlish, Wrinkle-Free Skin Easy to Have

(From Pilgrim Magazine)

Since its remarkable astringent and tonic properties became known, clever women all over the world have been using the saxolite face bath to "tone up" their faces, remove wrinkles and draw flabby cheeks and neck back to normal. After using the solution, the face immediately feels much firmer. The skin tightens evenly all over the face, thus reducing lines and bagginess. The formula is: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pint.

Another wonderful facial beautifier and rejuvenator that has become quite a rage in the United States, as in Europe, is mercolized wax. Druggists report a great demand. The wax literally absorbs a sallow, blotchy or withered complexion, giving the fresh, vigorous, healthy-hued young skin underneath a chance to "breathe" and to show itself. Applying the wax at night, like cold cream, washing it off mornings, will completely renovate a poor complexion in a week or ten days. One ounce usually is sufficient. Adv.

SAID OF WOMANKIND

Women and music should never be dated.—Oliver Goldsmith.

Women are constantly the dupes, or the victims, of their extreme sensitiveness.—Honore de Balzac.

Women love always; when earth slips away from them they take refuge in heaven.—Anonymous.

One syllable of woman's speech can dissolve more of love than a man's heart can hold.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Love is a woman's teacher, developer, guardian. It sheds light upon her past as well as her future. Seeing what she has escaped, she learns what to shun.—Junius Henry Browne.

There is no compensation for the woman who feels that the chief relation of her life has been a mistake. She has lost her crown.—George Eliot.

He who trusts women plows the wind, sows on the barren sea, finds not the bottom of the hidden ocean, writes his recollections in the snow, draws water, like the Daraides, with pitchers full of holes.—Paul Flemming.

Her eyes are homes of silent prayer.—Alfred Tennyson.

There are some lips from which even the proudest women love to hear the censure which appears to disprove indifference.—Edward Bulwer Lytton.

Shakespeare has no heroes—he has only heroines.—John Ruskin.

Women need not be beautiful every day of their lives; it is sufficient that they have moments which one does not forget and the return of which one expects.—Victor Cherbuliez.

A girl of 16 accepts love; a woman of 30 invites it.—Antoine Ricard.

Who takes an eel by the tail, or a woman at her word, soon finds he holds nothing.—Proverb.

The happiest women, like the happiest nations, have no history.—George Eliot.

A woman is happy and attains all that she desires when she captivates a man; hence the great object of her life is to master the art of captivating men.—Count Lyof N. Tolstoi.

You may chisel a boy into shape, as you would a rock, or hammer him into it, if he be of a better material, as you would a piece of bronze. But you cannot hammer a girl into anything.—John Ruskin.

To a gentleman every woman is a lady in right of her sex.—Edward Bulwer Lytton.

Did you ever hear of a man's growing lean by the reading of "Romeo and Juliet," or blowing his brains out because Desdemona was maligned?—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

There is in every true woman's heart a spark of heavenly fire, which beams and blazes in the dark hours of adversity.—Washington Irving.

SOAP ON HAIR CAUSES DANDRUFF, SCALP GETS DRY, HAIR FALLS OUT

Girls! Get a 25-cent bottle and try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse"

After washing your hair with soap always apply a little Danderine to the scalp to invigorate the hair and prevent dryness. Better still, use soap as sparingly as possible, and instead have a "Danderine Hair Cleanse." Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one strand at a time. This will remove dust, dirt and excessive oil. In a few moments you will be amazed, your hair will not only be clean, but it will be wavy, fluffy and abundant, and possess an incomparable softness and luster.

Besides cleansing and beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; stimulates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

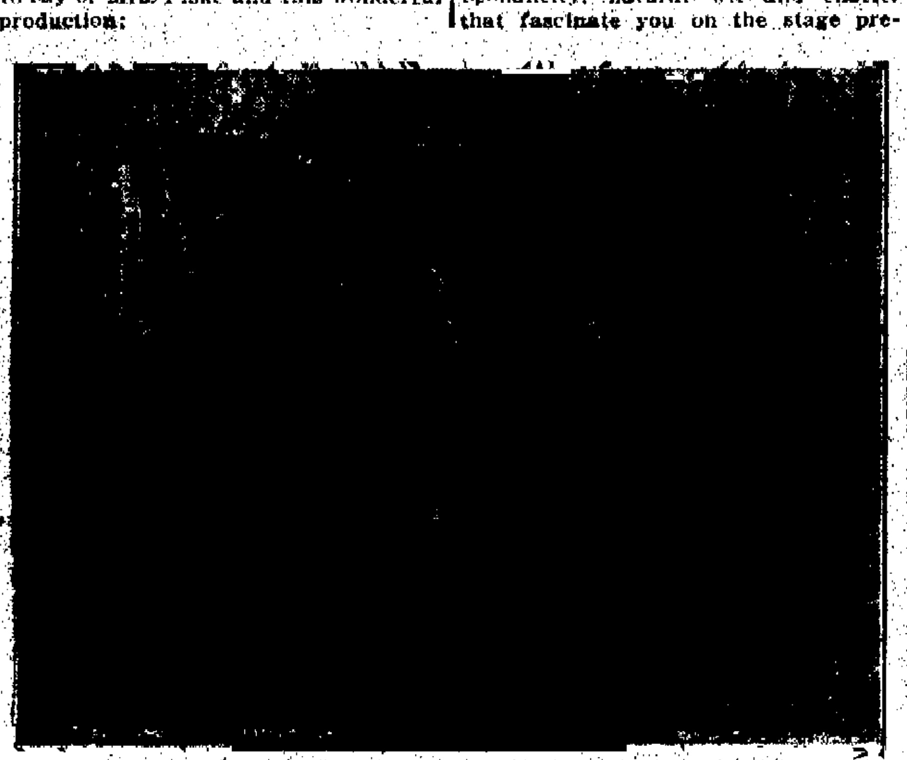
Men! Ladies! You can surely have lots of charming hair. Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it. Adv.

At The Theatre

AT THE PRINCESS THEATER MONDAY AND TUESDAY

The management of the Princess announces the opening of the winter season at Colorado Springs' most popular picture house commencing tomorrow, Monday, October 6. The many, many good things that are in store for the patrons will be announced from week to week. To open the season they will release without a doubt the greatest production ever taken for the moving picture camera. Everyone knows Mrs. Fiske, the greatest artiste of the generation, and Daniel Frohman, who will present her in "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" at this theater on tomorrow and Tuesday, claims that it is without doubt the greatest picture ever produced. The play is taken from Thomas Hardy's famous drama and follows the book very closely.

Some of the noted critics have this to say of Mrs. Fiske and this wonderful production:



ONE OF THE SCENES SHOWING MRS. FISKE AS TESS, IN "TESS OF THE D'URBERVILLES," AT THE PRINCESS, MONDAY AND TUESDAY.

Mrs. Fiske's Glory ennobles the traditions of the American stage.

Tess of the D'Urbervilles will thrill as long as human emotions control us.

Mrs. Fiske's art elevates the theme to realms of genius and renders an inspired portrayal.

The Princess theatre has contracted with the Famous Players Film Co. for their entire output of exclusive pictures and every week they will show one or more of the greatest pictures that the world produces.

Please note that on Thursday and Friday October 9 and 10, will be shown Miss Helen Gardner in "A Sister to Carmen." This picture is said to be by far the best that Helen Gardner has ever taken [illegible] and it will stand you [illegible] of this week.

Following is a synopsis of "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," in which Mrs. Fiske takes the part of Tess.

Parson Tringham traces the genealogical history of John Durbeyfield and discovers that he is the lineal descendant of the ancient and knightly family of the D'Urbervilles. [illegible] always, John Durbeyfield, [illegible] himself [illegible] a life of ease and [illegible]. Tess, his eldest daughter, a beautiful girl who has inherited [illegible] the weaknesses and passions of her ancestors. One day at a May[illegible] Tess is attracted to Angel Clare, [illegible] to the [illegible] who [illegible] diffidence, dances with [illegible] Tess. To advance the [illegible] of her family, Mrs. Durbeyfield conceives the idea of sending Tess to claim relationship with the [illegible] and [illegible] D'Urbervilles of the adjacent county. Tess encounters Alec D'Urberville, who is [illegible] her immediately and engages her for work on his farm. [illegible] Alec deceives Tess [illegible] shame and humiliation she returns home, where her child is born [illegible] dies, and Tess makes a determined struggle to reclaim her womanhood. She obtains employment at a dairy farm where she again [illegible] Angel Clare. The two fall in love [illegible] Tess' future begins to [illegible] happiness. [illegible] she decides to write Angel of her former false step, and places the note under his door. He never finds her confession, but, convinced that he has read it and forgiven her, she, after his continued solicitation, consents to marry him.

After the [illegible] Angel tells Tess of a former fall from grace, and Tess promptly forgives him. He takes her in his arms, and in the [illegible] thinking he already knows the bitter fact, she proceeds to relate her indiscretion with Alec D'Urberville. Angel is shocked by the revelation and leaves Tess until he can bring himself to forgive her.

Destitute and despairing, Tess is again found by D'Urberville. He offers her protection and support and, discouraged by Angel's desertion, she again pays the price for existence. In the meantime Angel's old love for Tess reasserts itself and he determines to return. He finds her in luxury and splendor in D'Urberville's home. Tess is torn with despair [illegible] last chance for happiness [illegible] and when D'Urberville [illegible] her concerning Angel she seizes a knife and in insane anger kills him. She overtakes Angel, and together they seek shelter in the ruins of an old Druid temple. Her crime is detected, she is followed and traced, and confronted by her pursuers. Hopelessly she surrenders herself to the law.

In a grim, gray prison, safe at last from the world that had tempted and cursed her, Tess spends the remaining years of her life with her broken heart and shattered hopes, a martyr to man's wrong.

AN INTERVIEW WITH GRACE CAMERON

Grace Cameron on the stage and Grace Cameron off the stage are one and the same persons. Miss Cameron, having forsaken comic opera, is now making a tour of the Sullivan & Considine vaudeville circuit. That same sponanelty, natural wit and chatter that fascinate you on the stage predominates in her dressing room as well. There are no affected airs about Miss Cameron. She is the most natural girl in the world, notwithstanding the flattering compliments she has been receiving the many years. She moves and has her being in the ultra-fashionable society as well as in the society of Bohemia.

I found Miss Cameron at the Empress in her dressing room, where the odor of many flowers permeated the room and left no trace of the smell of grease paint.

"I'm just crazy about roses," said she, "especially pink ones, as pink is my favorite color." As proof of her statement, she showed pretty pink covers for the chairs, her trunks and dressing table and a pink scarf around the mirror. Certainly the little tasty decoration lent a home-like touch to the room where rouge, eye sticks, talc and cold cream usually predominate.

"How do you like vaudeville?"

"Oh," replied this diminutive little person, "I'm simply crazy about it. I don't think there is a person in the world happier than I am in vaudeville. Honestly, it doesn't seem like work to me at all. The audience don't seem to think I'm working either. We just laugh together and enjoy ourselves and in that way my act is over so quickly that I hardly realize how much time I've spent out there. Of course I get hungry for comic opera, but I don't know that I shall ever go back to it. Naturally having spent so much money on the cultivation of my voice, I feel [illegible] sorry that people seem less interested in music (good music) than they were once. It is certainly true, that the average audience today would rather giggle than listen to grand opera."

"This is mother," she broke off, and handed me a picture of a sweet, motherly little woman, whose picture was surrounded by a costly frame. "It seems that mother will never grow old," she said with just a suspicion of a break in her voice. "She still has the spirit of a young girl. She has but two interests in the whole wide world—her family and her missionary work. Once when home I chanced to look in mother's book filled with names of wealthy [illegible] who contributed toward the aid of the poor and sick as well as the heathen in foreign lands. These very generous souls were contributing 25 cents to 50 cents each. That got my 'goat.' I decided to give a couple of [illegible] just for mother and gave the [illegible] to her missionary fund and that took these quasi-society folk off their feet as this amounted to more than the work of mother's entire missionary society for a year."

Just as I was deeply interested in Miss Cameron we were informed that Miss Cameron was next, and with a hearty "awfully glad to have met you. Don't be strange, call around again," I saw the last of one of the brightest and most vivacious little women I have ever interviewed, Grace Cameron.

Medical inspection is a business proposition. In a town with 250 children, it is said for instance, there would be an annual saving of $5,250 if by thorough medical inspection the curable physical defects that handicap school children could be remedied.

Additional Society

Glen Eyrie Chapter.

Glen Eyrie chapter No. 5, Order of the Eastern Star, held one of the most enjoyable meetings of the year on Thursday evening. Mrs. Della Taylor, worthy matron, gave an interesting report of the proceedings of the grand chapter which she attended at Grand Junction recently. Following the talk of the worthy matron, past grand patron, Judge McCoach, made a clever speech of presentation and on behalf of the chapter gave Mrs. Mary Nealon Potter, past grand matron, a lovely gold-mounted umbrella. Mrs. Potter will leave soon for her winter home at San Antonio, Tex., and the gift was a farewell token.

After the chapter closed a delicious lunch of peaches and cream, cake and coffee, were served, the peaches having been sent to the chapter by Dr. and Mrs. Weston, former members.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. BURDENSOME NAMES OF HELPLESS BABIES

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The most burdensome name possibly ever bestowed on a child was that given by Arthur Pepper, a laundryman of West Derby, Liverpool, to his daughter, born in December, 1882. It comprised one name for every letter of the alphabet, and was certainly ingenious in its way, running: Anna Bertha Cecilia Diana Emily Fanny Gertrude Hypatia Inez Jane Kate Louise Maud Nora Ophelia Quince Rebecca Starkey Teresa Ulysses Venus Winifred Xenophon Yetty Zeno. P, of course, was provided in the surname, Pepper.

Hundreds of examples of the poor form of parental wit occur in London entries for the last few years. Noah's Ark Smith, Sardine Box, Jolly Death, Judas Iscariot Brown, One-too-Many Johnson, Not-Wanted Smith, Bovril Simpson, Merry Christmas Piggett, Odious Heaton, Anno Domini Davis, are the names of children probably living who will have to bear them through life, unless they wash themselves clean with subterfuge.

There was for a long time a curiosity in nomenclature on the Australian pension list. His name was "Through-much-tribulation-we-enter-the-Kingdom-of-Heaven Smith." The officials of the pension department very pardonably abbreviated him into "Tribby Smith." Has any diligent student of the United States pension list discovered anything that caps this?

It is not surprising that the names of Dicken's characters—odd though they are—should be found in real life, for it was from life that many of them were taken. Some, as we know, were copied from the names over shop doors, etc., but this was not the novelist's only source of selection. Among his papers John Forster found carefully drawn up lists of names, with the source from which he obtained them, and the longest lists were those drawn from the "Privy Council Education Lists." Some of the names thus noted are too extravagant for anything but reality—Jolly Stick, Bill Marigold, George Muzzle, William Why, Robert Gospel, Robin Scrubbam, Sarah Goldsacks, Catherine Two, Sophia Doomsday, Rosetta Dust, Sally Gimlet!

For quaint surnames one should search the records of Northumber England. A. G. Bradley has m collection of some of these North brian patronymics. He is writing the times of the Border raids, there was a Robert Unthank in days. Among others, too, we find name of Adam Aydrunken, who " his boat in the Tyne, and accid drowned his wife, Beatrice." "C the wife of John Unkuthman (unco man), cut her throat with a ra The incident requires no explan "Another unfortunate person figure Adam-with-the-nose."

'FUR WILL FLY' WHEN TEAMS OF M'GRAW AND MACK, TWO GREATEST BASEBALL LEADERS, MEET TUESDAY

Manager of Detroit Tigers Compares the Giants and Athletics

By HUGHEY JENNINGS

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—John McGraw, the "Little Corporal of Baseball," as he is called by the sporting writers, and Connie Mack, my keenest rival in the American league, will again match their cunning and maneuvering skill in another clash for the world's baseball championship beginning on October 7.

This will be the third meeting between the two great leaders, and the struggle for the highest honors that can be obtained on a baseball field will be an interesting one, probably running into seven games before the blue ribbon event falls either to New York or Philadelphia. Both McGraw and Mack command the best teams in their respective league, and after a strenuous campaign they have brought the pennant flags home—McGraw to the Polo grounds and Mack to Shibe park. Each man has won the pennant in his league on five different occasions.

There is little to choose between McGraw and Mack. These two great generals have long since niched their names in the "Hall of Fame" as baseball leaders, and their ability on the diamond is known the world over. Any time Mack and McGraw meet the fur will fly and this year both the Wizard Connie and the Little Napoleon are more than anxious to carry off the big end of the purse which goes to the winner.

McGraw and Mack have each defeated the other once in their two previous meetings and this year they will fight hard for the odd contest and the glory that goes with winning a world's championship.

The Struggle in 1905.

The first battle between McGraw and Mack was staged in 1905. That year's world's series resulted in a victory for the Giants because of Mathewson's wonderful pitching. Matty was then in his prime and the Athletics failed to score a run off Big Six in the three games that he pitched against them. The following year the veterans of the Giants and White Elephants began to slow up and then the two rivals in the approaching world's series began to weed out the deadwood of the team and inject new blood into their squad. By consistent and skillful handling of his youngsters Mack succeeded in capturing the American league race again in 1910. Then he prang [illegible] to beat the Chicago Cubs including the famous Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance combination for the world's title.

McGraw's success with his youngsters came in the following year. In 1908 the Giants really won the pennant, but were beaten out by a technicality. After winning the National league bunting in 1911 McGraw and his young team battled with the Athletics for the world's championship and went down to defeat in six games. Franklin Baker played an important part in triumphing over the Giants with his famous home runs, which earned for him the title of "Good Night" Baker.

McGraw still has the edge on Mack in the number of games won and lost between the two. In 1905 the Giants won four combats out of five while in 1911 the White Elephants triumphed over the Giants in six battles winning four and losing two.

A Point for McGraw.

Last year it was the "Little Napoleon" against J. Garland Stahl. The Giants' manager had the edge on the now deposed leader of the Red Sox as he had been through the mill before while the Chicago banker was a mere novice in world's series contests. But the Giants-Red Sox series is history now, the National league champions losing the world's title on an error in the eighth game.

McGraw and Mack manage their teams pretty nearly on the same basis. Connie sits back on the bench in a corner where only a few persons except the players on the field can see him. He watches every move the opposition makes and any little flaw in their defense he is quick to seize. A score card and pencil also keeps the Athletics' manager busy on the bench.

McGraw has a slight advantage over Mack and this is that he coaches his team from the side lines. The Little Napoleon is always on the coaching line leading his men on. His coaching position has earned for him the name of the Little Napoleon.

McGraw Has One Advantage Over Rival, Connie, in His Pitchers

McGraw plays no favorites and when the Giants began to slump on the second western trip and Meyers had his thumb split some quick move had to be made to repel the attack of the onrushing Phillies. McGraw wanted a hard hitting and experienced catcher to fill the vacancy made by Meyers' injury. Someone on the team had to be sacrificed. Otie Crandall was the player the St. Louis club demanded in exchange for McLean. When McGraw makes a trade it is for the success of his team. McLean then became a member of the Giants and Long Larry's catching helped to keep the champions out in front.

Both the Giants and Athletics will be fit and ready for the coming world's series which begins next Tuesday. The Giants are a stronger team this year than the champions that opposed the Athletics in 1911. In Matty, Marquard, Tesreau and Demaree McGraw has a wonderful quartet of hurlers and the best pitching in either league. The Giants have been strengthened by the addition of George Burns in the outfield. Although I have never seen Burns play, several writers have informed me that the little outfielder is one of the best recruits that has broken into the big league.

Tilly Shafer will replace Herzog at third. The Cantaloupe King will be used at the far bag by McGraw when Plank officiates against the Giants. The rest of the Giants outside of the batteries are the same players that battled with the White Elephants two years ago.

The Athletics are not as powerful as the 1911 aggregation principally because of the weak pitching staff. Mack will use Bender, Plank and Brown against the Giants with Bob Shawkey or Bush in the relieving act. The Athletics still retain their wonderful $100,000 infield consisting of McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker.

Mack's new acquisitions to the outfield are Eddie Murphy and Walsh, two former outside players. Murphy has replaced his namesake Danny Murphy in right field. The veteran Murphy will be used by Mack as a pinch hitter. And Danny can still slam them over the fielders' heads although he has slowed up on the bases. Briscoe Lord who covered left field for the Athletics in 1911 is now with the Boston Nationals. Rube Oldring the New York boy is still Mack's old reliable in the outfield.

Walter Schang procured by the Athletics last year from the Buffalo team of the International league will do most of the catching for Mack's team. Schang proved his ability as a big leaguer since the beginning of the season and Mack is confident that he will hold his own against the speed boys of the Giants. Ira Thomas and Jack Lapp will break into the series if Schang fails to check the Giants on the bases.

Plank is in Form

The Athletics won their fifth American league pennant a week ago last Monday when they defeated my Tigers in both ends of the double-header. On this occasion Mack's team blanked my players in both games. Joe Bush, called "Cannon Ball Joe," accomplished the feat in the first game, and Pennock and Eddie Plank turned the trick in the second combat.

Before Plank relieved Pennock in the third inning of the second engagement I was of the opinion that he had lost [illegible] effectiveness from [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] Mack [illegible] pleased for pitchers when the Naps were [illegible] few games behind was compelled to use both Bender and Plank often and the strain soon told on the veteran southpaw. For a time Plank failed to pitch to form and on several occasions had to retire from the game.

But Eddie has again returned to his early season form. In the six innings that Plank worked against the Tigers on Monday the southpaw displayed his wonderful portside curves in his usual clever style and the Tigers were helpless before him. Eddie still retains his deceptive cross-fire delivery and the Giants will find him the same pitcher and a hard problem to solve.

The Philadelphia fans are not so boastful of the Athletics capturing the big series. They figure that Mack will surely steer his team to victory over McGraw and are willing to lay odds that the Athletics are returned the winners. But this remark generally follows after the Philadelphia fan gets through telling his friends how Mack's team is going to win, to-wit.

Will Miss Coombs

If Jack Coombs was on the bench and ready to take his turn in the box the Athletics would walk away with the world's championship.

The "Iron Man" and hero of the Philadelphia fans will not pitch against the Giants in the big series. This I learned while my team was playing in Philadelphia. I inquired about Coombs' condition. Also whether Coombs was having his arm massaged every day or so to enable him to pitch against the National league winners. From a reliable source I have learned that the Colby hurler will not be in good enough physical condition to begin a game against McGraw's team.

In 1911 Stuffy McInnis was injured. The Athletics won the last game that year from the Giants by a big score and McInnis played first base during the last inning.

And for a time I thought that the aggressive little firstbaseman would be unable to participate in the coming series. Reports sent out from Philadelphia stated that McInnis was badly crippled in a collision with Del Pratt of the St. Louis Browns at first base.

On arriving in Philadelphia from Washington I expected to find McInnis in a hospital but at Shibe park I was informed that he was going to play against us on that afternoon which was Saturday.

McInnis played [illegible] usual [illegible] game and materially assisted the Athletics in beating [illegible]. Stuffy hammered out a single [illegible] a run and accepted 11 chances, two of them figuring in double plays. This is pretty good work for a cripple and if Mack has a few more disabled members on his team I feel sorry for my old friend McGraw when the two teams clash.

The Athletics were on edge in the series against the Tigers and they slammed the ball to all parts of the grounds. In the last game they just walked up to the plate and kept the outfielders on the run. They scored 21 runs and made [illegible] hits.

REDUCED TO FIGURES, GIANTS LEAD ONLY IN PITCHING STAFF; 'BEAT BENDER—WIN SERIES'

NEW YORK, Oct 4.—According to time-honored custom, which has developed into a mania, baseball fans are busy reducing the coming world's series to figures. Many of them seem to think that past performances in baseball provide as much valuable material for future calculations as past performances on the turf. Few of the prophets and guessers who are trying to show why the Athletics or the Giants will come out on top keep in mind the fact that in a stretch of six or seven games many things may happen to upset form. Also that luck—good or bad—may turn the tide at the eleventh hour and that sometimes the better team is beaten through the well-known uncertainty of our national game.

The average baseball prophet probably is influenced by partisan feeling. There is so much rivalry between the major leagues that you can't find many American leaguers who think that the Giants have a chance while a search for National league sympathizers who favor the Athletics is a waste of time. It is assumed however that many of the baseball forecasters are unwilling to disclose their real opinions perhaps for the reason that such policy might cause ill feeling among friends. The various deductions therefore, unless based upon real inside knowledge or competent judgment are of not much value except to amuse or to keep up the interest until the big series begins at the Polo grounds next Tuesday.

The Athletics are heavier batters than the Giants and they will hit McGraw's pitchers," is the general prediction that emanates from American league followers.

"McGraw has four wonderful pitchers who will stop Mack's big hitters, while the Giants, if they beat Bender, will win the series sure," say National league partisans who earnestly try to figure the series without being blinded with prejudice.

What do unofficial batting averages of the men who probably will clash in next Tuesday's battle show? Here are the batting averages:

ATHLETICS

Player and Position	Batting Av.
McInnis first base	[illegible]
Collins second base	.344
Baker third base	330
Barry shortstop	.266
Oldring center field	281
E. Murphy right field	292
Schang catcher	260

GIANTS

Player and Position	Batting Av.
Merkle first base	264
Doyle second base	273
Herzog third base	287
Shafer third base	284
Fletcher shortstop	297
Snodgrass center field	291
Murray right field	261
Meyers catcher	307

Of as much interest no doubt are the unofficial pitching records of the rival boxmen who are expected to hook up in the series. They follow:

GIANTS

Pitcher	W	L	Pct
Demaree	14	7	674
Marquard	23	10	697
Mathewson	24	11	686
Tesreau	21	12	618

ATHLETICS

Pitcher	W	L	Pct
Bender	19	9	679
Bush	1[illegible]	[illegible]	6[illegible]0
Plank	17	10	630
Brown	18	11	621
Shawkey	6	[illegible]	545

Here is Mack's poorest boxman [illegible] [illegible] stands next to Walter Johnson in the latest American league pitching averages with 15 victories and [illegible] defeats, a percentage of 750. Mack said last week that he didn't expect to use him in the series [illegible] sure to take his turn.

Mack is not revealing his plans however to anybody. While it is generally believed that Chief Bender will pitch the first game, particularly if McGraw sends Matty [illegible] the box, it [illegible] surprising if the Athletics' manager springs a surprise by assigning [illegible] to Shawkey to the task. [illegible] will be pitted against Marquard unless Mack has some other arrangement [illegible].

[illegible] [illegible] Good [illegible] before you [illegible] stomach hasn't teeth [illegible] with [illegible] I swallowed two last summer.

Denver Swamped by 60 to 6 Score; H. S. Shows Strength

Coach Acker's Terrors went through the acid test yesterday afternoon on Washburn field and came out victors over West Denver High school by the score of 60 to 6. The score does not adequately express the relative strength of the teams—it should have been 100 to 6. The afternoon's frolic was no contest—it was an exhibition

HARRY HOLMAN

Terror fullback, whose vicious plunging and hard hitting on the defense, was the feature of yesterday's game between the Terrors and the West Denver team.

From the first whistle it was seen that the light and green visitors were no match for the locals and during the second half Coach Acker tried out a number of "sneak" plays, as well as giving his defensive tactics a thorough tryout.

It was an entirely different team that won yesterday compared with the one that lost to the Tigers a week ago and the line charged with a vengeance that surprised coaches and spectators. Every man was in the game snarling and scrapping They hit hard and tackled low, two points about the game which the Denver players knew little.

Goal Endangered Twice.

Denver endangered the local goal but twice and only on flukes The enemy's scoring came in the first quarter when McBride stole a forward pass and skirted the west lines of the field for 60 yards. He vegged another in the third quarter but was stopped by Davis on his own four-yard line but the necessary punch was lacking and the ball went over to the Brown

The Terrors offense was startling in its speed Holman fullback proved himself a second Jack Taylor being a hard man to stop a good hole picker and the most consistent ground gainer for the locals "Dolly" Grey and "Ike" Nifong supported him brilliantly in both departments and it took the secondary defense's best work to stop them at all

Davis at quarterback ran the team with a dash that is encouraging His punting, quick low rollers to the side lines, was effective and his generalship with the forward pass was good As soon as the man was downed Davis rattled off his signals for the next play and the men jumped to their places knowing what was coming Another teaching of the Acker school

Forward Passes Feature

The Terrors forward passes were easily the game's features Coach Acker ordered them used frequently when he saw how the wind was blowing and Davis mixed [illegible] short long, crisscross and straight that befuddled the opposing eleven Lendrum on the [illegible] and [illegible] a knack of shooting the [illegible] straight to the [illegible] and is also a valuable player when carrying the ball himself being very hard to put down [illegible] Nifong running-mate also starred on the end-around play

The Terrors received the kickoff and marched down the field [illegible] line plunges and forward [illegible] taking the ball over the [illegible] after the first whistle Holman [illegible] goal Terrors [illegible]

The Terrors kicked to the Denver team but fumbles lost [illegible] and Holman made the [illegible] and kicked goal Then McBride [illegible] forward pass and [illegible] after a brilliant run [illegible] Terrors [illegible] West Denver [illegible]

LORD GOES TO BUSHES

BOSTON Oct 4 Bris[illegible] Lord former member of the Philadelphia Athletics and more recently of the local National league [illegible] the [illegible] release from Boston was announced today.

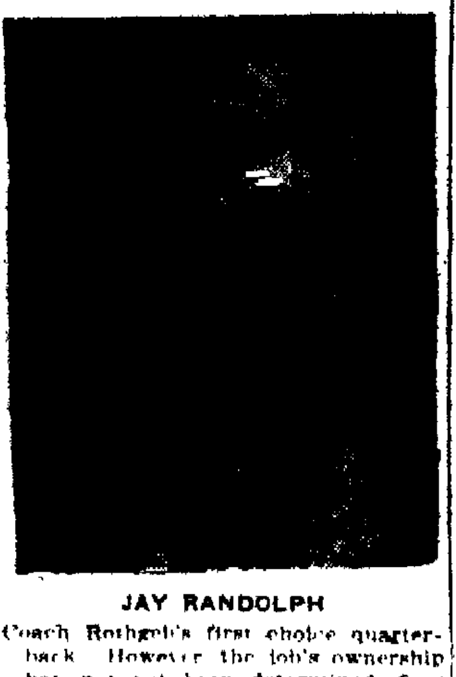
Down Alumni in Fast Mixup; Rothgeb's Tricks Good

Coach Rothgeb's little green team is no more! Instead of a squad of ordinary High school weight with little experience the Tigers this year will make up an evenly balanced scrapping crafty eleven that will worry every team in the conference The Tigers milled around with a so-called alumni team yesterday afternoon on Washburn field and walloped them by the score of 34 to [illegible] Goaded on by the coach the undergraduates uncorked some tricks that had opponents and spectators alike guessing and displayed line bucking, forward passes, interference, and defense that was high class

The alumni team was one of the strongest that the Tigers have faced for years because there were eight heavy and conditioned men recruited from the second and freshmen squads to fill up the depleted ranks of the grads The linemen were heavier than the Tigers

Backfield Decided.

For the first time Coach Rothgeb's backfield became practically certain It will consist of Taylor, right-half, Claybaugh, fullback, Cheese and Esmoll, left-half. Claybaugh showed up better than at any previous performance, while Taylor has already proved himself the most versatile man on the team Cheese's speed and Esmoll's line plugging ability takes care of the other half



JAY RANDOLPH

Coach Rothgeb's first choice quarterback However the job's ownership has not yet been determined, four candidates having been given tryouts yesterday

Live Subs Short.

There were no line substitutions yesterday as none were needed Four quarterbacks worked out Randolph Ross Kamer and Rich Probably the entire quartet will be given action probably with Randolph the first choice All of the quarterbacks handled punts in an unexpectedly clean manner and ran them back well

From end to end the line looked good but the greatest improvement came in the center position Mimmack spruced up considerably in his play against [illegible] while Gerlach and Rose were surprises Rose made two touchdowns on the cleverest trick-play worked at Washburn for years

The surprise of the game from the standpoint of the spectator came when Captain Harry Pick [illegible] the alumni [illegible] forward pass from the [illegible] and raced 40 yards down the field with Cheese's timely outdistancing his [illegible] This was the only alumni score [illegible] touchdowns Rose two, [illegible] Taylor one Claybaugh kicked a pretty goal from placement [illegible] yard line in the third quarter The big rangy man [illegible] [illegible] Kramer [illegible]

The Tigers will be strong on the ends this year Kramer and Bowers both heavy [illegible] holding down [illegible] The tackles [illegible] to the scrappers [illegible]

M'BETH PICKS GIANTS TO WIN SERIES, BUT SAYS THEY MUST HAVE LUCK BREAKS

Slugging of Mackmen Strongest Feature for Winning

By W. J. MOCBETH.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The world's series is with us once again. On Tuesday the Giants and Athletics hook up in the first scrap of the annual diamond classic Both are worthy of the great honor and capable of giving a very good account irrespective of victory.

As the popular pastice on the eve of such an event is to prophesy the result the writer will stick in an oar while the going is good. I think the Giants should win though I would not advise any of my friends to bet too heavily on the opinion Closest observation of the prospective rivals discloses the fact that they are just about as evenly matched as any pair that ever grappled for the highest honors of the pastime.

However I firmly believe New York should win and win as easily as did the Athletics last time these teams met in 1911 Connie Mack has the stronger club, perhaps outside the pitchers But the crafty pilot of the White Elephants' will be sorely put to it for reliable box men He has only two veterans, Bender and Plank, capable of shouldering the burden with any fair degree of success These two may or may not be on edge at the present moment It is a fact that Connie had to work them too much in his fight for the pennant. They have rested up well the past several weeks but can they come back anywhere near so strong as in 1911?

Mack's Pitchers No Better.

Certainly the two added years have not improved the cunning of Bender's good right arm or the trickery of Plank's portside sling Jack Coombs, who figured so prominently against the Cubs in 1910 and against the Giants in 1911 has passed out so far as next week's action is concerned Mack is in identically the same fix as was McGraw when they met before. He has only two seasoned pitchers The little Napoleon has four and a phenomenal recruit besides Al Demaree who tops the National league pitchers

The Athletics must be considered very dangerous customers They form an aggregation of sluggers that will worry the best of pitchers. American league rivals this year have scored many runs against the Athletics but could not hold in check the willows of the Mack men. I do not think in the Johnson circuit there was such a classy hurling corps as McGraw can muster. In such a short series pitching is perhaps the most decided factor and that I figure should give the Giants a great chance for the world's championship.

Master Matty Stronger.

Mathewson has been pointing up toward this gigantic tussle The marvel of the mound has just completed one of his most successful years. Chief Myers told me the other day he was sure "Big Six" would be as effective as he was against the Red Sox last fall. If he is the Athletics will be lucky to win off him. The old master should have won every start against Boston. Marquard is a greatly improved pitcher over 1911 and has had the experience necessary to rank him as one of the greatest world's series assets of all time. He had all the luck against Boston and turned off two victories. In neither game was he greatly pressed yet he was effective at all times and there was lacking in his performance the intense nervousness which marked his work in 1911. Marquard filled with confidence, is today at the pinnacle of his powers He is big enough and powerful enough to pitch the entire series if necessary. I cannot see how the Athletics who are usually easy for good southpaw tossing, can possibly stop the 'Rube' if the Giants stand up behind him and get him a couple of runs each start. Tesreau, hampered all season through wildness, seems finally to have regained control. He will bear watching.

Athletic Infield Is Best; Outfields a Tossup

The Athletics infield overshadows the Giants. It is acknowledged one of the greatest of all time. It will be much stronger than two seasons back for "Stuffy" McInnis will be cavorting around first base. Harry Davis hit well that series but covered little more ground than where his brogans rested. The Philadelphia quartet's claim to distinction lies principally in hitting ability. New York is little inferior in fielding skill and doubtless possesses far greater speed.

Outfield a Tossup.

The outfield is a tossup Mack doubtless has a hitting advantage here also on what has passed this campaign. But that is because McGraw's most dependable sluggers have failed to live up to past performances. McGraw's trio will hold up their own in fielding and will outshine their rivals in speed. In experience, too, New York has the call "Rube" Oldring is the only Mack gardener who has been thoroughly seasoned by world's series fire. Burns is the only Giant reamer who has not been put to the acid test.

Sterling Catchers.

Both teams are very staunch behind the bat Should anything happen to Chief Meyers there is Long Larry McLean to step into the breach. Here is one of the most reliable backstops to be had Mack has depended a great deal all season on Schang He has been a dandy catcher and everything said of recruits goes for him I think McGraw the better provided in substitutes The best tribute to his strength is the presence on the bench of such a mighty man as Charlie Herzog

Summing up then the teams are just about even up in fielding. Mack has the best hitters but McGraw the more speed The catchers are even up but McGraw has a distinct advantage in pitching strength. That and his speed should more than offset the superior hitting prowess of the White Elephants.

MAINE SURPRISES YALE BY HOLDING ELIS TO 0 TO 0 TIE

Big Eastern Teams Meet Weaker Schools Chicago Defeats Indiana 21-7 Harvard, 14; Bates, 0

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct 4—University of Maine's football team, which last Saturday was smothered by Harvard, 34 to 0, gave Yale the biggest surprise in years on Yale field this afternoon by holding the blue to a score of nothing to nothing. The Maine collegians, although rushed off their feet at times, presented a magnificent defense whenever the goal was threatened.

Yale's defense was excellent, and only once did Maine make first down—the last play of the game. Captain Ketchum of Yale played a brilliant game in his new position at left guard

HARVARD, 14; BATES, 0.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 4—Playing a conservative game, the Harvard football eleven registered 14 points against Bates and held their opponents without a score on the water-soaked gridiron of the stadium today.

At no time was the Crimson goal threatened and only once, when an onside kick netted 15 yards, did Bates gain first down.

CHICAGO, 21; INDIANA, 7.

MARSHALL FIELD, CHICAGO, Oct. 4—Chicago dedicated her new $200,000 athletic field this afternoon with a victory over Indiana by a score of 21 to 7. Indiana showed unexpected strength and the game was closer than the score would indicate, on two or three occasions the visitors lost the ball after they had placed it in the shadow of the Maroon goal.

COLBY EASY FOR DARTMOUTH

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 4.—Dartmouth's football team showed unexpected power and speed today, rolling up a score of 53 to 0 against the Colby team that defeated Brown last week.

CORNELL, 27; OBERLIN, 12.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 4—Cornell atoned for its 1912 defeat at the hands of Oberlin by trouncing the Ohioans today by a score of 27 to 12.

ELEMENT OF DANGER IN NEW ONSIDE KIC

Not So Many Men Free to F low Loose Ball as in Former Years

Hard to Keep Roughness O of Football if Latest Play Is Used

Eastern football critics claim t the new onside kick will increase stead of diminish the element of d ger in the game this year.

In 1912 the so-called "onside" was legislated out of the game, this fall the only important change football is that the original quart back or short kick of the middle has been returned. The "onside" k of the game as played since its round revision seven years ago crea a play on which all players of b teams except the man who kicked ball, were "onside" when the struck the ground. The older "onsi kick, and the one that now may used, is one that may be recovered the kicking side on the fly or bou before touching an opponent only b player who was behind the ball whe was kicked.

This year, under the rule allow the short kick only three members the attacking team can be behind kicker when the ball is punted, as s en men have to be up on the rush l but these three men will be allowed go down the field unmolested a they have crossed the line of scri mage That is in keeping with the to eliminate danger in forward p plays, the "on side" men on the ki can be interfered with only by an ponent making a bona fide atten to get the ball In other words the tack has an even chance with the fence

It surely will be interesting to what will happen on these short k plays Most of the coaches seem think that the play will be used li and that with the open defence plan for forward passes there will little use for the short kick beca of the better chance that the defend players will have to get to the first

But even on kicks that are not short, the ones that go bounding al the ground, the attacking players are "onside" still can recover the before it has been touched by an op nent This is the same condition obtained under the regulations of "onside" kick as it existed until thro out of the game after the 1911 seas only then ten members of the atta ing team were eligible to get the when it struck the ground, wher only three men can take it now.

There has come back into footbal least a portion of the same danger personal injury to the men that s rounded the use of the recently ab doned onside kick The scrambles the free ball cannot be made by many men as formerly, but they be in the game

On forward passes when the strikes the ground it becomes "de and play ceases The plays in wh the forward passes are made are rounded by safeguards so far as rule makers can surround them. new possibilities of the kicking g may prove to have little value and close to the rushline kicks used sel or not at all but when they are complications surely will arise opening even a few opportunities players to scramble for a free bou ing and rolling [illegible] not a forward or one [illegible] making game less dangerous to play.

Outfield Juggling Serious for "Little" Napoleon; Final Workout Monday

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Making the most of their last chance to tune up for the world's series in a regularly scheduled game, the Giant regulars had a lively workout against Philadelphia today, and showed again that a bat in their hands just now is a dangerous weapon. Seldom this season have they run up a greater total of hits than the 18 they made off Brennan and Marshall this afternoon.

Manager McGraw watched the safe drives blister the turf with a gleam in his eye that evinced his satisfaction at the prowess his men were displaying with the stick.

Four of the solid raps were for extra [illegible]. Fletcher hit for a [illegible] on a [illegible] and a single in five times up. [illegible] Merkle put the second circuit drive of the day to his credit. [illegible] Burns joined the hitters for [illegible] with a double.

In the field the Giants' play was [illegible], only Doyle and Snodgrass [illegible] a lack of the form that is expected of world series [illegible]. It is evident that Snodgrass' "charlie horse" is still bothering him, as he limped [illegible] in the short period he was in the game. Doyle gave evidence of almost complete recovery from the injuries he suffered in his automobile accident of last week, but still favored his [illegible] somewhat in throwing.

Doyle Certain to Play.

There is practically no doubt now that Doyle will get into the series, probably in the first game, although the chances are that if McGraw sees that his star second baseman is not in prime condition for the opening game on Tuesday he will put Arthur Shafer on second in that game and play Herzog at third.

That Doyle will guard the keystone position from the start if McGraw believes the strain will not affect his later work, however, seems a certainty. If it begins to look as if Snodgrass would not be able to get into the series, with both Doyle and Snodgrass out the Giant's manager would face an outfield problem, the solution of which might have an important effect on the series.

Shafer is the logical man for the place. He played the position for some time early in the season and has worked out there within the last few days. But he also is the logical man to fill any infield gap, and if McGraw were forced to put him on second in Doyle's place the "Little Napoleon" would have to depend upon a comparatively inexperienced man such as Cooper in the outfield—unless, indeed, he took a chance on a further shakeup in the infield, which is considered unlikely.

The Giants will have a final workout Monday at the Polo grounds in an exhibition game with the Philadelphia Nationals.

The occasion will be a "Field Day," with such entertaining side features as a [illegible]-yard dash in which Shafer, Thorpe and Lobert will compete.

McGraw decided tonight to give his regulars a stiff workout behind locked [illegible] at the [illegible]. He will give particular attention to the pitchers and give all hands a thorough batting drill.

WALTER JOHNSON AND DAUBERT WIN AUTOS

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—Jake Daubert, the Brooklyn first baseman, in the National, and Walter Johnson, Washington's famous pitcher, in the American, are winners of the automobiles offered to the players proving the most valiant [illegible] for the teams in 1913. The players were selected by a vote of a [illegible] of [illegible], and the result was announced today.

August Herrmann, chairman of the national committee, who reached here from Cincinnati today, declared "authorship" would come up early in the meeting of the commission on Monday. Players with literary aspirations who show a disposition to be tractable will find the commission ready to meet them half way, he intimated, but a truculent attitude would be met with a decided rebuke.

"I will send for Collins and Baker of the Athletics and McGraw, Mathewson, Marquard and Meyers of the Giants, who, we are informed, have announced that they will 'report' the world's series for several newspapers," said Chairman Herrmann. "The commission wishes to be perfectly fair, but at the same let that be understood, that if any player sees fit to defy the governing body, there will be serious trouble.

Rules Must Be Obeyed.

"The rules under which the world series will be played are not to be disobeyed. If any leniency is shown any player who actually can write their own copy and were under contract to newspapers before the commission's new rule was adopted, it will simply be a case of treating the matter with fairness, with the understanding, however, that in future years, if we have to settle the baseball championship, ball players will not try to be reporters.

"I haven't read Ban Johnson's plan to allow players to dictate their stories to stenographers at the commission's headquarters after each game. I've heard it discussed and when Johnson arrives here I shall ask for further information. Personally I believe the present tangle will work its own way out. The players, as a rule, are sensible fellows and realize that the world's series is of greater value to them than 'writing' for publication."

FINAL CURTAIN IN MAJORS IS DOWN; FARCE GAMES MARK CLOSING CONTESTS OF SEASON

Mack's Yannigans Lose, While M'Graw's Men Win Double Bill; Washington Victor

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The final curtain on the 1913 American league baseball season in this city was rung down today when Washington took the last game from the Boston Red Sox 10 to 9. The exhibition was a farce throughout, players of both teams indulging in comedy and giving their opponents an opportunity to fatten batting averages. Catchers and pitchers were turned into infielders, fielders took turns in the box. The day was "Army day," having been set aside in honor of the thousands of visiting cavalrymen who have been in camp in Winchester, Va., all summer. About 3,000 of the soldiers were on hand with two bands.

THE WOOL INDUSTRY IN AMERICA

From Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Few people realize the immensity of the wool industry in the United States and at the same time its relative insignificance when compared with other farm products. Although there are nearly 53,000,000 sheep, worth approximately $235,000,000, in the country, they represent less than five per cent of the total number of domestic animals on American farms, and only about 10 per cent of our farms raise any sheep at all. Yet almost 43,000,000 sheep are sheared every year and the resulting 289,000,000 lbs. of wool are worth over $65,000,000. Over 50 per cent of the sheep are on the large ranches of the west, especially in Wyoming and Montana.

JACKSON DROPS THIRD IN BATTING; COBB IS CROWDED

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—Joe Jackson dropped to third place among American league batters this week. Cobb still leads, but the Cleveland slugger must have found the pace too swift, for Olaf Henriksen, of Boston, back into the game once more, crowded into second place close on the heels of the Detroit man. Their unofficial averages are: Cobb, .391; Henriksen, .385, and Jackson, .367. Speaker of Boston is in fourth place with .351. The rest of the men hitting .300 or better are:

Collins, Philadelphia, .340; Baker, Philadelphia, .339; Gilhooly, New York, .337; Lajoie, Cleveland, .335; McInnis, Philadelphia, .321; Gandil, Washington, .320; D. Murphy, Philadelphia, .315; Lelivelt, Cleveland, .314; Crawford, Detroit, .314; Bauman, Detroit, .303; Stovall, St. Louis, .303. Milan, Washington, and Moeller, Washington, are still leading the base stealers, the former with 66 and the latter with 59. Walter Johnson tops the pitchers in games won and lost.

The first five rank:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Johnson, Washington	36	7	.837
Walsh, Chicago	8	3	.727
Houck, Philadelphia	13	5	.722
Wood, Boston	12	5	.703
Bender, Philadelphia	21	9	.700

BIG CHIEF (CHARLEY) BENDER

The veteran Indian twirler of the Philadelphia Athletics, who was one of the members of the team that was chiefly responsible for his club winning this year's American league pennant. Manager Mack is now putting Bender and his side partner, Eddie Plank, through a careful course of grooming for the purpose of shunting upon their shoulders the lion's share of the pitching in the coming world's series.

CUBAN FANS ARRIVE FOR WORLDS SERIES

Say They Are Adopting American Slang; Much Interest in the Game

NEW YORK, Oct. 4—Cuban "fans" are among the first to arrive here to see the world's baseball championship series. The leader of the party is Ely Martinez, president of the Almendares baseball club of Havana, and with him were three special correspondents representing Havana and provincial newspapers, as well as a few plain fans.

Although professional baseball in Cuba is really only about two years old, Senor Martinez said that three baseball clubs were now fully established in the city of Havana and tremendous interest in the game had developed, not only from a local standpoint but also towards the games in the United States.

"Of course the national language of baseball is American slang," said Senor Martinez, "and we use the same terms in describing points of the game. A fly is a fly and a strike is a strike. However, our people have not all caught on to the pronunciation of some of the words in vogue and you might not recognize what a 'hiles' is. It is the nearest some get to pronouncing a hit. The umpire calls 'one ball' and not 'uno bola.' When there is a dispute over a decision there is apt to be a medly of languages. In the game with the American team we have one American umpire, and the other is a Cuban.

"There are several Cuban players who have been doing well in this country on the big league teams. For instance there is Marsans of the Cincinnatis who is the manager of the Almendares. We call him the 'Cuban Ty Cobb,' and are very proud of him. He ranks second in stealing bases among the big professionals. Then there are two Cubans on the Washington team, Calvo and Acosta, who play ball at home in the winter."

ANTISKID RUBBER PLUGS FOR DANCING SHOES

Dancing shoes with nonskid rubber plugs in the soles are one of the strange results of the new eccentric dances, says the Popular Mechanics Magazine. The glassy, slippery dancing soles inherited from former generations are too dangerous for the new steps and many of the dancing pumps seen in the shoe stores today are equipped with safety friction spots.

BAR COLLINS AND BAKER IF "DOPE" RULE IS BROKEN

JOHNSON WARNS MACK TO PREVENT TROUBLE

Leader Says He Will Have Other Men; Connie Is Taciturn

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4. The Athletics, the new American league champions, practically wound up their training for the world's series in the game with the New York Highlanders today. For the first time in the last three occasions that his team has won the championship, Manager Connie Mack did not put his players through a severe course of preparation. In 1910 and 1911, the Athletics were driven hard in the week before the world's series by playing games with an all-star team of American league players.

An entirely different course was adopted by Mack this fall. After the pennant was clinched on September 22, he started to ease up on his regulars. This week he gave all his stars a lay off and sent a team of youngsters and veterans to Washington. Last Thursday the regulars got back into the game. Bad weather proved a handicap for two days. On Thursday the game was cut short by rain after four and one-half innings of play. On Friday it was cold and very windy and Mack used his best men in only the first game of a double header. Today the stars were taken out after [illegible] five innings and neither of the veteran pitchers, Bender or Plank, [illegible] to the rubber as expected.

Little [illegible] Monday.

The Athletics will get in some practice on Monday and they will leave here that afternoon in time to reach their headquarters in New York for dinner. Manager Mack in keeping with his usual policy, has declined to even intimate which pitcher he will use in the opening game on Tuesday.

Manager Mack received a letter from President Johnson, stating that Collins and Baker would not be permitted to take part in the world's series if they wrote or permitted use of their names to articles during the world's series.

Will Have Team in Field.

"I thing," said Mr. Mack, "that President Johnson's letter was written before he gave out his interview in Chicago on Friday that the players could write for the newspapers if they proved to the satisfaction of the National commission that they are capable of doing so. However, if the commission decides that the players must not write under any conditions and the players decide not to abide by the ruling, I will be prepared to put a team on the field against New York next Tuesday."

Should such a contingency arise as the barring of Baker and Collins, the chances are that Lavan would go to second, and Oldring, who was originally a third baseman, would take Baker's place.

FIND "PREHISTORIC" BALL

NOFOLK, Neb., Oct. 4.—A baseball, batted over into a corn field, 18 years ago, by E. K. Ballantyne, later sergeant-at-arms in the United States senate, was found yesterday when excavations were being made for a new building. The ball had completely turned to stone, but the seams and stitches were perfectly visible. A slight dent on one side marks the terrific wallop given the ball by "Ballantyne.

This was the first league baseball ever bought for North Nebraska and the game, which was being played between Tekamah and West Point, had to be stopped because the ball was lost.

ST. LOUIS GETS ALASKA SEAL CATCH

Important Decision by Secretary Redfield—World's Fur Center Now Moves to America

The United States government through Secretary of Commerce Redfield has just made a decision that will make St. Louis the fur center of the world.

That is to change the sale of all the government catch of seal skins, foxes and other Alaska furs, from London to St. Louis.

This is the first time in history that the American seal catch has been marketed through American channels, and the action of Secretary William C. Redfield is regarded by the commercial organizations and bureaus of commerce with great favor, particularly as being significant of the activity of the Wilson administration in paying close attention to all manufacturing and trade interests.

The United States thus will dispose of several thousand raw seal skins constituting the 1913 catch. And under the protecting laws favoring the increase of seals, the sale will increase many fold in the coming few years.

The next step will be the removal from London to St. Louis of seal skin tanners and dyers, establishing in America a great new manufacturing industry.

Thus will a trade of great proportions be fostered. But more than this it will mean the elimination of the present heavy duty now paid on dressed and dyed skins prepared in Europe; while the skins will be dressed and dyed in America just as well, if not better, according to the statement of the best European dyers themselves.

The economy thus effected by this home industry and by the absence of the former heavy duty will eventually mean a saving of several hundred dollars a garment to milady in the purchase of the aristocrat of all furs.

The government furs, by the decision of Secretary of Commerce Redfield, will be sold at public auction by Funsten Bros. & Co., of St. Louis, who are eminently qualified for the responsibility.

The first sale is scheduled for some time in December, at which time the representatives of the great furriers of America and Europe will assemble at the Funsten Fur exchange where this wonderful collection of seal skins will be sold to the highest bidder. Philip B. Fouke and A. M. Ahern of Funsten's will conduct the sale for the St. Louis firm.

Some Seal History.

The history of the seal is one of the most absorbing and romantic of all the great American industries. While the United States government has produced wonderfully interesting books on the subject, and which can be had free of charge, the whole country will be interested in a few facts bearing on the seal history of North America, especially in the light of the recent action of the department of commerce, which stamps St. Louis as the fur center of the world.

The price paid to Russia for the whole of Alaska was $7,000,000. The revenue from the seal islands alone—rough, barren, forbidding spots that comprise but an infinitesimal area of the Alaska map, has been $15,000,000—more than twice the sum paid for the entire territory.

This area comprises the Pribilof islands discovered in 1786 by the Russian navigator whose name the islands bear. It is the seat of the most important fur seal colony in the world. Next in importance is the Commander herd owned by Russia, while the Kuril herd owned by Japan comes third. During the first year of Uncle Sam's possession, the catch was about 200,000 to 300,000 seals, but the herd has diminished so considerably that as a result laws have been enacted by which the herds will be conserved and future catches increased.

The Greatest Evil.

This great diminution of the herds has been the result of pelagic sealing—the killing of seals in the open sea. Whole fleets would sometimes lay off the seal islands while their crews killed the female seals which swim out to sea seeking food.

At sea the sexes cannot be distinguished, and the female predominating, the pelagic catch is made up largely of this class, the percentage being from 85 to 90 per cent of females. The death of a female seal was not the only evil. She was out seeking food for her pup which she had left on shore, so that her death meant also the death of the young one.

The United States, Russia, Japan and Great Britain have made a pact which stipulates that no longer shall the fur seal be killed on the high seas.

King of the Harem.

The seal is a polygamist. The larger and stronger males have harems, ranging from 20 to 40 in number, according to the fighting strength of the "king of the harem." One bull has been known to have [illegible] cows in his harem.

Naturally there is a large surplus of mateless males whose one object in life is to get a harem of their own, entailing continuous warfare and bloodshed in which often the female is torn to pieces or maimed in the struggle for ownership. To kill off a goodly number of these disturbing bachelors of the herd is therefore necessary not only for the good of the herd itself but also for the good of the skins, for naturally a mutilated skin or an old one has but very little market value.

Nearly two years ago congress made a law stopping the killing of seals entirely on United States islands for five years, except seals needed for food by natives on the islands. While from the usual standpoint of game preservation this seemed a good thing, zoologists and experts on seal life are not in favor of it. They say that the ruling regarding the preservation of deer or grouse does not apply to the seal. They claim that if the number of male seals is not kept down they will continue to fight and kill each other, and the pups and females of the harem as well—that only a small percentage of male seals is needed to increase the herd. But besides this if the killing is closed for five years thousands of skins will be lost because a skin older than four years and a half is worthless. Scientific men say that killing rightly governed, with none on the open sea, will mean a quick growth of the herd.

However congress decided the other way and closed the season for five years. The skins of the several thousand males killed under the law as food for natives are not to be sent to London as formerly. Secretary Redfield has ordered otherwise. After a thorough investigation he has ordered that the entire quantity be sold in the United States. After a close study of the fur markets of the world he selected Funsten Bros. & Co. of St. Louis to act as agents of the government in their disposal.

How It Affects Prices.

In 1837 a seal skin fetched from $2 to $3. In 1890, $17 to $30; while in 1909 the price reached the $40 mark. The prices on seal garments, however, have indicated a fictitious value, due to the heavy duty entailed by London shipments, and fur dealers have had to demand an exorbitant figure for an article which is a home product and should and could have been bought for much less.

So that naturally this signal recognition by the United States government of the commanding position held by St. Louis in the fur markets of the world cannot fail to have its effect on the fur business in this country as well as in time reduce the price to the consumer. At the present time St. Louis is the largest primary fur market in the world, and it is estimated that three-fourths of all the furs trapped on the North American continent are shipped to St. Louis houses to be sold.

The books published by the United States government on this interesting subject can be obtained free by writing the department of commerce, bureau of fisheries, and will afford enjoyable and instructive reading. Dealing as they do with the purchase of Alaska by the United States from Russia, and comprising a veritable natural history of the fur bearing seal, as well as setting forth the economics of the sealing industry, these books cannot fail to be a source of real instruction to any good American citizen.

SAILS ON WHEELBARROWS

From Popular Mechanics.

The sailing wheelbarrows of China are a sight to delight the eyes of an old salt stranded inland particularly in the Shensi district, where mile long processions of these queer vehicles may be met with. Wheelbarrow transportation would be almost impossible in this district, due to the blown sand, were it not for the ingeniously devised sails. Night and day, for months at a stretch without ceasing, the wind blows steadily from west to east at an average velocity of more than 15 miles an hour. Luckily this chances to be the direction of the country's produce transportation, so that the heaviest laden of the barrow craft are able to "make port" with a fair wind. A wind "dead astern," however, is by no means absolutely necessary for, by ingeniously contrived supports on the sides of the barrows, the sails may be set to take advantage of almost every slant of the breeze.

ESPERANTO

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION AND ITS "CARAVAN" TO BERNE

Although a month has now passed since the adjournment of the Universal Esperanto Congress at Berne, Switzerland, those extended accounts of the proceedings from which a just picture of the importance of this great annual gathering may be obtained are still on their way through the hands of the publishers of Esperanto monthlies. An exception exists in the case of the address presented in the name of H. Bolingbroke Mudie, the president of the British Esperanto Association.

This Association, as perhaps its name alone would sufficiently indicate, is one of the foremost of all the national organizations represented at the Congress. It does not, to be sure, represent the complete strength of the movement in its own country. "Of the very many thousands of people who have taken up the study of Esperanto in Great Britain," says a recent English publication, "a few thousands have joined the B. E. A. as direct or affiliated members." Just how large the membership is, I do not know; but last May, at the annual meeting, the new guarantee fund, proposed not many months before, had reached the sum of [illegible], which appears to show that the membership is neither small in extent, nor faint-hearted. But if not all British Esperantists are members, there is at least no rival national body, and the international organizations, such as the Universal Esperanto Association, are in Great Britain in full sympathy with the British Association and heartily supported by its officers. Its field is not confined to the home country, but is contensive with the Empire,—a fact which explains the lack of success which the Esperanto Association of North America, intended to embrace the whole of our continent, has thus far experienced in developing its Canadian division.

The British delegation to the international congress, then without doubt commanded respect both by its size and its influential character. Those who could conveniently do so traveled together to Berne, forming a "Caravan," as the name has come to be used, and the Caravan this year was organized by the President of the Association, who expected to conduct it in person. As it turned out, he was with it neither at its start nor at its arrival, being drawn aside at the beginning by the funeral of Carlo Bourlet at Paris, and having to leave it later at Brussels in order to return to London and take ship for Canada. But he was with the Caravan at Ghent, and there delivered an address, the same in substance as was afterward read by Col. Pollen as his proxy at Berne.

Ghent was this year the seat of an important exposition, and the Esperantists of Belgium had taken advantage of the attraction to organize a subordinate congress, which was planned in the week preceding that at Berne, so that delegates to the latter passing through their country might stop on their way and attend the Belgium gathering. In this way they secured the attendance of some five hundred Esperantists, and at the same time won for this national convention a degree of that international character which belonged to the succeeding congress.

Mr. Mudie's address at Ghent indicated, accordingly, the topics on which the British Association has determined to lay especial stress. He dealt briefly with some matters of [illegible], such as the proposal to hold Congress biennially instead of annually, which he disapproved, and that of forming an international association of which the national bodies should be members. In place of this, the British plan is that each national organization should elect an officer specially charged with its relation to foreign societies. Passing from these subjects, he devoted most of his time to discussing the methods of advancing the use of Esperanto, which at the present stage of its progress have approved themselves as most efficacious.

In the front rank of these, as might be expected from his own diligence in that line of work, he placed the introduction of Esperanto into the schools. For this step, he says, the hour is now ripe. And indeed the success which has lately attended efforts of this nature seems to point the way to a more extensive campaign than has yet been organized. Hitherto the propagandists at different points, working without much coordination, has been able to accomplish more or less, according to the strength of the "red tape" with which educational matters have been locally tied and their ability to reach the individuals officially competent to cut it. Where the opportunity has been favorable, noteworthy suc has been won. Thus at Lille, France, upward of 1000 boys and n as many girls, between the age 11 and 14, have not only studied Es anto in the schools, but have b awarded certificates for it. If Mudie's paper and the discussion it shall show how to make similar ords common, an immense advant will indeed be gained.

Where Colorado Springs Proves Its Sense of Brotherhood

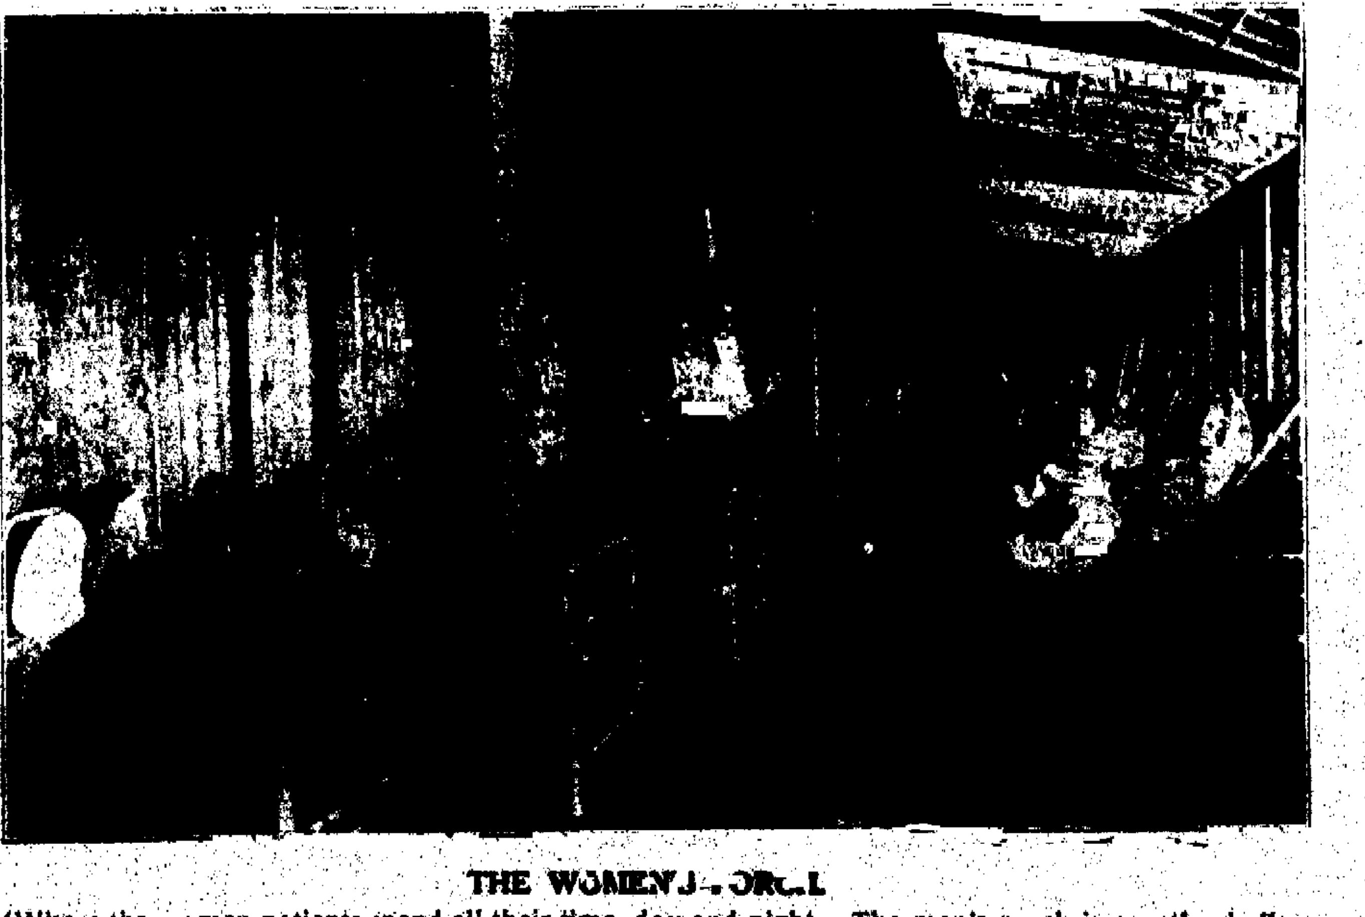
SUNNYREST SANATORIUM.

(Since the above photograph was taken the grounds in front of the building have been beautified by a charming garden.)



THE WOMEN'S PORCH.

(Where the women patients spend all their time, day and night. The men's porch is exactly similar to this.)

Ethel Johnson was 16 years old. With her mother younger brothers and sisters she lived in a small, poor use in Colorado Springs. Her mother was in the last es of consumption, and, worn by years of illness, had ome a querulous, exacting invalid, making incessant ands upon the strength of her young daughter, upon se shoulders rested the burden not only of her mother's , but of the usual household duties. The father, a kly, drunken man, living in another city, only occa- lly sent money to help his family.

Ethel herself, overworked, underfed, confined in such mped quarters with her tubercular mother, fell a victim he dread disease. When the family's case came be- the Associated Charities the girl was hardly able to get ut, yet her mother's demands upon her constantly in- sed. Indeed, when it was suggested that the girl be to Sunnyrest sanatorium the mother objected, on the nd that Ethel could not be spared. But the Associated rities sent the protesting mother to St. Francis hospital, Ethel had her chance in Sunnyrest.

She was there a year, and she came out at the end of time a new girl. She was well again; she had thrown he disease that, within a very short time, would have n her life. It just happened, too, that her mother was alive, and for the last few weeks of her life she had n the benefit of her daughter's loving care. Then, the her dead, the girl went to her father. And, if she s proper care of herself, there is no reason why she ld not live a normal life.

TUBERCULAR SERVANT OF TUBERCULARS.

The case of Edith Smith was perhaps even more piti- Only 17 years old, her parents dead, she lived with unt in Colorado Springs. Frail from her girlhood, h had developed tuberculosis. But the aunt did not would not believe it; she called the girl lazy, and said t she needed was to be put to work.'

And the ghastly joke of it was that this frail child, a rcular herself, was put to work taking care, in a local torium, of the tents of seven tubercular patients. re, in her constantly growing weakness, she worked after day. Day after day her fever came, slowly nting higher and higher, but still the aunt refused to ve; still she insisted that all Edith needed was work.

It was only by accident that the girl's condition was overed. The aunt, though able to help to some extent, sed to contribute a cent to the girl's support. There d have been no end for her but death, had it not been Sunnyrest. The girl was taken there, and remained e than a year in that pleasant home. Those who saw before she entered the home could not believe the who was discharged a year later was the same person. She went east to relatives who live on a farm. There, a time, she was ill again, but, under constant advice etter from the Sisters at Sunnyrest, she took good care erself, and now is stronger than she has been in many s. Her ultimate and complete recovery is a question of time and of care.

SMALL BOY GETS HIS CHANCE.

Archie Jones was only eight years old, yet tubercu- had laid its fatal hand upon him. His father and her were both tubercular, the father an inmate of the odman home here. When the boy's case was brought ne attention of the Associated Charities his lungs were cted, his skin was tubercular, and he had been run- d. There really seemed no chance for him.

But he spent a year and a half in Sunnyrest. At the of that time he went back to his home. He is now ne of the public schools of the city, a rosy, healthy- ing little fellow, and one of the brightest boys in ol.

There was a mother in Colorado Springs who was the support of her family of three. She worked long s daily for $8 per week. What $8 means for the ort of four lives can perhaps faintly be imagined when stated that every other day the mother, for her lunch, ght herself seven biscuits for five cents. One day she ld eat three of the biscuits, the next four.

The 11-year-old daughter, Mary, was taken with rculosis. Her fever was so high that for a time the ors thought she might have typhoid. Her mother was utterly unable to care for the child on $8 per week, and in the poor home in which they were compelled to live. But Sunnyrest opened its hospitable doors to the little girl, and there, after a desperate fight, she is gradually winning back to life and health again.

THE WORK OF SUNNYREST.

These are only four of the 77 cases that have been handled at Sunnyrest sanatorium since its opening, now nearly three years ago. With the exception that fictitious names have been given, the above are true records of actual cases. They show beyond the question of a doubt how badly needed Sunnyrest is when it is considered that the other 73 are in many respects similar, some of them being even more desperate than those above recorded.

The sanatorium was founded three years ago by a little group of Colorado Springs people who had become impressed with the obligation laid upon the people of this community to care for the tuberculars to restore them to health and strength and to the service of the community. As many of the patients as can do so pay $8 per week towards their support in Sunnyrest, but many are utterly unable to pay a cent, and, if Sunnyrest did not offer them asylum, there would be no place for them, until merciful death should come, save the utterly inadequate and entirely unsuitable county poor farm.

There are young men and women at Sunnyrest today, cultured, refined, clean-living young people, who will become strong and able citizens because of the help they are now receiving, but who, except for that help, would before long occupy a little space in the potter's field. They are poor, they are now dependent, but it's not because they were improvident; it's because of the terrible disease of which they have become victims, usually through no fault of their own, often because society, the city in which we live, has been negligent. For it has been found that a number of the cases treated at the sanatorium have been contracted in Colorado Springs. "There have been several adult patients admitted," say the trustees in their last report, "who, though they have lived in the city for a number of years, have the disease in its earliest stages."

Sunnyrest was founded for the tubercular of Colorado Springs. It was feared that the city might be overrun with sufferers if it became known that there were such a free home here. Such, however, has not proved the case. "There has not come to the knowledge of the trustees a single instance of a person's coming to the community with the intention of entering the sanatorium. More than half of the patients had been in the city longer than a year at the time of making application."

Citizens of Colorado Springs, without regard to religion or worldly station, contributed to the fund that established Sunnyrest. Enough money was secured to erect the comfortable, homelike building, and to keep the home running for two years and a half. That time has now passed, and the citizens are again to be called upon to come to the support of the sanatorium. They are to be asked to contribute now the $12,000 to $14,000 needed to continue the work another three years.

They should contribute gladly, generously. Never was better use made of money than has been made of what was contributed to Sunnyrest. Not a cent has been wasted, not a dollar has been lost. A reading of the report of the trustees, or, better still, a visit to the sanatorium itself, out on the plains east of the city, will surely warm the hearts of all who have any feeling whatever for suffering humanity. The instances cited above, of those who have been helped, are an indication of what is being done.

Yet not all those who go there come away well. Some spend their last days there, made happy by the perfect care and the homelike surroundings of the place. Others, benefited by their stay there, when discharged are unable to care for themselves properly, and so lose much of the benefit. Sunnyrest is unable to follow them out into the community.

LOVING SERVICE AND RIGID ECONOMY.

But the care of the sick the work that has been done in succoring the dying and making well those for whom there remained hope is but one side of the work. On the other is the wonderful efficiency with which it has been carried on. And that is a point of great importance to those who, in contributing, want to know that what they give will not be wasted.

Sunnyrest is in charge of five Sisters, a branch of the Kaiserwerth Deaconesses. Sister Ida Tobschall, the superintendent, has almost a national reputation in her work, and has been offered places in private institutions paying far more than she receives at Sunnyrest. But the sisters are not in the work for the money they make; they are a religious order, dedicated to the service of humanity. For all the splendid work they have done at Sunnyrest, they have been paid only $15 per month each.

Three of the sisters are nurses, and the fourth, Sister Priscilla, is cook. From top to bottom, from end to end, the sanatorium is a model of neatness and cleanliness. And it is a home, rather than a hospital. On the two broad porches, one for men, one for women, the 20 patients for whom the sanatorium can provide, pass practically all their time. But there is a cosy dining room where they all take their meals if they are able to walk and then there is a big living room, with a fine fireplace, where, of an evening, they have a social hour before bedtime. There is a piano, there are books, a talking machine, games and magazines.

It was estimated, when the sanatorium was opened, that it would cost $8 per week to support each patient. As a matter of fact the cost has been $7.48, which speaks volumes for the careful economy of the sisters. And they do it without skimping the patients, too. Again and again patients in Sunnyrest, who have come there from other places, have said it is the most homelike place they have been in, with the best care and food. A woman would need but to see Sister Priscilla's wonderful store of preserves in the sanatorium basement to discover one way in which the cost of food is kept down and the standard raised. Sister Priscilla has been busy all summer filling her fruit cellar. In the Phipps sanatorium in Denver one class of patients pay $12 per week, another $9. The comparison shows how carefully managed Sunnyrest has been.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR ALL TO HELP.

The chief purpose of the sanatorium has been to take patients for whom there is hope, and to restore them to health. But the trustees have been unable to confine themselves rigidly to this policy. There have been hopeless cases that have made such powerful demands upon the community that for the sanatorium to have refused assistance would have been inhuman. There are a few hopeless cases now in the institution, perhaps, yet to turn them away, as long as the city has no other provision for them, would be the height of inhumanity.

This is just a hasty sketch of Sunnyrest and what it is doing and trying to do. More can be learned by procuring a copy of the trustees' report for March 15, 1913, from the Associated Charities or from any of the trustees, or, better still, by a visit to the sanatorium. The trustees will begin this week a campaign for the funds needed for the next three years. The response of the people should be even more generous than it was in the first place; then Sunnyrest was an untried experiment; now it has proved itself one of the most beneficent and most valuable institutions in Colorado Springs. It makes useful men and women for the community out of those who, but for its ministrations, would soon die.

The officers and trustees are: Asa T. Jones, chairman; Rev. A. N. Taft, vice chairman; George A. Fowler, treasurer; Dunbar F. Carpenter, secretary; Irving W. Bonbright and Clarence P. Dodge. The medical staff who have given freely of their time and services to the institution, consists of Dr. H. W. Hoagland, Dr. P. O. Hanford and Dr. G. B. Webb.

The government estimates that the economic value of a human life is $1,700. At that rate the four lives saved to the community, and described above, would be $6,800. It costs only $4,000 per year to support Sunnyrest, and it saves a dozen or more lives each year. Judged, therefore, by the purely economic standard, Sunnyrest is the best sort of business investment. And no money value can be placed on the work it does in easing pain, in furnishing a home to those who are homeless and alone, in rescuing the human soul from black despair, in proving to the friendless that there are, after all, brotherhood and love in this world.

House May Be Made of Glass

Possibilities of Marked Change in Construction

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

THE day is coming when all our buildings will be of glass. The age is near when girls will sing at their work in bright, sunny factories; when, in place of the glare and electric lights in department stores, a stream of sunshine will pour through the walls of crystal.

The streets will shine with crystal facades and sparkling turrets. Cathedrals will lift their lofty spires, marvelous cunningly fashioned combinations of colored glass, through which the light filters into the nave below in wondrous subdued glory of tone.

The poorest room will reflect the splendor of the bright and glittering world without. There will be sunshine in the home.

And when will this be?

When strong sheets of glass can be manufactured by machinery and be able to resist fire and breakage.

That sounds like a difficult order. But already the wire glass is used as a preventive for fire, and day by day innovations are introduced into the manufacture of glass which make its power of resistance and its strength greater.

Experiment has shown that a plate of reinforced glass less than a quarter of an inch thick, four feet long and a trifle less than two feet wide can support a weight of 1,107 pounds. And even under the weight of 1,422 pounds it did not break, only bent and cracked.

For years the aim of architects has been to have glass houses, and since that seemed impracticable, they have approached it as nearly as possible.

Factories have gone up, the four walls of glass with narrow steel supports, the staircases of glass, inclosed in transparent walls, the floors of the stock rooms of glass letting in all the light possible. Libraries with glass roofs and railroad stations with curved domes let the light pour into the darkness below.

For economy, permanence, the best environment of employes, fire protection, day-long illumination and perfect ventilation the glass house is the ideal structure.

And as they make plate glass stronger, as they study the possibilities of interior decorations of glass and vitrified paneling, the new apartment house will be a marvel of cleanliness, light and beauty.

Think of a house wherein the sun daily shines and where the stars at night trace patterns on the crystal floors, and yet a house made with hands, a house strong to withstand the elements, warm in winter and cool in summer.

Recently a factory was established in Ohio to turn out glass bricks, which, being hollow, might admit light and yet regulate the heat and, so to speak, insulate the building. This same theory will be followed out in the roofing of the future glass house. There will be an inner roof of glass, not heavy or thick, and then, with about three inches space between there is another roof, heavier, and more capable of withstanding the weather. This air space between the roofs prevents the transmission of either heat or cold and neutralizes the whole top of the building.

If a man building a house desires one room a pale blue or a sunny yellow he can have his bricks made of colored glass and suffuse his room with any desired color, or he can have his whole house of one color, with daylight coming in only through the windows and the color of the room eliminating the necessity of inner glass paneling or pasteled tiling.

Progressive Service a New Departure in American Politics

Its Aims Are to Help Legislators Carry Out Every Progressive Platform Pledge and to Educate the People to the Necessity and Importance of Progressive Principles.

It was less than one year ago—at the December, 1912, conference, to be exact—that the Progressive National Service was formed. That was one of the "visionary" projects of the idealists who, according to the sneering practical politician, make up so large a proportion of the membership of the Progressive party.

At the dinner given to Colonel Roosevelt this visionary Progressive Service made its first public report. The work that has already been accomplished, in the short time the national board has been in existence, is most impressive. It looks very much as if, in the Progressive Service, a new force has entered American politics.

The Progressive Service was organized because of the belief that, though party organizations have grown ever stronger, the parties, so far as responsibility, efficiency and integrity were concerned, were growing ever weaker. And the Progressive Service was therefore formed for the sole purpose of securing the enactment into law of every plank in the Progressive national platform. The Service is to furnish model laws, to stir up the interest of the public, to hold the legislator to his promise.

"It is now evident," said Miss Frances Kellor, chief of the Service, in her report, "that any party which wishes to retain the confidence of the people, and have the support at the polls, must do something besides mark time between elections, assail rival organizations, nominate and elect candidates, and formulate platforms which are not intended to be programs. It is evident that to accomplish this there must be a change in political organization which must begin with the party if its representatives in office are to carry out its will intelligently."

The National Progressive Service board is the head of the organization throughout the country. But it is intended to carry the organization into every state, and into every county of every state, and into every precinct of every county, through the organization of state progressive service boards and of Progressive clubs. Such an organization will make possible continued, effective, systematic, intelligent political action every day in the year, thereby lessening participation in wasteful indirect action which has reached such proportions in this country. It will furnish the opportunity for all of the people—men and women, voters and nonvoters—to work for the advancement of progressive measures in a progressive movement along political lines. It will constitute a clearing house for the states in matters of common effort, legislation, organization, propaganda, and all matters of interest to the Progressive movement, furnishing a prompt, reliable and effective way to realize their ideals.

And the sole purpose of the whole organization, national, state, county and precinct, will be to force the carrying into effect of every pledge in Progressive platforms. It will take some time, of course, to work the idea out thoroughly. The American people are not accustomed to such an idea.

They have been used to going to the polls on election day, voting for one or the other of the old parties, and then hoping against hope that a fair proportion of the platform promises would be carried into effect. The platform promise has become a joke all over the country, and neither of the old parties has ever made any systematic effort to help its legislators, through scientific advice, carry out the pledges made in the platforms.

But, while the idea is new, it is taking hold. The national service is already well organized. It now has a staff of 28 national officers, of whom many are the recognized experts throughout the United States in their departments. Seventeen states have already organized state service boards, and the work is fast spreading. Over 5,000 Progressive clubs have been organized. At the state Progressive conference to be held in Denver October 27 and 28 a Colorado Progressive Service board will be organized.

The aim of the Progressive Service is to enlist in the work of the Progressive party men and women who are specialists in the various phases of work covered in the Progressive platform.

This is accomplished by a scientific organization which studies political and social conditions; which prescribes remedies in the form of laws; which arouses public opinion through an understanding of the conditions revealed and the remedies proposed; and which brings together men and women to work for ideals and work out ideas which make this a better place to live. The purpose of the Service is, therefore:

Dissemination of progressive political ideas.

Establishment of progressive political principles.

Interpretation of a progressive political philosophy.

Extension of general political education throughout the country in institutions of learning.

Translation of progressive political thought into governmental action.

It was feared that Service organization might duplicate, or interfere with, or draw interest from political organization. Instead, it has been proved that party organization has two definite lines of work. One deals with offices and candidates and is defined by statute, in which one group of people is vitally interested and eager to work. The other deals with principles, platforms and legislation and the formulation of public opinion, in which another group of people is interested. One group cannot and will not do the work of the other. Hitherto party organization has provided no opportunity for both to work together. The Service element organically a part of party organization as much as the political element, meets this need and is bringing into politics an immense reserve army of men and women for whom there was no place or interest under the form of organization which now prevails in the other great national parties.

Good government.

There were but few Progressive members of the state legislatures that met in 1912, and the Progressive Service had been so recently formed that its legislative reference department was in anything like good running order. Every possible effort was made, however, to aid in the preparation of model bills covering the features of the Progressive platform, and though hostile majorities in most cases refused to enact the Progressive bills, yet those same Progressive bills furnished the models on which most of the progressive legislation in the various states was based. In Colorado, for instance, the minimum wage bill finally adopted though it did not bear the name of a Progressive, was practically the same bill that had been prepared by leading Colorado Progressives, after a careful study of such legislation, and introduced by Representative Smedley of Denver, a Progressive.

The legislative reference department, on which are such leaders of American thought as William Draper Lewis, dean of the University of Pennsylvania law school, Miss Jane Addams, James R. Garfield, Francis J. Heney, George W. Kirchwey, dean of the Columbia university law school, Charles E. Merriam of the University of Chicago, Judge Ben B. Lindsey, Gifford Pinchot and Walter E. Weyl, author of the New Democracy, has been active in drafting model bills for introduction in the present congress. Months have been spent on suggested laws covering the Progressive party's trust policy, which laws are now ready for introduction.

Among the other laws, prepared by the department and introduced by Progressive congressmen, are the following: Providing for a permanent, nonpartisan, scientific tariff commission; a social insurance commission bill; a naturalization commission bill; an amendment to the United States constitution, making amendment of that document easier; a federal child labor bill; a bill providing for an eight-hour day for women in the District of Columbia; a national rivers commission bill; a bill providing for workmen's compensation for federal employees; a bill prohibiting the carrying in interstate commerce of goods manufactured by convict labor.

The work of seeing that legislators have help in carrying into effect the planks of the Progressive platform is but half of the work of the Progressive Service. Coordinate with this, and fully as important, is the work of educating the people to the necessity of such legislation as the Progressive party stands for. In other words, the Progressive Service aims to train the people in democracy, in the difficult art of self government.

On the educational side of the work a well equipped speakers' bureau is maintained. A lyceum bureau has been organized by Montaville Flowers, himself one of the best known lecturers on the chautauqua circuit. Many Progressive speakers were on the chautauqua platform this fall, many more will be there this winter.

The speakers division now has listed some 1,000 speakers for Progressive meetings, of whom about 500 are available for meetings outside their own states. As Progressive Service boards are developed in the states, a speakers' bureau is established as one of its first essentials and the work of the state bureaus is coordinated through the National bureau. Speakers now notify the National bureau when they are available and of their whereabouts and send in their surplus requests to be filled by others through the bureau. Eight hundred and ninety-six speakers have been sent out in the seven months of actual operation of the bureau, which does not include the state work being done by state bureaus.

The bureau of education prepares, compiles and distributes its own publications as well as those of state services, Progressive clubs and nonpartisan organizations devoted to the advancement of certain definite aims included in the platform of the Progressive party. The total amount of documents, bulletins and various printed matter sent out is 86,534 copies.

The dissemination of information by the bureau of education may be divided into the information furnished on request and that generally distributed in a spirit of popular education whether requested or not. The former classification includes replies to letters, the reference by the bureau of requests for particular information to the various platform departments and nonpartisan organizations, equipped to supply the data desired.

The total under this heading is 223 and includes such subjects as Child Welfare, Immigration, Social Insurance, Conditions of Labor, Public Health, Country Life, Direct Legislation, Equal Suffrage, Cost of Living, Tariff and Taxation, etc., etc.

The dissemination of information not especially requested includes the preparation of motion picture scenarios; the arrangement with motion picture companies for the manufacture and distribution of the films from these scenarios; the preparation of articles for magazines dealing with matters covered in the Progressive platform, and the placing of these articles with magazines, Sunday newspapers or other vehicles for reaching the general public.

In the process of this work the bureau has sent out numerous circulars describing its organization and purpose, and seeking the cooperation of social service organizations and of individuals in the spread of Progressive propaganda. A total of 3,900 circular letters have been sent.

Subcommittees have been formed for the carrying out of the promises of the Progressive platform, the work of several of which is thus summarized in the report just made by the National Progressive service:

Social and Industrial Justice is the most active department. It seemed better to concentrate on the work of this department as nearest the needs of the people.

Social Insurance. Miss Katherine Comans of Wellesley, who is abroad studying social insurance, has agreed to send the service reports of progress and of new measures and work being done in the various countries in this field. In view of the fact that the American Association for Labor Legislation has a special committee on this subject making investigations, none has been planned by the service, but a bill has been introduced asking for a federal commission which will take up this whole question. The committee is also proceeding with its work in the various states, having service boards appoint committees for educational work looking toward state insurance legislation.

Child Life. The committee on Child welfare was at work before the service was organized, and was supported by service funds early in December, when it voted to carry on its work in connection with the Progressives under the title Child Life committee. The program which the committee has mapped out includes registration of births, infant mortality, orphanage delinquency, illiteracy and child labor. Child life committees are now being organized as part of the state service work to work for the welfare of children.

Labor. The demands made upon the service for bills and information concerning the labor planks in the platform led the service to place $2,500 at the disposal of Prof. Lindsay for the purpose of preparing the fall program. He has associated with him four others and together they have given the entire summer to this work. Ten other associates have also cooperated in its preparation. The program submitted October 1 includes programs for states having legislatures in session in 1914, of which there are 10 and minimum state standards and federal labor laws. The subjects reported upon include: Organization of State Labor Departments; Prevention of Accidents; Prevention of Occupational Diseases; Overcoming of Unemployment; Prevention of Overwork; Protection of Children; Prevention of Exploitation of Convicts; Compensation in Industrial Accidents and Trade Diseases; Sickness Insurance and Service Pensions; Unemployment and Old Age Insurance.

Immigration. This committee submitted a bill providing for a federal commission on naturalization, together with a brief, at the time of Japanese controversy. It has outlined a plan for the reorganization of the federal department of labor, providing a bureau of distribution to include the protection and distribution of aliens, and has prepared a brief in favor of this action. It has outlined methods and circulated information concerning the organization of immigrant clubs.

Conservation work has been taken care of by Mr. Pinchot in various bills and publications. Dr. Woods Hutchinson has been abroad and the health committee work has not been organized. The service arranged with Mr. C. O. Gill, who was a member of the national committee on agricultural credit to send it reports and recommendations for the work of the country life committee. One report has been received.

Direct Legislation. The suffrage committee has been very active. There is now a national committee of 20 members representing 10 states. Miss Alice Carpenter, the secretary, has made speeches in many states and the Progressives have supported the pending legislation. A questionaire upon the initiative, referendum and recall has been prepared by Mr. Ransom and Mr. Wilcox and sent out and the

plies are being tabulated, with a

to farther legislation.

Cost of Living and Corporation C trol. Much of the legislation prom in the platform has been prepared submitted. Prof. E. W. Kemmere Princeton has been giving his ser in connection with the currency The question of public markets been agitated by the service and Wisconsin bill and brief have b widely distributed.

lines of all formal costumes much alike now and the ma- s used for afternoon and evening similar that it takes an experi- eye to distinguish, these days, en a gown intended for after- bridge from one designed for ng. Most evening gowns have trains, though the craze for ng has done away with the train ny instances; and often the aft- n bodice has as extreme a decol- as some women would tolerate opera toilette. The evening has sleeves also, this year, h these sleeves are usually of anous stuff which floats softly the figure in what is called the l' style. But whether the even- ecolletage is modest or extreme, houlders are covered, perhaps and transparently—even with transparency and layers of soft fabric outline the lovely curve of shoulder and arm.

The treatment of the coiffure, and the type of footwear worn denote beyond peradventure whether the gown in question is intended for day or evening use. With the very formal afternoon costume a hat always forms part of the ensemble; unless the gown is worn by a hostess who, of course, receives hatless in her own home. Evening coiffures are most elaborate so far as ornamentation is concerned; the hair itself is dressed usually with extreme, even exaggerated simplicity so that the head has what is now considered a small, aristocratic carriage on the shoulders.

Evening Coiffures Carefully Considered.

Several new hairdressings for gaslight appearance are shown with the new evening gowns pictured on today's page, and each coiffure ornament carries out perfectly the idea of the costume it accompanies. The panniered gown of crepe and lansdowne, for example, is accompanied by a coiffure band of dull blue silk on which are sewn seed pearls and lapis lazuli cabuchons, the deep, rich coloring of the blue matching the blue shade of the crepe tunic and one of the blues in the girdle of embroidered silk. This repetition of the dominant color of the gown in the hair ornament adds a deal of distinction to the costume. Daring in color is the coquettish little headdress worn with the Poiret gown of thin white crepe meteor. A dashing little bolero jacket of Empire green and white silk completes the Directoire character of this Tango gown and the jaunty headdress is of gold lace in cap form, two tiny Empire green ostrich tips being posed rakishly at one side. But the brilliant green and gold of the cap is most fetching with the curly blonde tresses of its wearer.

In striking contrast to this saucy coiffure ornament is the coronet of rhinestones which in its fiery white brilliance and simplicity of design corresponds well with the fleecy white gown which it accompanies. Still more classic and simple is the arrangement of pearls over a coiffure of absolute unpretentiousness, the waves of hair, parted low on the brow being drawn back softly over the ears to make a knot at the back. The wearer of this coiffure has chosen to twist her wonderful string of pearls twice around her head, leaving the perfect lines of throat and neck unadorned.

"Angel" Dancing Gowns Now.

Fashion's latest frenzy is the ethereal and spirituelle type of gown. At Deauville, the most frivolous of French watering places, this summer diaphanous ball gowns were worn over next to nothing in the way of lingerie. Puffs and flounces of chiffon, tulle and lace swirled around feet flying in the dance, and headdresses in the form of "halos" made of white tulle adorned the hair. One of these "angel" gowns is pictured—a Worth model it is, by the way, and the black and white print can give no conception of its airy delicacy and charm. Three tiers of white chiffon are draped one above the other over a trailing skirt of dead white satin, the chiffon being used double in each tier and not merely caught under against the skirt in pannier effect. That is: lengths of the chiffon, doubled in half are attached to make the tiers, the material falling loosely with selvedge edges in full view at one side of the front. This gown has the true "angel" sleeves which float cloudily about in fascinatingly graceful effect. The broad sash of rose flowered ribbon introduces a striking note of color and makes the "angel" gown a bit piquant. Buttoned strap slippers of white satin accompany this lovely white gown.

The Poiret dancing gown is also white, its striking feature being the very long train which is tossed over the arm during the dance. This gown has Directoire lines in imitation of the classic effects which reigned supreme during the Josephine period, because Josephine's perfect figure could best be displayed in these narrow, filmy, clinging costumes. The gay green and gold cap and green and white jacket have been described in a previous paragraph. The very latest in buttoned strap dancing slippers—called buskins in Paris accompany this gown.

Muff and Stole of Marabout and Ostrich Complete the Afternoon Toilette.

Hoop Skirts Appear!

The hoop skirt is really here again, but it is not the hoop skirt of the fifties which made the feet appear—according to the fancy of one bard of the period—"like little mice creeping in and out." The modern hoop is situated between hip and knee and holds a rather full tunic out from the narrow skirt beneath. When deep fringe falls from the tunic as in the hooped Premet model illustrated, the effect is rather laughably like a gigantic lampshade. This effect has given the name "Minaret" skirt to this type of costume and the "Minaret" gown pictured is accompanied by Oriental slippers and a draped turban on Oriental lines. The very deep V of the decolletage outlined with fur is echoed in line by the pointed cut of the sleeves—also finished with the dark fur.

Most appropriate for a small but exclusive little dinner in early October, is the beaded gown which combines gray chiffon embroidered with seed pearls and draped above apricot tinted satin with a splendid fabric encrusted with jet and coral bead embroidery. This heavy, beaded, stuff, clings about the feet and trails on the floor, and the scarf, crossing one side of the bodice falls at front and back in long sash ends weighted with steel and [illegible] ornaments. Though quite full ar[ound] the hips, the tunic of chiffon falls in clinging lines about the limbs and the weight of the seed pearl embroidery makes [illegible] gracefully over the [illegible] train. No ornaments are worn with this gown except a handsome ring set with a coral cabuchon, and the string of pearls twisted in the hair.

For dinner at home or in a restaurant, the blue crepe gown will be especially suitable. The arrangement of the bodice drapery suggests an extreme decolletage but the slightly V'd neck is really very modest and the arms are covered to the elbow by the draped sleeves. The lifting of the sleeve frill to show a dimpled elbow is a coquettish notion. This gown is made of blistered crepe in dull blue, draped over a skirt of blue lansdowne of the same shade veiled with gray mousseline. The sleeves match the skirt and have frills of white Mechlin above other frills of gray chiffon. Blue chiffon matching the blue crepe is caught up on a little vest of white tulle over flesh colored chiffon, ruffles of the Mechlin falling softly at either side. It is the tulle vest over flesh tinted chiffon which gives the bodice a pronounced decollete effect. The girdle is particularly handsome and is of gray silk elaborately embroidered in shades of blue, white and gray. This gown, intended for restaurant wear, is accompanied by dainty little patent leather boots with Louis heels and buttoned tops of black kid, blue silk stockings matching the gown being revealed above the pretty little boot when the skirt is lifted.

Gloves Removed At Every Opportunity.

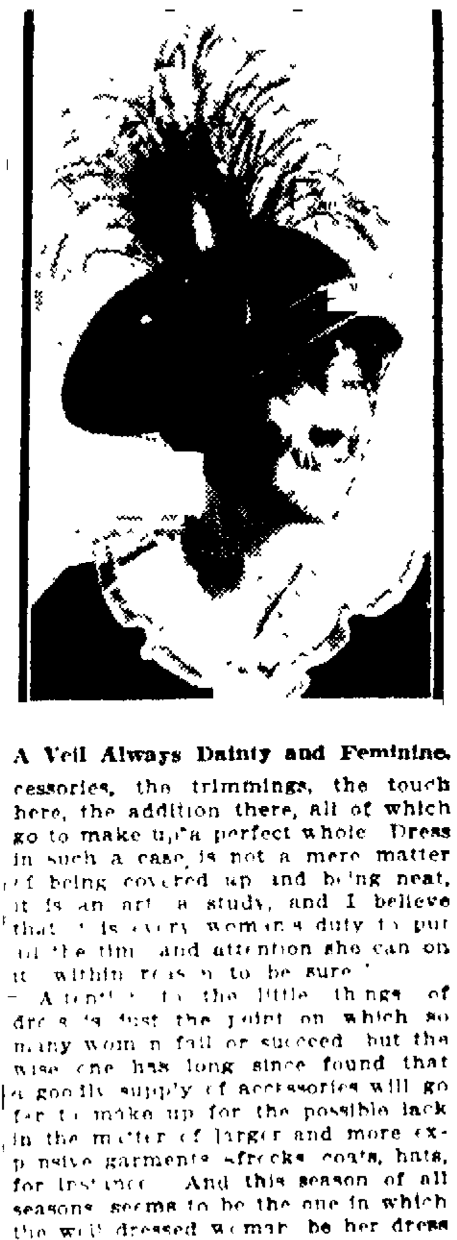
The woman of the moment abhors gloves and removes them whenever there is an excuse for doing so—which is a pity, for the new gloves of embroidered silk complete the costume most satisfactorily. Gloves are never worn at all at formal dinners, and at dances they are abandoned early in the evening. Some women even draw them off at the opera but this is a practice not indulged in by sticklers for conventionality and correct form. Long gloves of silk, delicately embroidered on the wrist are considered proper now with all types of evening costume, and such gloves cling more gracefully to the arm than even the softest leather would do. The Niagara Maid [illegible] on these [illegible]-wristed silk gloves are particularly beautiful and distinguished.

A[illegible] that have become yellow may be whitened by soaking in [illegible] using a stone [illegible] for the purpose. After [illegible] the [illegible] rinse thoroughly and boil in a light suds.

The Finishing Touch

JUST what would it mean to be the best dressed woman in town?" said one smartly frocked woman to another the other day as they sat in a New York tea room at a daintily laid tete-a-tete table, "not the most expensively dressed, you know, for cost does not always mean style, but from the standpoint of detail and general appearance?"

Her friend replied, "It is just this very matter of detail that the French put the most stress on, the attention to the little things of dress, the accessories, the trimmings, the touch here, the addition there, all of which go to make up a perfect whole. Dress in such a case is not a mere matter of being covered up and being neat, it is an art, a study, and I believe that it is every woman's duty to put all the time and attention she can on it within reason, to be sure."



A Veil Always Dainty and Feminine.

Attention to the little things of dress is just the point on which so many women fail or succeed, but the wise one has long since found that a goodly supply of accessories will go far to make up for the possible lack in the matter of larger and more expensive garments—frocks, coats, hats, for instance. And this season of all seasons seems to be the one in which the well dressed woman be her dress ever so simple can least afford to neglect the little additions that make for style and hence for attractiveness.

[illegible] finish is absolutely indispensable and not to be omitted from blouses and dresses and even coats and suits, neckpieces and the most elaborate, for it gives that dressy, finished touch about the neck and a softening frame to the face, which is especially needed now that high collars are out of vogue.

The neckpiece shown is typical in size and arrangement and in the Medici frill which here stands up about the neck, serving the old purpose of the high collar. This style, too, is generally becoming and graceful. It is very easy to add the Medici effect to any sort of a garment by these very little frills that are to be had by the yard and to be basted into the neck. Some of these can be laundered but it is best to whisk them out in gasoline for a few wearings and then throw away.

The separate vest is the newest thing this season, worn with tailored or elaborate suits, and made just like man's vest or sometimes without the back. Such a vest or vestette is often made so dressy and of such pretty material that it is left on as part of the blouse when the coat is removed. Indeed this fashion is so strong that the latest blouses are made in vest effect, that is a vest like part of some fancy silk material, with sleeves of net or chiffon.

Another revival of a charming old fashion is that of the boa, especially the ostrich feather boa or stole, the fashion going even to the extent of having muffs to match. These accessories of ostrich are ever so pretty for the party outfit, to wear over the wrap and to throw about the neck between dances, a bit daintier than fur and less expensive. Still less expensive are the innumerable dainty scarfs to throw about the neck and shoulders. These run in such a variety that some women have even been found looking through the bargain sales for pieces of flowered silk or chiffon that may be converted into a scarf for evening.

In the matter of dainty finishes that are quite at the top notch of fashion, easy to accomplish and unusually effective, there are a thousand and one ways in which to use up scraps of fur that have been left over from past seasons. Fur trimmings are to be seen on everything: dainty chiffon scarfs, short blouses, collars and cuffs of suits and dresses and coats, on millinery of every sort, on children's garments, and even on lacey theatre and boudoir caps. By all means hunt up every scrap of fur and put it into use in the cause of being well dressed—well finished.

Along with the furs come a host of butterflies and fruits—fruits of velvet used in millinery and as corsage finishes on frocks. Butterflies of every sort of material on everything. Millinery trimmings are made into the shape of butterflies, of net, chiffon, silk and the same things are used in the place of the belt bouquet. Butterfly bows of the sash material make the finish, front or back of all g[illegible] [illegible] now big bows in Japanese style, or smaller ones just so that it resembles a butterfly. Progressive Service a New Departure in American Politics

Its Aims Are to Help Legislators Carry Out Every Progressive Platform Pledge and to Educate the People to the Necessity and Importance of Progressive Principles.

It was less than one year ago—at the December, 1912, conference, to be exact—that the Progressive National Service was formed. That was one of the "visionary" projects of the idealists who, according to the sneering practical politician, make up so large a proportion of the membership of the Progressive party.

At the dinner given to Colonel Roosevelt this visionary Progressive Service made its first public report. The work that has already been accomplished in the short time the national board has been in existence, is most impressive. It looks very much as if, in the Progressive Service, a new force has entered American politics.

The Progressive Service was organized because of the belief that, though party organizations have grown ever stronger, the parties, so far as responsibility, efficiency and integrity were concerned, were growing ever weaker. And the Progressive Service was therefore formed for the sole purpose of securing the enactment into law of every plank in the Progressive national platform. The Service is to furnish model laws, to stir up the interest of the public, to hold the legislator to his promise.

"It is now evident," said Miss Frances Kellor, chief of the Service, in her report, "that any party which wishes to retain the confidence of the people, and have the support at the polls, must do something besides mark time between elections, assail rival organizations, nominate and elect candidates, and formulate platforms which are not intended to be programs. It is evident that to accomplish this there must be a change in political organization which must begin with the party if its representatives in office are to carry out its will intelligently."

The National Progressive Service board is the head of the organization throughout the country. But it is intended to carry the organization into every state, and into every county of every state, and into every precinct of every county, through the organization of state progressive service boards and of Progressive clubs. Such an organization will make possible continued, effective, systematic, intelligent political action every day in the year, thereby lessening participation in wasteful indirect action which has reached such proportions in this country. It will furnish the opportunity for all of the people, men and women, voters and nonvoters, to work for the advancement of progressive measures in a progressive movement along political lines. It will constitute a clearing house for the states in matters of common effort, legislation, organization, propaganda, and all matters of interest to the Progressive movement, furnishing a prompt, reliable and effective way to realize their ideals.

And the sole purpose of the whole organization, national, state, county and precinct, will be to force the carrying into effect of every pledge in Progressive platforms. It will take some time, of course, to work the idea out thoroughly. The American people are not accustomed to such an idea.

They have been used to going to the polls on election day, voting for one or the other of the old parties, and then hoping against hope that a fair proportion of the platform promises would be carried into effect. The platform promise has become a joke all over the country, and neither of the old parties has ever made any systematic effort to help its legislators, through scientific advice, carry out the pledges made in the platforms.

But, while the idea is new, it is taking hold. The national service is already well organized. It now has a staff of 26 national officers, of whom many are the recognized experts throughout the United States in their departments. Seventeen states have already organized state service boards, and the work is fast spreading. Over 5,000 Progressive clubs have been organized. At the state Progressive conference to be held in Denver October 27 and 28 a Colorado Progressive Service board will be organized.

The aim of the Progressive Service is to enlist in the work of the Progressive party men and women who are specialists in the various phases of work covered in the Progressive platform.

This is accomplished by a scientific organization which studies political and social conditions; which prescribes remedies in the form of laws; which arouses public opinion through an understanding of the conditions revealed and the remedies proposed; and which brings together men and women to work for ideals and work out ideas which make this a better place to live. The purpose of the Service is, therefore:

Dissemination of progressive political ideas.

Establishment of progressive political principles.

Interpretation of a progressive political philosophy.

Extension of general political education throughout the country in institutions of learning.

Translation of progressive political thought into governmental action.

It was feared that Service organization might duplicate, or interfere with, or draw interest from political organization. Instead, it has been proved that party organization has two definite lines of work. One deals with offices and candidates and is defined by statute, in which one group of people is vitally interested and eager to work. The other deals with principles, platforms and legislation and the formulation of public opinion, in which another group of people is interested. One group cannot and will not do the work of the other. Hitherto party organization has provided no opportunity for both to work together. The Service element organically a part of party organization as much as the political element, meets this need and is bringing into politics an immense reserve army of men and women for whom there was no place or interest under the form of organization which now prevails in the other great national parties.

There were but few Progressive members of the state legislatures that met in 1912, and the Progressive Service had been so recently formed that its legislative reference department was in anything like good running order. Every possible effort was made, however, to aid in the preparation of model bills covering the features of the Progressive platform, and though hostile majorities in most cases refused to enact the Progressive bills, yet those same Progressive bills furnished the models on which most of the progressive legislation in the various states was based. In Colorado, for instance, the minimum wage bill finally adopted, though it did not bear the name of a Progressive, was practically the same bill that had been prepared by leading Colorado Progressives, after a careful study of such legislation, and introduced by Representative Smedley of Denver, a Progressive.

The legislative reference department, on which are such leaders of American thought as William Draper Lewis, dean of the University of Pennsylvania law school, Miss Jane Addams, James R. Garfield, Francis J. Heney, George W. Kirchwey, dean of the Columbia university law school, Charles E. Merriam of the University of Chicago, Judge Ben B. Lindsey, Gifford Pinchot and Walter E. Weyl, author of the New Democracy, has been active in drafting model bills for introduction in the present congress. Months have been spent on suggested laws covering the Progressive party's trust policy, which laws are now ready for introduction.

Among the other laws, prepared by the department and introduced by Progressive congressmen, are the following: Providing for a permanent, nonpartisan, scientific tariff commission; a social insurance commission bill; a naturalization commission bill; an amendment to the United States constitution, making amendment of that document easier; a federal child labor bill; a bill providing for an eight-hour day for women in the District of Columbia; a national rivers commission bill; a bill providing for workmen's compensation for federal employes; a bill prohibiting the carrying in interstate commerce of goods manufactured by convict labor.

The work of seeing that legislators have help in carrying into effect the planks of the Progressive platform is but half of the work of the Progressive Service. Coordinate with this, and fully as important, is the work of educating the people to the necessity of such legislation as the Progressive party stands for. In other words, the Progressive Service aims to train the people in democracy, in the difficult art of self government.

On the educational side of the work a well equipped speakers' bureau is maintained. A lyceum bureau has been organized by Montaville Flowers, himself one of the best known lecturers on the chautauqua circuit. Many Progressive speakers were on the chautauqua platform this fall, many more will be there this winter.

The speakers' division now has listed some 1,000 speakers for Progressive meetings, of whom about 500 are available for meetings outside their own states. As Progressive Service boards are developed in the states, a speakers' bureau is established as one of its first essentials and the work of these state bureaus is coordinated through the National bureau. Speakers now notify the National bureau when they are available and of their whereabouts and send in their surplus requests to be filled by others, through the bureau. Eight hundred and ninety-six speakers have been sent out in the seven months of actual operation of the bureau, which does not include the state work being done by state bureaus.

The bureau of education prepares, compiles and distributes its own publications as well as those of state services, Progressive clubs and nonpartisan organizations devoted to the advancement of certain definite aims included in the platform of the Progressive party. The total amount of documents, bulletins and various printed matter sent out is 86,534 copies.

The dissemination of information by the bureau of education may be divided into the information furnished on request and that generally distributed in a spirit of popular education whether requested or not. The former classification includes replies to letters, the reference by the bureau of requests for particular information to the various platform departments and nonpartisan organizations, equipped to supply the data desired.

The total under this heading is 223 and includes such subjects as Child Welfare, Immigration, Social Insurance, Conditions of Labor, Public Health, Country Life, Direct Legislation, Equal Suffrage, Cost of Living, Tariff and Taxation, etc., etc.

The dissemination of information not especially requested includes the preparation of motion picture scenarios; the arrangement with motion picture companies for the manufacture and distribution of the films from these scenarios; the preparation of articles for magazines dealing with matters covered in the Progressive platform, and the placing of these articles with magazines, Sunday newspapers or other vehicles for reaching the general public.

In the process of this work the bureau has sent out numerous circulars describing its organization and purpose, and seeking the cooperation of social service organizations and of individuals in the spread of Progressive propaganda. A total of 3,900 circular letters have been sent.

Subcommittees have been formed for the carrying out of the promises of the Progressive platform, the work of several of which is thus summarized in the report just made by the National Progressive service:

Social and Industrial Justice is the most active department. It seemed better to concentrate on the work of this department as nearest the needs of the people.

Social Insurance. Miss Katherine Coman of Wellesley, who is abroad studying social insurance, has agreed to send the service reports of progress and of new measures and work being done in the various countries in this field. In view of the fact that the American Association for Labor Legislation has a special committee on this subject making investigations, none has been planned by the service, but a bill has been introduced asking for a federal commission which will take up this whole question. The committee is also proceeding with its work in the various states, having service boards appoint committees for educational work looking toward state insurance legislation.

Child Life. The committee on Child welfare was at work before the service was organized, and was supported by service funds early in December, when it voted to carry on its work in connection with the Progressives under the title Child Life committee. The program which the committee has mapped out includes registration of births, infant mortality, orphanage delinquency, illiteracy and child labor. Child life committees are now being organized as part of the state service work to work for the welfare of children.

Labor. The demands made upon the service for bills and information concerning the labor planks in the platform led the service to place $2,500 at the disposal of Prof. Lindsay for the purpose of preparing the fall program. He has associated with him four others and together they have given the entire summer to this work. Ten other associates have also cooperated in its preparation. The program submitted October 1 includes programs for states having legislatures in session in 1914, of which there are 10 and minimum state standards and federal labor laws. The subjects reported upon include: Organization of State Labor Departments; Prevention of Accidents; Prevention of Occupational Diseases; Overcoming of Unemployment; Prevention of Overwork; Protection of Children; Prevention of Exploitation of Convicts; Compensation in Industrial Accidents and Trade Diseases; Sickness Insurance and Service Pensions; Unemployment and Old Age Insurance.

Immigration. This committee submitted a bill providing for a federal commission on naturalization, together with a brief, at the time of Japanese controversy. It has outlined a plan for the reorganization of the federal department of labor, providing a bureau of distribution to include the protection and distribution of aliens, and has prepared a brief in favor of this action. It has outlined methods and circulated information concerning the organization of immigrant clubs.

Conservation work has been taken care of by Mr. Pinchot in various bills and publications. Dr. Woods Hutchinson has been abroad and the health committee work has not been organized. The service arranged with Mr. C. H. Gill, who was a member of the national committee on agricultural credit to send it reports and recommendations for the work of the country life committee. One report has been received.

Direct Legislation. The suffrage committee has been very active. There is now a national committee of 20 members representing 10 states. Miss Alice Carpenter, the secretary, has made speeches in many states and the Progressives have supported the pending legislation. A questionnaire upon the initiative, referendum and recall has been prepared by Mr. Ransom and Mr. Wilcox and sent out and the replies are being tabulated with a v to further legislation.

Cost of Living and Corporation C trol. Much of the legislation prom in the platform has been prepared submitted. Prof. E. W. Kemmere Princeton has been giving his ser in connection with the currency The question of public markets been agitated by the service and Wisconsin bill and brief have widely distributed.

lines of all formal costumes much alike now and the ma- used for afternoon and evening similar that it takes an experi- eye to distinguish, these days, n a gown intended for after- bridge from one designed for ng. Most evening gowns have trains, though the craze for g has done away with the train ny instances; and often the aft- n bodice has as extreme a decol- as some women would tolerate opera toilette. The evening has sleeves also, this year, h these sleeves are usually of anous stuff which floats softly the figure in what is called the style. But whether the even- ecolletage is modest or extreme, houlders are covered, perhaps and transparently—even with transparency—and layers of soft fabric outline the lovely curve of shoulder and arm.

The treatment of the coiffure, and the type of footwear worn denote beyond peradventure whether the gown in question is intended for day or evening use. With the very formal afternoon costume a hat always forms part of the ensemble; unless the gown is worn by a hostess who, of course, receives hatless in her own home. Evening coiffures are most elaborate so far as ornamentation is concerned: the hair itself is dressed usually with extreme, even exaggerated simplicity so that the head has what is now considered a small, aristocratic carriage on the shoulders.

Evening Coiffures Carefully Considered.

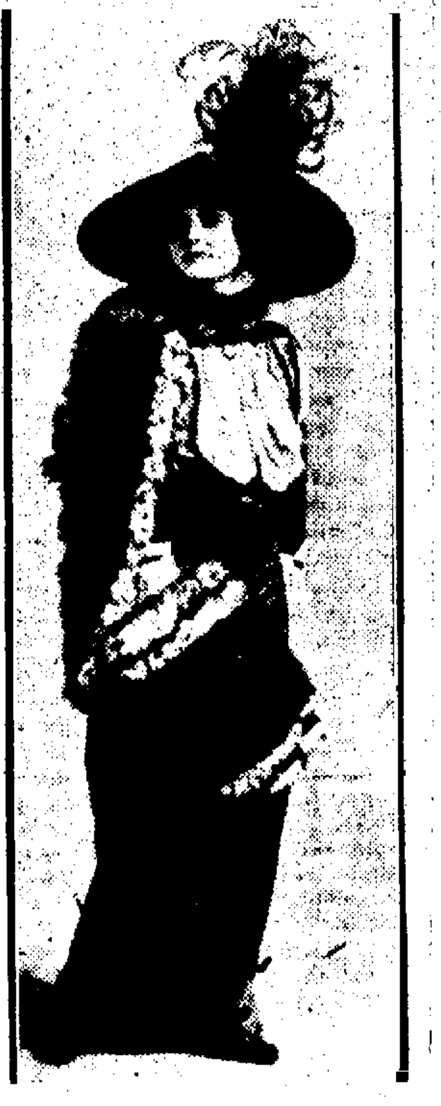
Several new hairdressings for gaslight appearance are shown with the new evening gowns pictured on today's page, and each coiffure ornament carries out perfectly the idea of the costume it accompanies. The paniered gown of crepe and lansdowne, for example, is accompanied by a coiffure band of dull blue silk on which are sewn seed pearls and lapis lasuli cabuchons, the deep, rich coloring of the blue matching the blue shade of the crepe tunic and one of the blues in the girdle of embroidered silk. This repetition of the dominant color of the gown in the hair ornament adds a deal of distinction to the costume. Daring in color is the coquettish little headdress worn with the Poiret gown of thin white crepe meteor. A dashing little bolero jacket of Empire green and white silk completes the Directoire character of this Tango gown and the jaunty headdress is of gold lace in cap form, two tiny Empire green ostrich tips being posed rakishly at one side. But the brilliant green and gold of the cap is most fetching with the curly blonde tresses of its wearer.

In striking contrast to this saucy coiffure ornament is the coronet of rhinestones which in its fiery white brilliance and simplicity of design corresponds well with the fleecy white gown which it accompanies. Still more classic and simple is the arrangement of pearls over a coiffure of absolute unpretentiousness, the waves of hair, parted low on the brow being drawn back softly over the ears to make a knot at the back. The wearer of this coiffure has chosen to twist her wonderful string of pearls twice around her head, leaving the perfect lines of throat and neck unadorned.

"Angel" Dancing Gowns Now.

Fashion's latest frenzy is the ethereal and spirituelle type of gown. At Deauville, the most frivolous of French watering places, this summer diaphanous ball gowns were worn over next to nothing in the way of lingerie. Puffs and flounces of chiffon, tulle and lace swirled around feet flying in the dance, and headdresses in the form of "halos" made of white tulle adorned the hair. One of these "angel" gowns is pictured a Worth model it is, by the way, and the black and white print can give no conception of its airy delicacy and charm. Three tiers of white chiffon are draped one above the other over a trailing skirt of dead white satin, the chiffon being used double in each tier and not merely caught under against the skirt in pannier effect. That is; lengths of the chiffon, doubled in half are attached to make the tiers, the material falling loosely with selvedge edges in full view at one side of the front. This gown has the true "angel" sleeves which float cloudily about in fascinatingly graceful effect. The broad sash of rose flowered ribbon introduces a striking note of color and makes the "angel" gown a bit piquant. Buttoned strap slippers of white satin accompany this lovely white gown.

The Poiret dancing gown is also white, its striking feature being the very long train which is tossed over the arm during the dance. This gown has Directoire lines in imitation of the classic effects which reigned supreme during the Josephine period, because Josephine's perfect figure could best be displayed in these narrow, filmy, clinging costumes. The gay green and gold cap and green and white jacket have been described in a previous paragraph. The very latest in buttoned strap dancing slippers—called buskins in Paris—accompany this gown.



Muff and Stole of Marabout and Ostrich Complete the Afternoon Toilette.

Hoop Skirts Appear!

The hoop skirt is really here again; but it is not the hoop skirt of the fifties which made the feet appear—according to the fancy of one bard of the period—"like little mice creeping in and out." The modern hoop is situated between hip and knee and holds a rather full tunic out from the narrow skirt beneath. When deep fringe falls from the tunic as in the hooped Premet model illustrated, the effect is rather laughably like a gigantic lampshade. This effect has given the name "Minaret" skirt to this type of costume and the "Minaret" gown pictured is accompanied by Oriental slippers and a draped turban on Oriental lines. The very deep V of the decolletage, outlined with fur is echoed in line by the pointed cut of the sleeves—also finished with the dark fur.

Most appropriate for a small but exclusive little dinner in early October, is the beaded gown which combines gray chiffon embroidered with seed pearls and draped above apricot tinted satin with a splendid fabric encrusted with jet and coral bead embroidery. This heavy, beaded, stuff, clings about the feet and trails on the floor, and the scarf, crossing one side of the bodice falls at front and back in long sash ends weighted with steel and coral ornaments. Though quite full around the hips, the tunic of chiffon falls in clinging lines about the limbs and the weight of the seed pearl embroidery makes it wind gracefully over the heavy jetted train. No ornaments are worn with this gown except a handsome ring set with a coral cabuchon, and the string of pearls twisted in the hair.

For dinner at home or in a restaurant, the blue crepe gown will be especially suitable. The arrangement of the bodice drapery suggests an extreme decolletage but the slightly V'd neck is really very modest, and the arms are covered to the elbow by the draped sleeves. The lifting of the sleeve frill to show a dimpled elbow is a coquettish notion. This gown is made of "blistered" crepe in dull blue, draped over a skirt of blue lansdowne of the same shade veiled with gray mousseline. The sleeves match the skirt and have frills of white Mechlin above other frills of gray chiffon. Blue chiffon matching the blue crepe is caught up on a little vest of white tulle over flesh colored chiffon, ruffles of the Mechlin falling softly at either side. It is the tulle vest over flesh tinted chiffon which gives the bodice a pronounced decollete effect. The girdle is particularly handsome and is of gray silk elaborately embroidered in shades of blue, white and gray. This gown, intended for restaurant wear, is accompanied by dainty little patent leather boots with Louis heels and buttoned tops of black kid; blue silk stockings matching the gown being revealed above the pretty little boot when the skirt is lifted.

Gloves Removed At Every Opportunity.

The woman of the moment abhors gloves and removes them whenever there is an excuse for doing so—which is a pity, for the new gloves of embroidered silk complete the costume most satisfactorily. Gloves are never worn at all at formal dinners, and at dances they are abandoned early in the evening. Some women even draw them off at the opera but this is a practice not indulged in by sticklers for conventionality and correct form. Long gloves of silk, delicately embroidered on the wrist are considered proper now with all types of evening costume, and such gloves cling more gracefully to the arm than even the softest leather would do. The Finishing Touch

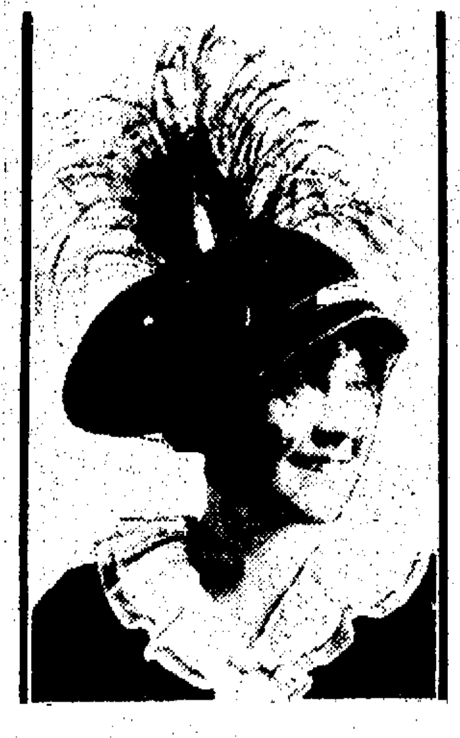
JUST what would it mean to be the best dressed woman in town?" said one smartly frocked woman to another the other day as they sat in a New York tea room at a daintily laid tete-a-tete table, "not the most expensively dressed, you know, for cost does not always mean style, but from the standpoint of detail and general appearance?"

Her friend replied, "It is just this very matter of detail that the French put the most stress on, the attention to the little things of dress, the accessories, the trimmings, the touch here, the addition there, all of which go to make up a perfect whole. Dress in such a case is not a mere matter of being covered up and being neat, it is an art, a study, and I believe that it is every woman's duty to put all the time and attention she can on it—within reason to be sure."



A Veil Always Dainty and Feminine.

Attention to the little things of dress is just the point on which so many women fail or succeed; but the wise one has long since found that a goodly supply of accessories will go far to make up for the possible lack in the matter of larger and more expensive garments—frocks, coats, hats, for instance. And this season of all seasons, seems to be the one in which the well dressed woman, be her dress ever so simple, can least afford to neglect the little additions that make for style, and hence for attractiveness.

Some neck finish is absolutely indispensable and not to be omitted from blouses and dresses and even coats and suits, the plainest and the most elaborate, for it gives that dressy, finished touch about the neck and a softening frame to the face, which is especially needed now that high collars are out of vogue.

The neckpiece shown is typical in size and arrangement and in the Medici frill, which here stands up about the neck, serving the old purpose of the high collar. This style, too, is generally becoming and graceful. It is very easy to add the Medici effect to any sort of a garment by these very little frills that are to be had by the yard and to be basted into the neck. Some of these can be laundered; but it is best to whisk them out in gasoline for a few wearings and then throw away.

The separate vest is the newest thing this season, worn with tailored or elaborate suits, and made just like a man's vest or sometimes without the back. Such a vest or vestette is often made so dressy and of such pretty material that it is left on as part of the blouse when the coat is removed. Indeed this fashion is so strong that the latest blouses are made in vest effect, that is a vest-like part of some fancy silk material, with sleeves of net or chiffon.

Another revival of a charming old fashion is that of the boa, especially the ostrich feather boa or stole, the fashion going even to the extent of having muffs to match. These accessories of ostrich are ever so pretty for the party outfit, to wear over the wrap and to throw about the neck between dances—a bit daintier than fur and less expensive. Still less expensive are the innumerable dainty scarfs to throw about the neck and shoulders. These run in such a variety that some women have even been found looking through the bargain sales for pieces of flowered silk or chiffon that may be converted into a scarf for evening.

In the matter of dainty finishes that are quite at the top notch of fashion, easy to accomplish and unusually effective, there are a thousand and one ways in which to use up scraps of fur that have been left over from past seasons. Fur trimmings are to be seen on everything—dainty chiffon scarfs, sheer blouses, collars and cuffs of suits and dresses and coats, on millinery of every sort, on children's garments, and even on lacey theatre and boudoir caps. By all means hunt up every scrap of fur and put it into use in the cause of being well dressed—well finished.

Along with the furs come a host of butterflies and fruits—fruits of velvet used in millinery and as corsage finishes on frocks; butterflies of every sort of material on everything. Millinery trimmings are made into the shape of butterflies, of net, chiffon, silk and the same things are used in the place of the belt bouquet. Butterfly bows of the sash material make the finish, front or back of all girdles now. Big bows in Japanese style, or smaller ones, just so that it resembles a butterfly. Now for the veil! There is an old saying that a lady without a veil is like a flower without perfume. The wearing of the veil has become a matter of [illegible] but surely it is a blessing to the business woman or the shopper who has this additional help in keeping her hair trim. Still another [illegible] veil is the harem [illegible] wide border that comes up just to the eyes, after the manner of the harem face cover, showing the eyes to an unusually flirtatious advantage. WORK and PLAY for the IDLE HOUR

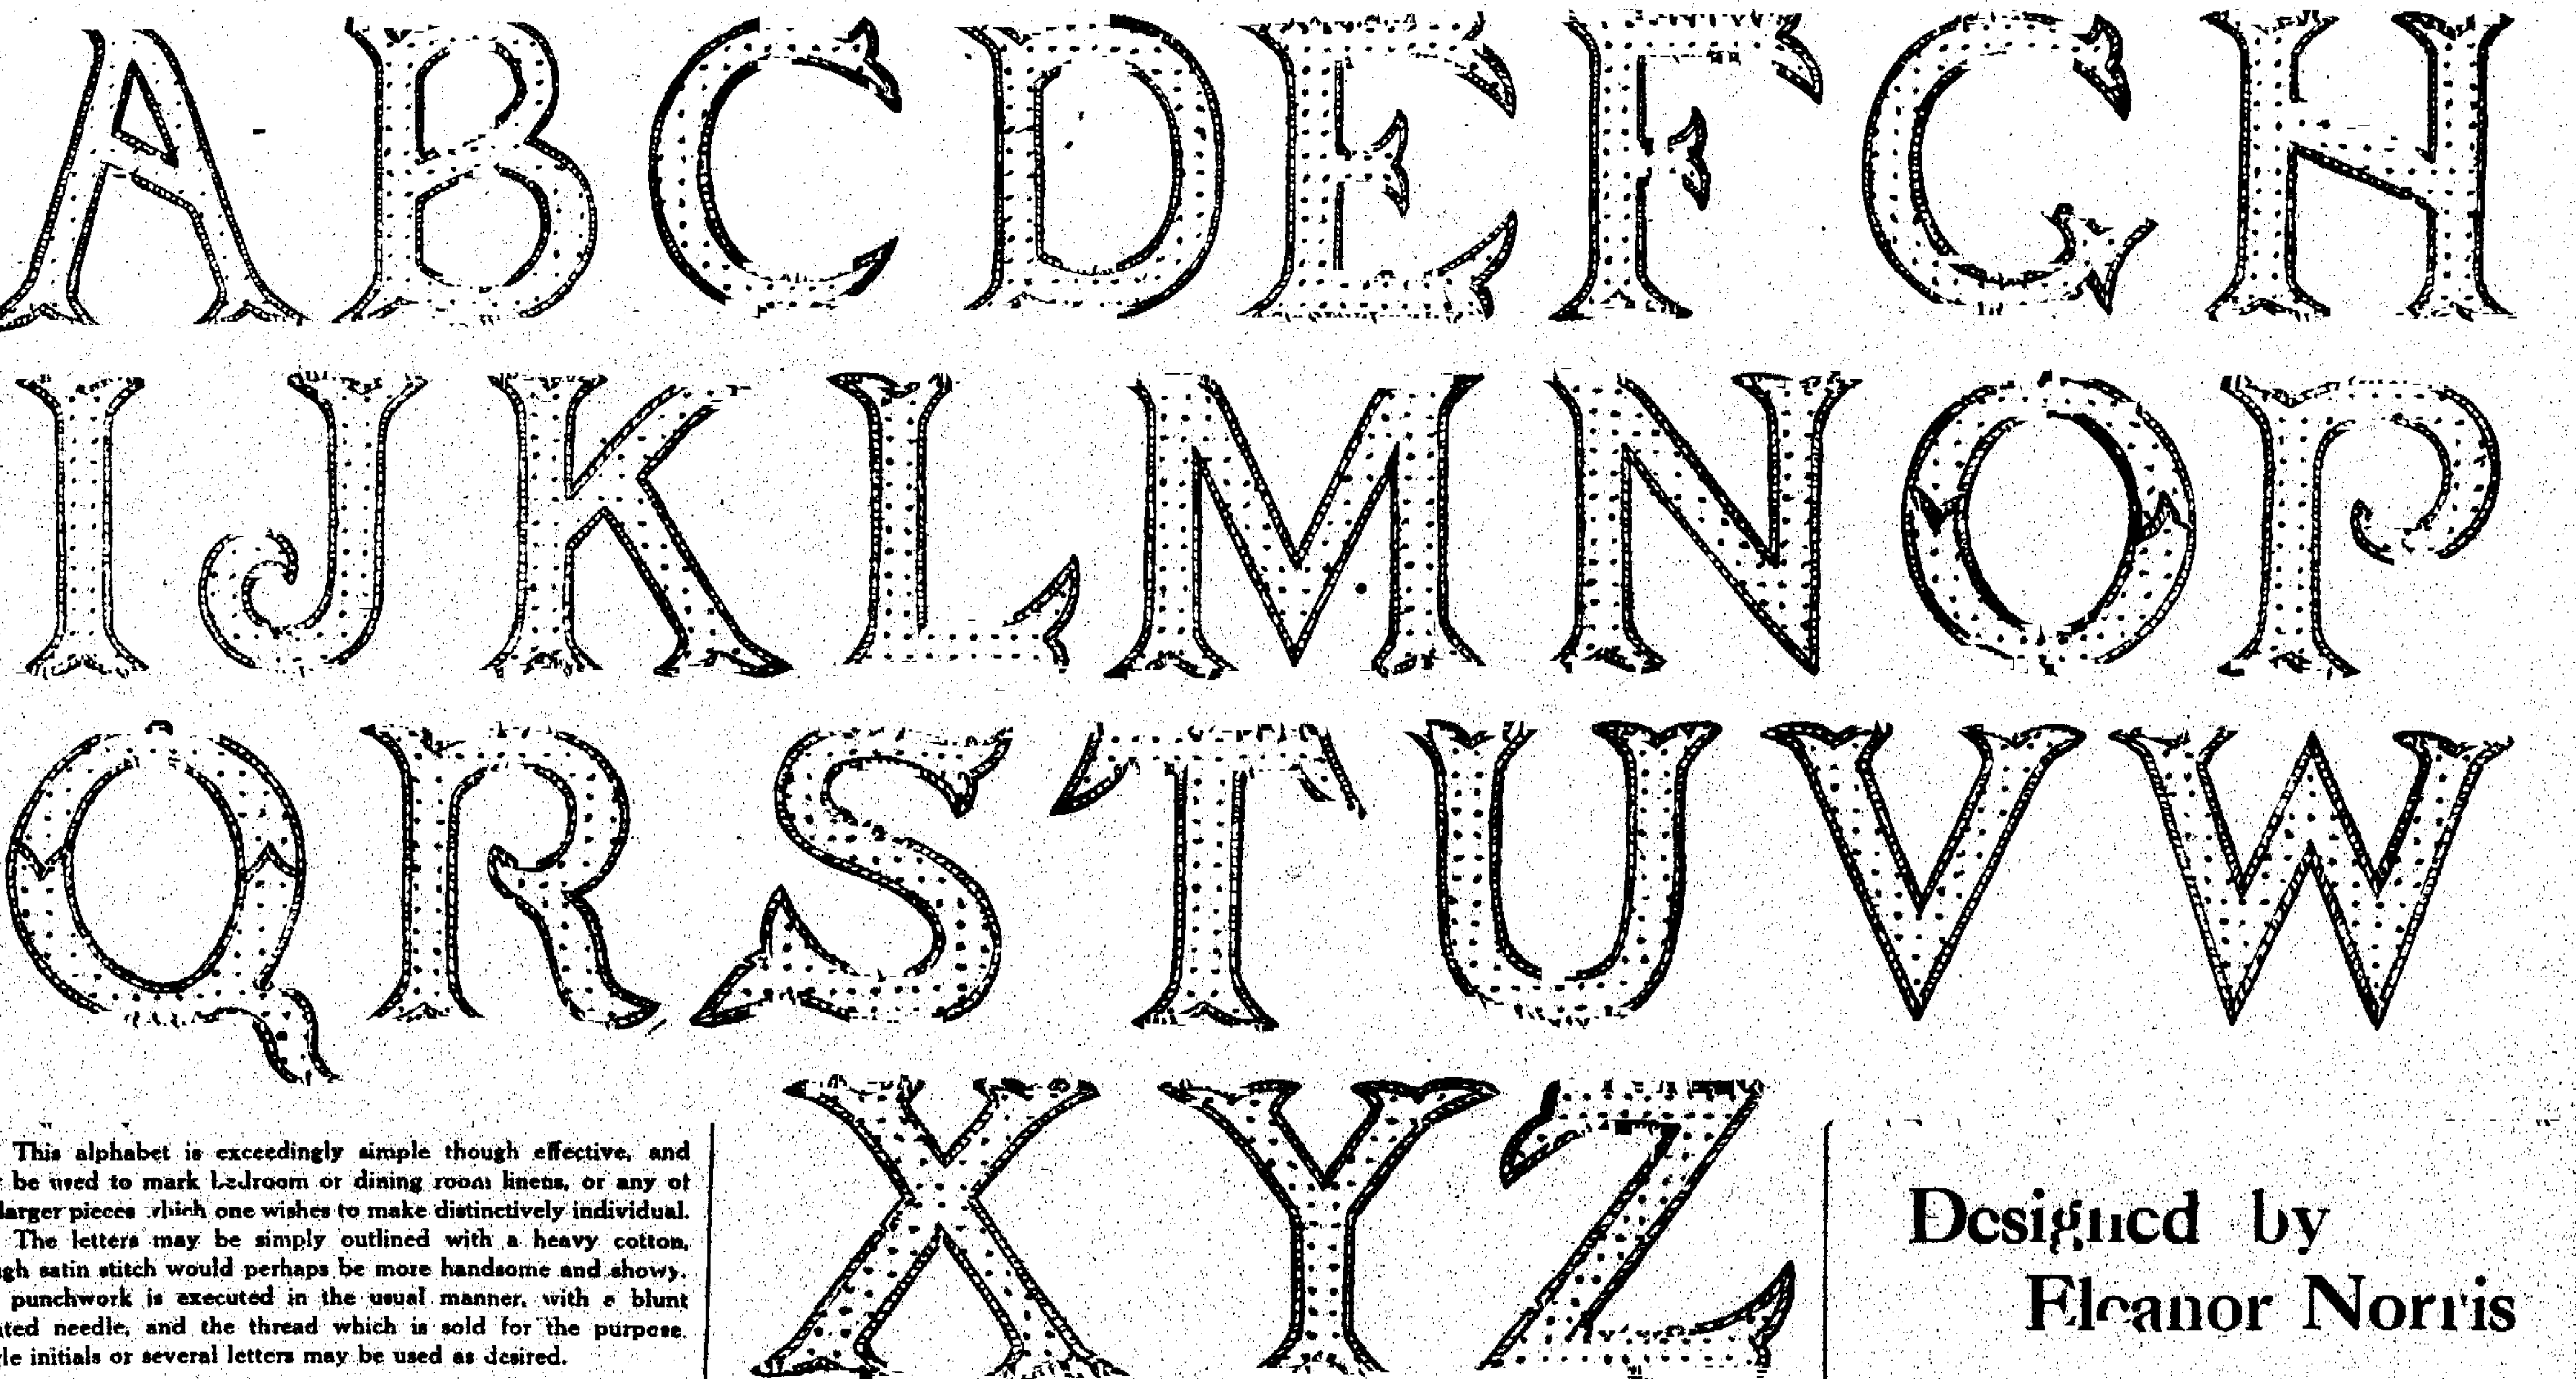
Attractive Punch Work Alphabet for Marking Linen



This alphabet is exceedingly simple though effective, and may be used to mark bedroom or dining room linens, or any of the larger pieces which one wishes to make distinctively individual. The letters may be simply outlined with a heavy cotton, though satin stitch would perhaps be more handsome and showy. The punchwork is executed in the usual manner, with a blunt pointed needle, and the thread which is sold for the purpose. Single initials or several letters may be used as desired.

Miss Norris' Answers to Correspondents

Blind Loops.

B. O. A.:—Blind loops are used on net or fine lingerie blouses instead of eyes. These are not hard to make and are so much more in keeping with a dainty waist.

To make, mark the position for the loops, then bring the needle up through the material and take several stitches the length the loop is to be. The stitches are taken one over the other and from the foundation over which the close buttonhole stitches are taken. The buttonhole stitches may either be taken from left to right in the ordinary way, or the stitches may be taken from right to left, bringing the needle down over the thread each time. Either way is correct, but the latter method is less bulky and therefore preferable.

Ribbon Slippers.

Emma D.:—A new idea for ribbon slippers is that of using two shades of ribbon, laying one shade over and under the other to form a basket weave. Use two-inch satin ribbon, tacking the ribbons where they cross each other.

Any bedroom slippers could be used to serve as a guide over which to shape the woven ribbon. The top is slip-stitched to a satin covered quilted sole. A frill of lace or narrow ribbon around the edge with a lace or ribbon rosette in front finishes the slipper.

These ribbon basket weave slippers can be made more elaborate by shirring the ribbon crosswise at regular intervals where it would form the upper part of the weave. If the ribbon is shirred it would be more effective with one color, but if the ribbon is [illegible] plain [illegible] trasting colors would be more attractive.

Slippers of this sort make a lovely gift for the girl who is preparing her trousseau.

Alphabet.

Miss E. T. M.:—An alphabet of cross-stitch initials, [illegible] Italian style was [illegible]. The letters [illegible] very effective for [illegible] towels, pillows, aprons [illegible].

You can [illegible] par hasting [illegible] the [illegible] it was given. [illegible] disappoint [illegible] ing [illegible].

As various [illegible] are given from [illegible] soon have a splendid [illegible] of letters suitable for all kinds of marking by saving the alphabets.

Design Requested.

G. M. H.:—[illegible] grant a request [illegible] lately, as it would have to be designed and drawn and then [illegible] for publication.

The design you wish is a very practical and up-to-date pattern, which will be given as soon as possible.

French Fagotting.

Mrs. E. N.:—Hand-made open work of all kind is now being used for joining seams in the new blouses. Venetian ladder work, either buttonholed or [illegible] could be often [illegible] but fagotting is perhaps the most popular stitch, as it is quickly made. Among the great variety of fagotting stitches, the French fagot is mostly used.

To make French fagotting the edges to be joined are finished with a rolled hem and then basted to a stiff paper about one-eighth of an inch apart, if the seam is to be small.

Instead of the stitches being taken diagonally, they are straight, holding the edges together with small twisted bars, the result being a hand made entre deaux. Ordinary sewing thread is used for narrow seam, but if the opening to be filled is wide, embroidery cotton is best.

When making the bars, the thread is brought from the upper to the lower edge of the whipped sides and when taking stitch into the lower edge, the thread is passed under the needle as in making a buttonhole. It is twisted back to the upper edge and another bar is made.

This stitch is used in a sleeve as well as for shoulder seams, the gathers being adjusted by drawing up the whipping thread.

Candle Shades.

Mrs. J.:—The grape design candle shade published August 5 should be embroidered in one piece. The two sides are then joined with a small seam, which should be pressed open. The shade is folded as indicated by the dotted lines. If the shade is done in cut work, the seam is only taken above and below the embroidered band, while lace spiders are worked in the open space.

The iris shade would be very effective embroidered in four sections, joined with entre deaux, lace beading or fagotting. Work the iris in three shades of purple, using the long and short stitch for the petals which turn down and outlining the petals which turn up, filling them with seeding stitch. The [illegible] background should be made with white floss, through which a soft yellow lining would be most attractive. If embroidered in this way the shade will be beautiful and very pleasing. When cutting the sections allow enough material on each side so that the edge will be turned back or rolled, if the [illegible] is to be [illegible] with beading.

The bottom and top can be finished with a plain narrow buttonholed edge or with edging of lace. If the grape shade is made of ecru linen, as suggested, the best finish would be a narrow [illegible] lace applied perfectly straight along the edges, either with a rolled hem or by turning the edge up on the right side and sewing the lace along the turned back edge. For the second shade a frill of Val lace or a tiny edging [illegible] would be attractive.

[illegible] shades are worn over a colored [illegible] paper lining and if the foundation is slightly smaller than the cover, it can be pulled down over the frame and it fits snugly, there is no danger of its getting out of shape. If fitted over [illegible] foundation, the cover should be tacked here and there with sewing thread to hold it securely in place.

To Launder Fillet Crochet.

Dina H.:—As with every kind of needlecraft, the fillet crochet should be carefully laundered. The work should not be rubbed, but squeezed between the hands in a suds of pure soap and water. If the work is very much soiled, lay it on a flat surface, and brush it with soap and water, using a small bristle brush. It should never be twisted when wringing and should be well rinsed.

Of course, washing will shrink the crochet, but it can be restored to the correct size by ironing it before it is entirely dry on a well-padded board, between two pieces of cheesecloth. Finish by pressing it on the wrong side with a warm iron as that will flatten the crochet and bring out the pattern of the design.

Unless the laundering of fillet crochet is well done the beauty of the work will surely be marred.

Fillet Embroidery.

Mrs. J. J.—The work to which you refer is not a new kind of punch work, but is an open lace stitch background, which looks like fillet and is called fillet embroidery. The space indicated on the patterns is first filled and then the linen underneath is cut away, leaving the fillet embroidery. The work is entirely different from punch work for in punch embroidery the stitches are taken into the linen and it is the linen which forms the background, while in fillet embroidery, the stitches are laid over the linen, which is afterwards cut out, and the laid threads form the background.

The fillet embroidery is made by crossing threads at right angles to each other so as to form equal squares. The work should be done in well-padded hoops so that the linen is held taut, and the lines which form the background can be keep perfectly straight and even. The stitches of cross bars should be carried across the space to be filled in one direction, taking long stitches from one side to the other until the space is filled, and then taking the stitches in the opposite direction, at right angles to those already taken, making a knot at every crossing. The knot is made by carrying the thread over the first thread to be crossed, then holding this loop down with the thumb, put the needle under the thread to be crossed and through the loop, drawing the thread tightly, so that the knot will come directly on the intersection of the two lines. The work is continued in this way until there is a knot at every intersection of the lines.

This work must be carefully done and should be accomplished with painstaking exactness for unless it is firm and straight, the work will not be effective.

After the background is finished the edge surrounding it is buttonholed or held firm with satin stitch and when the embroidery is all completed the material is cut out from underneath the crossed foundation.

Crocheted Spread.

Mrs. S.:—The directions for the bedspread published July [illegible] were for the making of the illustrated folded spread. The large medallion is sufficiently plain to be copied directly from the picture.

A magnifying glass will greatly aid one in picking a pattern from an illustration.

Buckle.

E. R.:—A very pretty buckle for a ribbon sash bow can be made with an ordinary bone buckle wrapped with satin. Instead of the bone buckle a form cut from stiff cardboard would answer this purpose.

A large, fancy buckle made in this way would be effective with the ribbon girdles and sashes now worn, and if the buckle was wrapped with pink or blue satin and then decorated with chiffon roses it would be very chic for an evening gown.

Pattern Wanted.

Mrs. W. D. A.:—Patterns of the embroidery designs are not sold, as the designs can be transferred directly from the paper by means of impression paper.

The impression paper can be purchased in any art or stationery store for ten cents a sheet. One sheet can be used until worn out, so that a great number of patterns can be transferred with it. To transfer a pattern in this way lay the impression paper right side down on the goods, then over it lay the pattern, being careful to pin it or to secure it with weights so that it will not slip out of place, and then trace the design with a sharp, hard pencil.

By this method another pattern is not necessary, as you can use the design directly from the paper.

To Keep Silks in Order.

N. O.:—Perhaps this plan may help you to keep the silks in perfect condition. Save the empty sewing cotton spools, then open one end of the skein of floss and wrap it on a spool; pasting the number on the end of the spool. Each skein can in this way be kept separate.

This is really a saving of the silk floss, as the cut ends become raveled if not worked up quickly. It is the best way to preserve the floss when the work is only done at long intervals.

When the silk is used rapidly it can be cut and kept in a linen holder or in a book.

IN THE JAP SHOPS

In the Japanese and Chinese shops are many fascinating house things—little helps toward making the house a pleasant place in warm weather.

There are grass mats for the porch, for instance, that cost but a few cents. And the Japanese and other porch screens are known far and wide for their comfortgiving qualities. Those from Japan are of bamboo and painted in different hues and you may have wide or narrow slats.

That blue and white cotton which looks so cool and is made up into [illegible] articles that cost comparatively little. These pieces launder very well. You may have table covers, whole luncheon sets or separate pieces, towels and bedspreads.

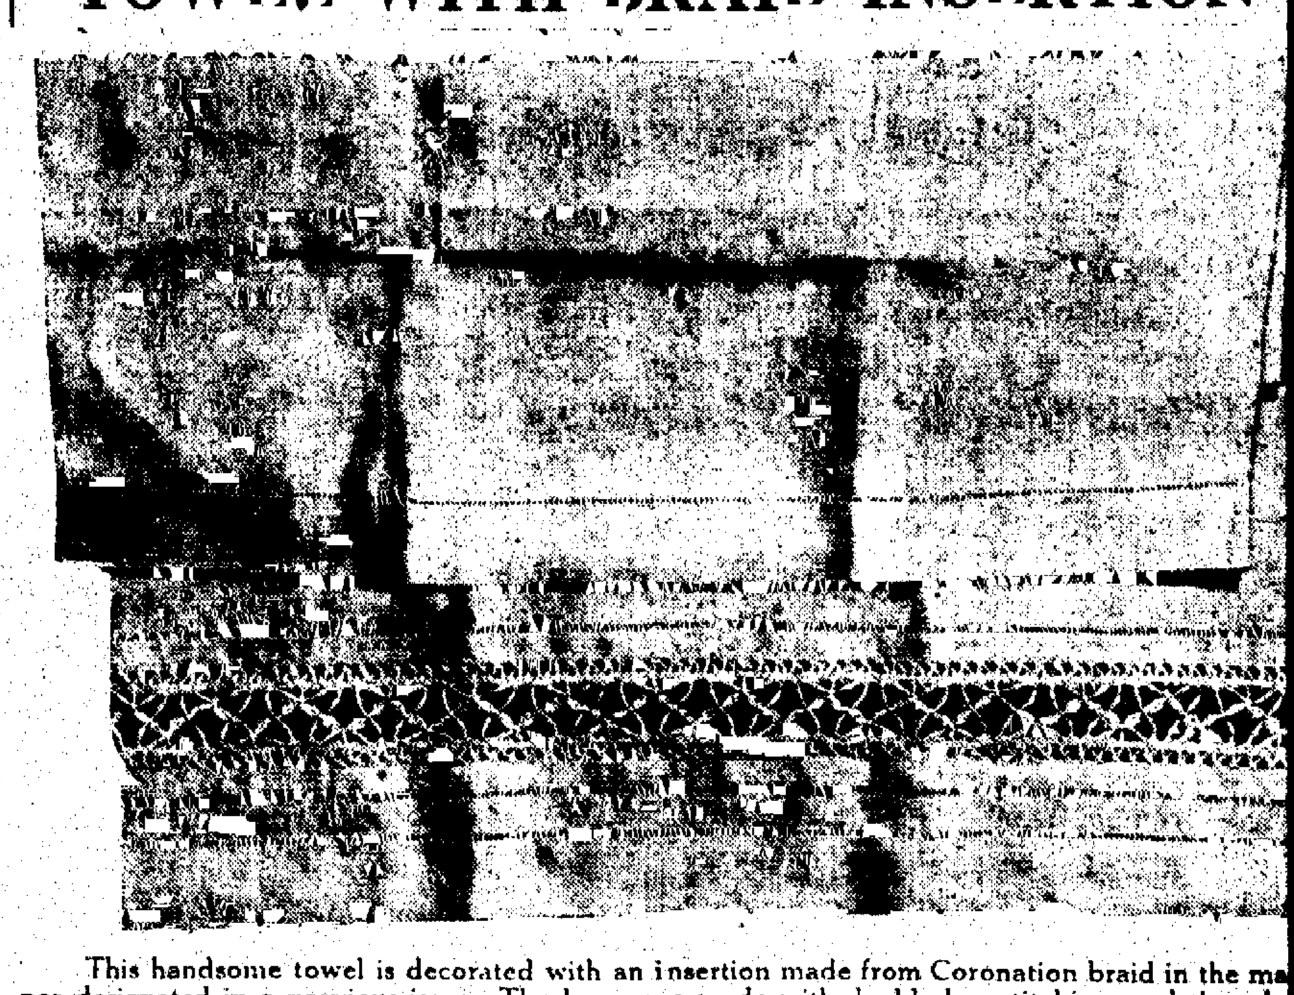
As for the afternoon tea table on the porch or lawn, there are sets of such pretty china you will find it hard to resist the temptation to buy them.

Baskets and bowls to hold fruit and flowers come in that pretty dark wicker ware and are very effective and decorative.

To Hold the Baby's Clothes

A deep wooden box will answer the purpose. Line throughout with blue [illegible] and cover the outside with blue and white cretonne. Lift the lid and [illegible] pockets of blue, white cloth headed [illegible] to ornament the top. A pretty [illegible] the cover may be made of a small embroidery hoop bound with blue ribbon and attached to the cover.

TOWEL WITH BRAID INSERTION



This handsome towel is decorated with an insertion made from Coronation braid in the ma ner designated in a previous issue. The hems are made with double hemstitching, and the who effect is very neat and attractive. The design for the lace insertion may be quite easily follow by anyone who has mastered the instructions for this fascinating work which were published the issue of August 24th.

Layette Accessories

A CERTAIN young mother with more affection than money to spend upon her first-born, has got up a most attractive looking layette trunk from materials that were in the house. Its foundation is a rough box of about the size of a shirt waist trunk and this she first covered with several layers of white sheet wadding, then with coarse muslin and finally with white voile over which wander small girls and tall storks, stenciled in pale blue. The lining of the box is similarly decorated and its hinges of wide blue satin ribbon swing from under big bows set on the outer side of the chest and flat lid. This layette chest, which is an important part of the furnishings of a very small nursery, is also the support for the basket-cot, which must needs take the place of a bassinet until the baby begins to sleep in a crib. The little cot is merely a shallow clothes basket, lined with detachable side pads to which belong a special set of lingerie slips, and into which is fitted a soft little oval mattress. The outer sides of the basket are concealed by a lawn valance, veiled by a wide ruffle of Valenciennes edge fine lawn which once trimmed a lingerie frock, and at either end of it is looped up with blue ribbon bows.

Two new shapes are to be found in infant bath baskets. Both are in splint straw and very substantial. One of them, a shallow circular affair of half yard diameter, has a flat lid that swings off with the aid of a wide ribbon hinge, but when adjusted perfectly protects the inside of the basket from dust. The base of the receptacle is padded, then lined with Swiss or batiste and its upper edge trimmed with inch wide double frillings of matching material, edged with the narrowest of Valenciennes lace. The lid's edge is also finished with a double frilling and on its centre is a large bow of blue ribbon.

The second basket is a pail-shaped affair laced with wide ribbons from base to top and unlined save at the bottom where is a circular cushion which may be easily taken out and covered with a white lingerie slip. The top edge of this basket is finished with a detachable lingerie double frilling which buttons together under a bow of ribbon. Both baskets hold the usual celluloid toilet sets, painted to match the ribbon bows as well as soap and powder boxes and rubber-lined lingerie wash cloth bags.

OF INTEREST TO BABY'S MOTHER

The baby's mother may perhap glad to know that the first little dr are now only twenty-seven inches from throat to hem and are p than every they have been. Son the imported dresses that are w very fashionable infants are of est batiste, embroidered with a or in colored batiste, embroidere white, but there is actually very needlework upon any of them an about the neck and shou The prejudice against putting materials upon the baby is vani in many quarters and even well- infants wear nightgowns in fine cotton crepe, which may be washe in the nursery basin and need n ironed. These gowns come stampe embroidery and they make dainty up fancy work for the industrious en. The little kimonos, which are in every infantile wardrobe, are made of cotton crepe of pale tones, very neat little affairs they are, to occasionally a devoted and [illegible] complimentary embroiders a up the fronts of a crepe kim but a herringboned hem is eq dainty.

NEW TARIFF BILL IN U. S. MEANS KEENER TRADE IN WORLD'S MARTS

Noted German Writer Says People of Old Countries Greet Measure With Joy

By FREDERICK WERNER

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—An event of world wide importance was what practically the whole German press called the act of the American senate in passing the new Democratic tariff bill and we are anxiously awaiting the day when it gets the presidential signature.

With great joy Germany has greeted the first step towards the lowering of the American tariff wall, because she sees in this event a signal to the old and new world to leave the wornout track of exaggerated protection to manufacturers, though everybody realize that it would be foolish to look for an American free trade policy for years to come.

Arthur Nordon, the famous financial editor of the "Berliner Tageblatt" writes thus of the new American tariff bill as passed by the senate:

"While, on one side, the bills look out for the interests of the consumers, the American industry, on the other side, cannot complain that it is not sufficiently protected. Great reductions have only been made on such industrial products in the manufacturing of which American manufacturers are ahead of foreign competitors or at least very well able to take up competition successfully. Protection of industry, however, lies in another more important sphere, which of course is a terra incognita to shortsighted or dyed-in-the-wool believers in excessive tariffs; the cost of living of the workers is part of the cost of production in all industries, the more it costs the worker to live, the higher will be the cost of production.

Bill Protects Manufacturer.

"If this new bill takes care of the interests of the masses it certainly also protects the interests of the manufacturers, aside from the fact that in the increased purchasing ability of the working classes lies the main spring of economic progress and prosperity.

"Under the Payne-Aldrich law which will now be abolished it was impossible for the United States to conclude commercial reciprocity treaties with other countries. America set an autonomous custom policy according to the antiquated doctrine that the state must have free hands to protect the interests of national production, and must not tie itself by treaties with foreign countries. As a weapon of reserve the United States then held the maximum tariff of 25 per cent additional duties to be imposed on imports from such countries which discriminated against the United States. America then, though it vainly demanded to be treated as "the most favored nation" by all other countries, though she was sparing with favors herself, though she, in the interest of Pan-Americanism, did not hesitate to grant certain South American states as well as the neighboring Dominion of Canada concessions which were not extended to the "most-favored" nations.

"The new tariff bill makes it possible for the United States to conclude customs treaties with other countries. This will increase America's exports and as this will mean keener competition in the markets of the world, it is, of course, evident that the American tariff reform, valuable though it is from a general economic point of view holds certain disadvantages to European industry. These, however, must not be overestimated any more than must the distinct advantages which the American tariff reform will bring to European export."

I have quoted this at some length, because I think my American readers are interested in knowing what Germany thinks of the new policy of their country, and because the views expressed give a very good idea of the general opinion in Germany.

Prove Value of Aircraft.

The recent kaiser maneuvers in Silesia have given ample proof that dirigibles and aeroplanes have made completely new military fighting methods necessary. All tactical secrets are like an open book to Zeppelins and fliers, that is to say if the atmosphere be clear. In fog and mist the new engines of war are useless for reconnoitering purposes, but under ordinary circumstances they are far superior to cavalry.

During the maneuvers the commanders and officers of the opposing armies made use of all the latest technical inventions with most excellent result and even the "antimilitaristic" papers must admit that the training of the German army is perfect and absolutely up-to-date on every point. All foreign officers who attended the maneuvers expressed their admiration and took home with them the conviction that the German army in case of war would be an invaluable friend and a most formidable enemy. Of all the armies in Europe probably only the French is the equal, if not the superior, of the German, with the army of England left hopelessly far behind, judging from the reports of the English army maneuvers which have reached here and which mention a number of blunders committed by English officers which have been most carefully concealed by the English press.

COUNTESS OF GRANARD

PARIS, Oct. 4.—The Earl and Countess of Granard, the latter formerly Miss Beatrice Mills of New York, are in Paris visiting for a short time with friends.

At a house party the other evening the countess told some of those present that as soon as she returned to London she would, in company with some of her English friends, establish a private and very exclusive club along "cabaret" lines. It is planned to have afternoon dancing between 4 and 6 o'clock and from midnight until 2 a. m.

The countess expressed the opinion that dancing would be more of a craze this winter than it ever has been, especially in London. She has long been recognized as one of the best dancers in London society. The earl also is an enthusiastic and graceful dancer, and enters heartily into his wife's schemes.

COMPLETE MOST EXPENSIVE EUROPEAN RAILWAY STATION

GENEVA, Oct. 4.—One of the largest and most expensive railway stations in Europe has just been completed on the Swiss-German frontier at Basle.

The station, which is on German territory but touches the Swiss frontier, cost nearly $15,000,000 and the work of constructing took nearly three years. Most of the capital was found by the Duchy of Baden.

AMERICAN WOMEN'S LOVE OF THRILLS ASTOUNDS FRENCH

Even Young Girls Immensely Enjoy Horrible Dramas, They Exclaim

By GEORGE DUFRESNE

PARIS, Oct. 4.—How young women must love thrills and blood-curdling stage dramas!

I went to the Grand Guignol theater a few nights ago and found the best boxes and the front rows of the orchestra occupied by young Americans, many of them evidently still in their teens or just out of them, calmly and unconcernedly enjoying plays which would drive even the most blasé Parisienne mad with fear, for this little theater produces only the most horrible melodramas, and it takes nerves of steel to sit through an evening's program.

The night when I was there the first drama was "Gardiens de Phares" (The Lighthouse Keepers), which shows a young man who, while tending a lighthouse on the lonely coast of Brittany, is suddenly seized with hydrophobia. To save himself, the father of the young man is compelled to kill his son. And the scenes of madness and murder are enacted with so many gruesome and realistic details that several times I felt the color leaving my cheeks and beads of cold perspiration covering my forehead, though I rather flatter myself that I am not a hypersensitive or impressionable person. But while I repeatedly shut my eyes to the scenes of horror and secretly wished myself miles away, your young and beautiful countrywomen without a single exception, as far as I could see, seemed to enjoy the drama thoroughly, and one of them, a very young girl with a face of the most angelic beauty, who sat in the same row with me, actually told her companion that she was rather disappointed, as she had expected something much more gruesome.

One Drama Stirred Emotions.

I sincerely hope that she did not understand the next play, "Master Tom," written by M. Jose De Berys, the witty secretary of "La Vie Parisienne," the plot of which is quite unprintable and whose dialogue is the most daring that has ever been heard, even on a Parisian stage. Certainly no French young girl would have dared to sit through it.

The last drama, however, did stir up the emotions of the Americans and they certainly would not have been human if it had not. It was "Le Baiser Dans la Nuit" (The Kiss in the Night), by Maurice Level.

A young man has become blind after the most dreadful sufferings. His friend, a little midinette from the left bank of the Seine, has thrown vitrol in his face in a fit of jealousy, but he bears his fate and his sufferings with heroic patience. He refuses to make a complaint against her and she is acquitted by the jury. Her lawyer comes to thank the noble-minded young man, who has only one desire—to hear the voice of his beloved once more.

In the next act the young girl comes to him, penitent and crushed. She implores him to forgive her and trembles when she sees his horribly seared face. He begs her to let him have one more kiss, the last. She shudders at the thought of kissing this dreadful face, but she consents at last. He pulls her down on his lap and kisses her into the eternal night. His hand grips the back of her neck as if in a vise, and deaf to her cries of despair, he takes from his pocket a bottle of vitriol and blinds her slowly, one eye at a time, enjoying her maddening pain.

I watched the young American girl next to me several times during this revolting drama. She was staring at the stage as if in a trance, and she looked perhaps a trifle paler, but as soon as the curtain was down she appeared as cool and unconcerned as ever. The drama had left no lasting or at least no visible impression.

I admit that to a certain extent she aroused my admiration by her wonderful self control, even if it seemed to me unnatural in one so young. But I asked myself if your wonderfully beautiful women are entirely devoid of emotions and I pitied the man who will some time marry her.

MOUNTAIN CLIMBER SEIZED WITH CRAMPS FALLS 1000 FEET INTO VALLEY BELOW

Frenchman Was Scaling Rax Mountain Near Vienna With Young Woman, Also Experienced Mountaineer.

VIENNA, Oct. 4.—M. Maurice de Lebental, a French teacher in Vienna, was seized with a cramp while climbing Rax Mountain in the Semmering range, recently, and fell 1,000 feet into the valley below.

He was accompanied by a young woman, who, like himself, was an experienced climber, and they had nearly reached the top clinging to the chains and hooks fixed in the almost perpendicular side of the mountain when he was seized with cramp.

He implored his companion to grasp his arms, and she complied at the risk of her life, but M. Lebental lost his hold and fell.

LADY DIANA MANNERS

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The American accent is now "the thing" in London society.

An accent of some kind has always been the vogue, and for a time it was the Oxford drawl, then the cockney twang. During these periods Americans were ridiculed for their accent; but now they find they are pounced upon and their every inflection is studied and copied.

No doubt the growing number of American peeresses is largely responsible for this new fashion, but no one has served to popularize it as much as Lady Diana Manners, who believes in being a few minutes ahead of everyone else. She says she adores the American accent and intends to use it the rest of her life. It was she who introduced the cockney twang and mannerisms. In her childhood she was known as "Lady Perfect Manners."

ENGLISHMAN DOESN'T OWN OWN HOME WHEN MILITANT SUFFRAGETTE IS AROUND

Can't Wash My Street at Home When Sister-in-Law Is There, Says Nicholls.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—That an Englishman's home is not always his castle when a militant suffragette is around, was proven recently in the case of Alfred Nichols. The details of the militant invasion came out in court where Nichols had his sister-in-law, Florence Chapman, summoned for assault.

"Mrs. Nichols was taken ill," the solicitor explained, "and Miss Chapman, who is a suffragette, visited the house to look after her. Then the troubles of Mr. Nichols began. He could not get his meals prepared or his linen washed.

"One Sunday, in desperation, the poor man set about washing a shirt and collar himself. He heated water and mixed starch ready for use, but his sister-in-law evidently objected to this. She invaded the kitchen armed with a walking stick, and belabored him over the head and shoulders.

"Mr. Nichols beat a hasty retreat and locked himself in a bedroom. Then he issued this summons.

"He is of a forbearing nature. All he asks is for Miss Chapman to leave him in peace."

Miss Chapman said she could not leave, as Mrs. Nichols was ill. She was informed that she had no right to remain in the house if Mr. Nichols objected.

The case was adjourned for a week to see if she left.

LORD LOREBURN CONDEMNS ENTIRE RADICAL PROGRAM OF GOVERNMENT

Sad Mistake to Say He Stands With the Nationalists on Home Rule Question

BY PHILIP EVERETT

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The question of Home Rule overshadows everything else in political circles, although it leaves the common people, with the exception of the Belfast Orangemen, quite cold. Lord Loreburn's much discussed letter to the "Times" indeed came as a godsend to the Tories, who [illegible] of appealing [illegible] were even more at sea than they are now.

In vain, however, [illegible] the whole Tory press tried to make it appear that the former lord chancellor was acting on behalf of a perplexed liberal government and that the letter was to be looked upon as a radical flag of distress.

As a matter of fact Lord Loreburn, though nominally a liberal peer, no longer swears by the same gods as he did before he was made a peer, and since [illegible] from standing close to the present government he sharply condemns practically the whole radical program, including Welsh disestablishment, with the only exception of home rule, and even in regard to this measure his zeal has weakened, and the Nationalists who formerly looked upon him as a warm friend are now anything but enthusiastic over him. Anyone who remembers the way in which he suddenly resigned will admit that it would take a very strong stomach to swallow the statement that he had been selected to act as the mouthpiece of the government, quite aside from the fact that his suggestion practically amounts to asking the government to withdraw the home rule bill and reopen the whole Irish question.

As matters look at present it is most unlikely that there will be a conference even should the Tories unbend and offer a basis of it acceptable to the government.

Must Face Ulster.

In a recent issue the editor of "Truth" dealing with the political situation says that no one, who is not ready to face Ulster, should touch home rule. So far the government has not shown any sign of weakening but "Truth" tells them that all attempts to pacify the Orangemen are sure to be looked upon as such a sign.

"Ascendency in Belfast," he says, "is a very ugly disease. It has got to be cured, and if there is a little bloodletting in the process the survivors will be all the better for the experience. As long ago as 1836 the report upon the Belfast riots commented severely upon the spirit of the Orange mob. It is no kindness and very bad statesmanship to surrender to that spirit. My own view is that the provisional army should be told plainly that if it plays the part of the Paris commune, the required whiff of grapeshot will undoubtedly follow. Such a declaration would cool much courage, and the government is merely inviting trouble when in the person of Mr. Birrell it allows any doubt to continue on the subject."

There is no doubt that the majority of the British people are ready to indorse this opinion.

The Tories have done themselves very much harm by their attempt to draw the king into the matter and [illegible] the present wearer of the crown a [illegible] would [illegible] rule made such [illegible] It is a well known [illegible] Lansdowne and Bonar Law made several attempts to [illegible] warning to [illegible] small wonder [illegible] to the [illegible] of the opposition.

"Never Go to King" Is Rule.

[illegible] King [illegible] the King is a card which should never be played in the game called party politics. After all, the [illegible] only two, the knave and joker.

A London [illegible] commented on the fact that no one has ever [illegible] a letter carrier or postal employe using bad language and it is quite sure that until now this class of people in England have borne their fate with almost superhuman patience.

Now, however, their patience is at an end and like most quiet men they are apt to prove formidable enemies when once roused into action. At a meeting the other day they voiced their grievances and came to the conclusion that as the present postmaster general has proved their most stubborn enemy, opposing their very reasonable claims on every point, and as he could not remain in office if defeated at the polls, the best way to get rid of him was to put a candidate in the field against him, who was to look after the special interests of postal employes in the house of commons. They have immediately started to collect an election fund.

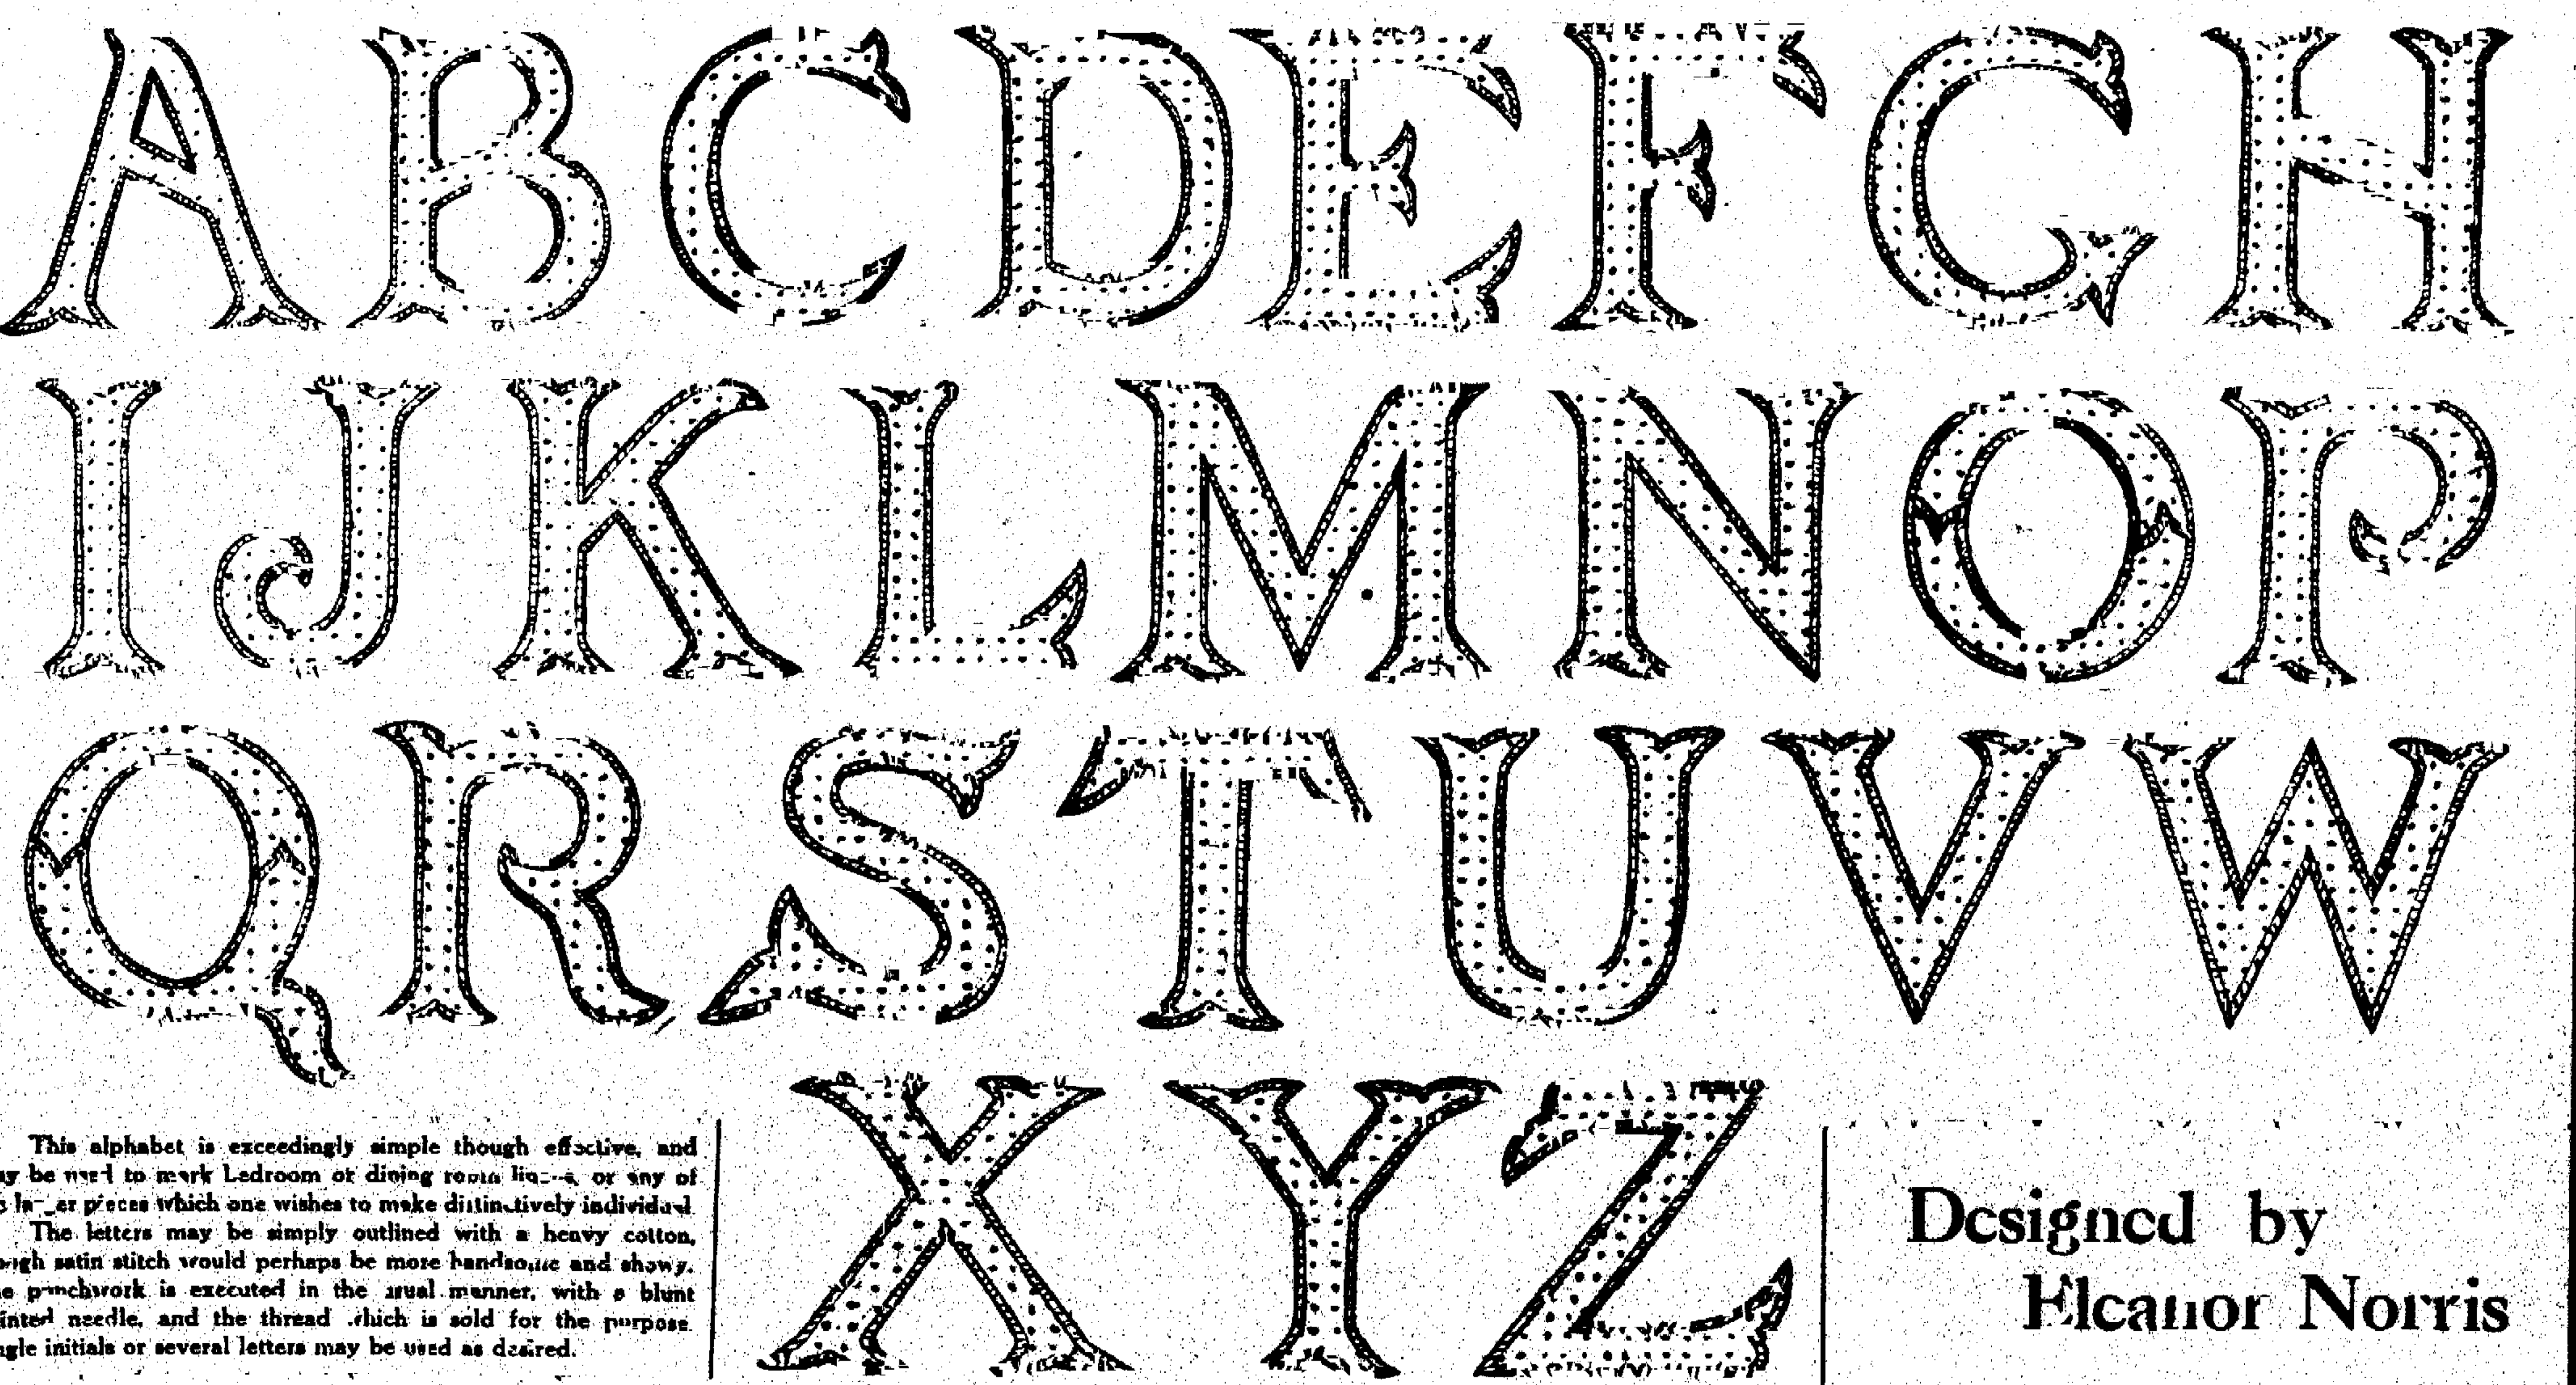
WORK and PLAY for the IDLE HOUR

Attractive Punch Work Alphabet for Marking Linen



This alphabet is exceedingly simple though effective, and may be used to mark bedroom or dining room linens, or any of the lesser pieces which one wishes to make distinctively individual.

The letters may be simply outlined with a heavy cotton, though satin stitch would perhaps be more handsome and showy. The punchwork is executed in the usual manner, with a blunt pointed needle, and the thread which is sold for the purpose. Single initials or several letters may be used as desired.

Designed by Eleanor Norris

Miss Norris' Answers to Correspondents

Blind Loops.

B. O. A.:—Blind loops are used on net or fine lingerie blouses instead of eyes. These are not hard to make and are so much more in keeping with a dainty waist.

To make, mark the position for the loops, then bring the needle up through the material and take several stitches the length the loop is to be. The stitches are taken one over the other and from the foundation over which the close buttonhole stitches are taken. The buttonhole stitches may either be taken from left to right in the ordinary way, or the stitches may be taken from right to left, bringing the needle down over the thread each time. Either way is correct, but the latter method is less bulky and therefore preferable.

Ribbon Slippers.

Emma B.:—A new idea for ribbon slippers is that of using two shades of ribbon, laying one shade over and under the other to form a basket weave. Use two-inch satin ribbon, tacking the ribbons where they cross each other.

Any bedroom slippers could be used to serve as a guide over which to shape the woven ribbon. The top is slip-stitched to a satin covered quilted sole. A frill of lace or narrow ribbon around the edge with a face of ribbon rosette in front finishes the slipper.

These ribbon basket weave slippers can be made more elaborate by shirring the ribon crosswise at regular intervals where it would form the upper part of the weave. If the ribbon is shirred it would be more effective with one color, but if the ribbon is woven plain contrasting colors would be more attractive.

Slippers of this sort make a lovely gift for the girl who is preparing her trousseau.

Alphabet.

Miss K. E. M.: An alphabet of cross-stitch initials, two inch size, old English style, was published April [illegible]. The letters of this alphabet are very effective for marking dresses, scarfs, towels, pillows, aprons, etc.

You can only secure the alphabet by purchasing a copy of the issue in which it was given. Am very sorry, indeed, to disappoint you, but patterns are not supplied excepting through the paper.

As various alphabets in different styles are given from time to time, you will soon have a splendid collection of letters, suitable for all kinds of marking, by saving the alphabets.

Design Requested.

G. M. H.: It would not be possible to grant a request for a pattern immediately, as it would have to be designed and drawn and then await its turn for publication.

The design you wish is a very practical and up-to-date pattern, which will be given as soon as possible.

French Fagotting.

Mrs. E. N.—Hand-made open work of all kind is now being used for joining seams in the new blouses. Venetian ladder work, either buttonholed or bound is often employed, but fagotting is perhaps the most popular stitch, as it is quickly made. Among the great variety of fagotting stitches, the French fagot is mostly used.

To make French fagotting the edges to be joined are finished with a rolled hem and then basted to a stiff paper, about one-eighth of an inch apart, if the seam is to be small.

Instead of the stiches being taken diagonally, they are straight, holding the edges together with small twisted bars, the result being a hand made entre deaux. Ordinary sewing thread is used for narrow seam, but if the opening to be filled is wide, embroidery cotton is best.

When making the bars, the thread is brought from the upper to the lower edge of the whipped sides and when taking stitch into the lower edge, the thread is passed under the needle as in making a buttonhole. It is twisted back to the upper edge and another bar is made.

This stitch is used in a sleeve as well as for shoulder seams, the gathers being adjusted by drawing up the whipping thread.

Candle Shades.

Mrs J. The grape design candle shade, published August 3, should be embroidered in one piece. The two sides are then joined with a small seam, which should be pressed open. The shade is folded as indicated by the dotted lines. If the shade is done in cut work, the seam is only taken above and below the embroidered band, while lace spiders are worked in the open space.

The iris shade would be very effective if embroidered in four sections, joined with entre deaux, lace beading or fagoting. Work the iris in three shades of purple, using the long and short stitch for the petals which turn down and outlining the petals which turn up, filling them with seeding stitch. The punch background should be made with white floss, through which a soft yellow lining would be most attractive. If embroidered in this way the shade will be unusual and very pleasing. When cutting the sections allow enough material on each side so that the edge can be turned back or rolled, if the joining is to be with beading.

The bottom and top can be finished with a plain narrow buttonholed edge or with edging of lace. If the grape shade is made of ecru linen, as suggested, the best finish would be a narrow ecru Cluny lace, applied perfectly straight along the edges, either with a rolled hem or by turning the edge up on the right side and sewing the lace along the turned back edge. For the second shade a frill of Val. lace or a tiny edging of Irish crochet would be attractive.

These shades are worn over a colored silk or paper lining, and if the foundation is slightly smaller than the cover, it can be pulled down over the lining and if it fits snugly, there is no danger of it pulling out of shape. If fitted over a silk foundation, the cover should be tacked here and there with sewing thread to hold it securely in place.

To Launder Fillet Crochet.

Dina H.:—As with every kind of needlecraft, the fillet crochet should be carefully laundered. The work should not be rubbed, but squeezed between the hands in a suds of pure soap and water. If the work is very much soiled, lay it on a flat surface, and brush it with soap and water, using a small bristle brush. It should never be twisted when wringing and should be well rinsed.

Of course, washing will shrink the crochet, but it can be restored to the correct size by ironing it before it is entirely dry on a well-padded board, between two pieces of cheesecloth. Finish by pressing it on the wrong side with a warm iron as that will flatten the crochet and bring out the pattern of the design.

Unless the laundering of fillet crochet is well done the beauty of the work will surely be marred.

Fillet Embroidery.

Mrs. J. J.—The work to which you refer is not a new kind of punch work, but is an open lace stitch background, which looks like fillet and is called fillet embroidery. The space indicated on the patterns is first filled and then the linen underneath is cut away, leaving the fillet embroidery. The work is entirely different from punch work for in punch embroidery the stitches are taken into the linen and it is the linen which forms the background, while in fillet embroidery, the stitches are laid over the linen, which is afterwards cut out, and the laid threads form the background.

The fillet embroidery is made by crossing threads at right angles to each other so as to form equal squares. The work should be done in well-padded hoops so that the linen is held taut, and the lines which form the background can be keep perfectly straight and even. The stitches of cross bars should be carried across the space to be filled in one direction, taking long stitches from one side to the other until the space is filled, and then taking the stitches in the opposite direction, at right angles to those already taken, making a knot at every crossing. The knot is made by carrying the thread over the first thread to be crossed, then holding this loop down with the thumb, put the needle under the thread to be crossed and through the loop, drawing the thread tightly, so that the knot will come directly on the intersection of the two lines. The work is continued in this way until there is a knot at every intersection of the lines.

This work must be carefully done and should be accomplished with painstaking exactness for unless it is firm and straight, the work will not be effective.

After the background is finished the edge surrounding it is buttonholed or held firm with satin stitch and when the embroidery is all completed the material is cut out from underneath the crossed foundation.

Crocheted Spread.

Mrs. S.: The directions for the bedspread published July 27 were for the making of the illustrated folded spread. The large medallion is sufficiently plain to be copied directly from the picture.

A magnifying glass will greatly aid one in picking a pattern from an illustration.

Buckle.

E. R.: A very pretty buckle for a ribbon neck bow can be made with an ordinary bone buckle wrapped with satin. Instead of the bone buckle a form cut from stiff cardboard would answer this purpose.

A large, fancy buckle made in this way would be effective with the ribbon girdles and sashes now worn, and if the buckle was wrapped with pink or blue satin and then decorated with chiffon roses it would be very chic for an evening gown.

Pattern Wanted.

Mrs. W. D. A.:—Patterns of the embroidery designs are not sold, as the designs can be transferred directly from the paper by means of impression paper.

The impression paper can be purchased in any art or stationery store for ten cents a sheet. One sheet can be used until worn out, so that a great number of patterns can be transferred with it. To transfer a pattern in this way lay the impression paper right side down on the goods, then over it lay the pattern, being careful to pin it or to secure it with weights so that it will not slip out of place, and then trace the design with a sharp, hard pencil.

By this method another pattern is not necessary, as you can use the design directly from the paper.

To Keep Silks in Order.

N. O.:—Perhaps this plan may help you to keep the silks in perfect condition. Save the empty sewing cotton spools, then open one end of the skein of floss and wrap it on a spool, pasting the number on the end of the spool. Each skein can in this way be kept separate.

This is really a saving of the silk floss, as the cut ends become raveled if not worked up quickly. It is the best way to preserve the floss when the work is only done at long intervals.

When the silk is used rapidly it can be cut and kept in a linen holder or in a book.

IN THE JAP SHOPS

In the Japanese and Chinese shops are many fascinating house things—little helps toward making the house a pleasant place in warm weather.

There are grass mats for the porch, for instance, that cost but a few cents. And the Japanese and other porch screens are known far and wide for their comfort-giving qualities. Those from Japan are of bamboo and painted in different hues and you may have wide or narrow slats.

That blue and white cotton which looks so cool—and is!—is made up into many articles that cost comparatively little. These pieces launder very well. You may have table covers, whole luncheon sets or separate pieces, towels and bedspreads.

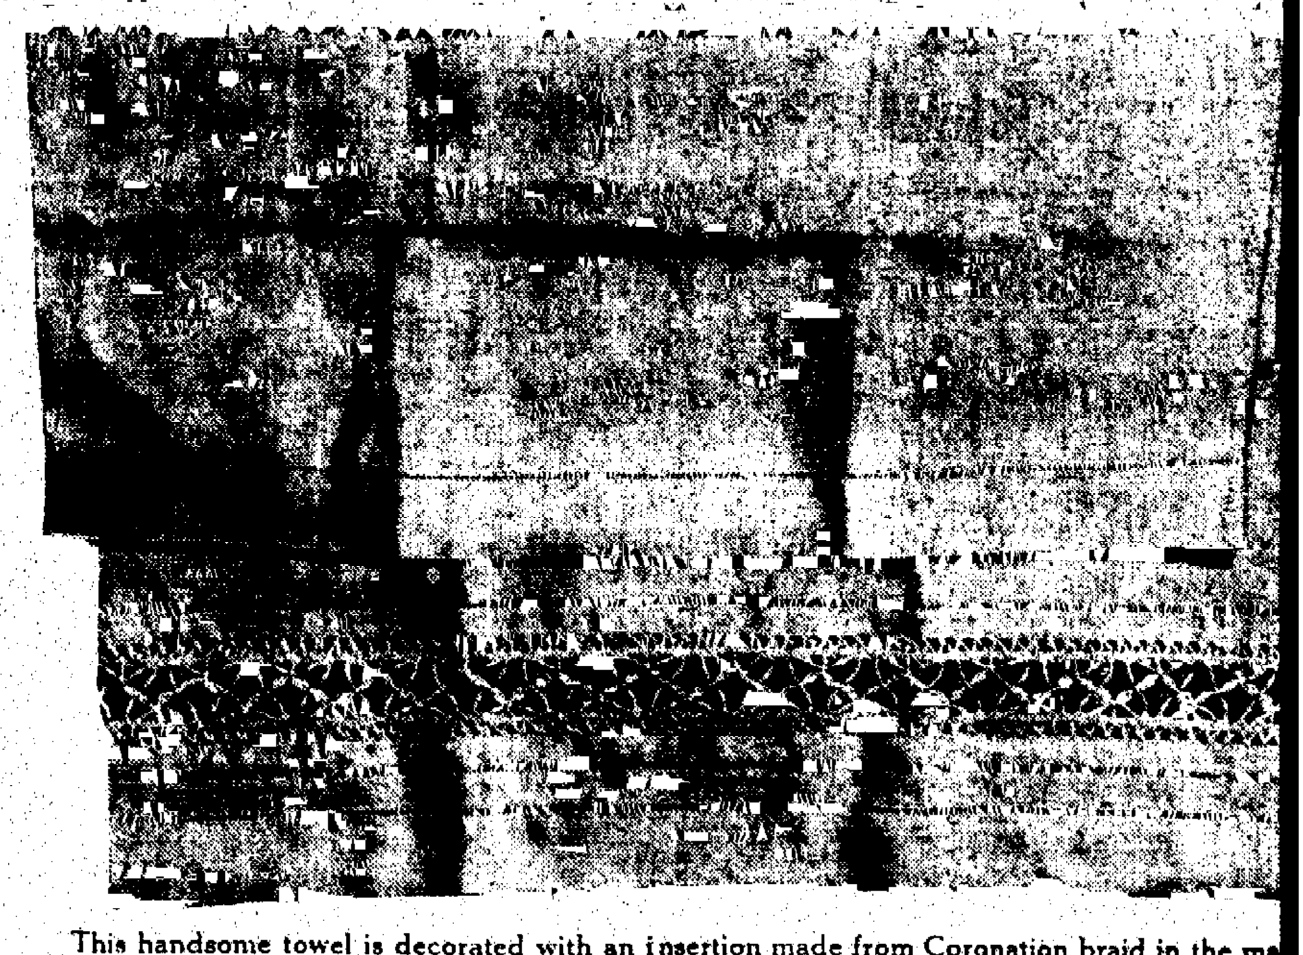
And for the afternoon tea table on the porch or lawn there are sets of such pretty china you will find it hard to resist the temptation to buy them.

Baskets and bowls to hold fruit and flowers come in that pretty dark wicker ware and are very effective and decorative.

To Hold the Baby's Clothes

A deep wooden box will answer the purpose. Line throughout with blue cambric, and cover the outside with blue and white cretonne. Tuft the lid, and cover tacks or buy white, cloth-headed tacks to ornament the top. A pretty handle for the cover may be made of a small embroidery hoop wound with blue ribbon and attached to the cover.

TOWEL WITH BRAID INSERTION



This handsome towel is decorated with an insertion made from Coronation braid in the ma ner designated in a previous issue The hems are made with double hemstitching, and the wh effect is very neat and attractive. The design for the lace insertion may be quite easily follow by anyone who has mastered the instructions for this fascinating work which were published the issue of August 24th.

Layette Accessories

A CERTAIN young mother with more affection than money to spend upon her first-born, has got up a most attractive looking layette trunk from materials that were in the house. Its foundation is a rough box of about the size of a shirt waist trunk and this she first covered with several layers of white sheet wadding, then with coarse muslin and finally with white voile over which wander small girls and tall storks, stencilled in pale blue. The lining of the box is similarly decorated and its hinges of wide blue satin ribbon swing from under big bows set on the outer side of the chest and flat lid. This layette chest, which is an important part of the furnishings of a very small nursery, is also the support for the basket-cot, which must needs take the place of a bassinet until the baby begins to sleep in a crib. The little cot is merely a shallow clothes basket, lined with detachable side pads to which belong a special set of lingeries slips, and into which is fitted a soft little oval mattress. The outer sides of the basket are concealed by a lawn valance, veiled by a wide ruffle of Valenciennes-edge fine lawn which once trimmed a lingerie frock, and at either end of it is looped up with blue ribbon bows.

Two new shapes are to be found in infant bath baskets. Both are in splint straw and very substantial. One of them, a shallow circular affair of half yard diameter, has a flat lid that swings off with the aid of a wide ribbon hinge, but when adjusted perfectly protects the inside of the basket from dust. The base of the receptacle is padded, then lined with Swiss or batiste and its upper edge trimmed with inch wide double frillings of matching material, edged with the narrowest of Valenciennes lace. The lid's edge is also finished with a double frilling and on its centre is a huge bow of blue ribbon.

The second basket is a pail-shaped affair laced with wide ribbons from base to top and unlined save at the bottom where is a circular cushion which may be easily taken out and covered with a white lingerie slip. The top edge of this basket is finished with a detachable lingerie double frilling which buttons together under a bow of ribbon. Both baskets hold the usual celluloid toilet sets, painted to match the ribbon bow, as well as soap and powder boxes and rubber-lined lingerie wash cloth bags.

OF INTEREST TO BABY'S MOTHER

The baby's mother may perhap glad to know that the first little d are now only twenty-seven inches from throat to hem and are p than every they have been. So the imported dresses that are wo very fashionable infants are of s est batiste, embroidered with a or in colored batiste, embroidere white, but there is actually very needlework upon any of them and stially about the neck and shou

The prejudice against putting materials upon the baby is vani in many quarters and even well- infants wear nightgowns in fine cotton crepe, which may be washe in the nursery basin and need no ironed. These gowns come stampe embroidery and they make dainty up" fancy work for the industrious an. The little kimonos, which are in every infantile wardrobe, are made of cotton crepe of pale tones, very neat little affairs they are, to casionally a devoted aunt—bloo complimentary—embroiders a e up the fronts of a crepe ki but a herringboned hem is e dainty.

NEW TARIFF BILL IN U. S. MEANS KEENER TRADE IN WORLD'S MARTS

By FREDERICK WERNER

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—An event of world wide importance was what practically the whole German press called the act of the American senate in passing the new Democratic tariff bill and we are anxiously awaiting the day when it gets the presidential signature.

With great joy Germany has greeted the first step towards the lowering of the American tariff wall, because she sees in this event a signal to the old and new world to leave the wornout track of exaggerated protection to manufacturers, though everybody realize that it would be foolish to look for an American free trade policy for years to come.

Arthur Nordon, the famous financial editor of the "Berliner Tageblatt" writes thus of the new American tariff bill as passed by the senate:

"While, on one side, the bills look out for the interests of the consumers, the American industry, on the other side, cannot complain that it is not sufficiently protected. Great reductions have only been made on such industrial products in the manufacturing of which American manufacturers are ahead of foreign competitors or at least very well able to take up competition successfully. Protection of industry, however, lies in another more important sphere, which of course is a terra incognita to shortsighted or dyed-in-the-wool believers in excessive tariffs: the cost of living of the workers is part of the cost of production in all industries, the more it costs the worker to live, the higher will be the cost of production.

Bill Protects [illegible].

"If this new bill takes care of the interests of the masses it certainly also protects the interests of the manufacturers, aside from the fact that in the increased purchasing ability of the working classes lies the main spring of economic progress and prosperity.

"Under the Payne-Aldrich law which will now be abolished it was impossible for the United States to conclude commercial reciprocity treaties with other countries. America sat an autonomous custom policy according to the antiquated doctrine that the state must have free hands to protect the interests of national production, and must not tie itself by treaties with foreign countries. As a weapon of reserve the United States then held the maximum tariff of 25 per cent additional duties to be imposed on imports from such countries which 'discriminated' against the United States. America then, though in vain, demanded to be treated as 'the most favored nation' by all other countries, though she was sparing with favors herself, though she, in the interest of Pan-Americanism, did not hesitate to grant certain South American states as well as the neighboring Dominion of Canada concessions which were not extended to the 'most-favored' nations.

"The new tariff bill makes it possible for the United States to conclude customs treaties with other countries. This will increase America's exports and as this will mean keener competition in the markets of the world, it is, of course, evident that the American tariff reform, valuable though it is from a general economic point of view holds certain disadvantages to European industry. These, however, must not be overestimated any more than must the distinct advantages which the American tariff reform will bring to European export."

I have quoted this at some length, because I think my American readers are interested in knowing what Germany thinks of the new policy of their country, and because the views expressed give a very good idea of the general opinion in Germany.

Field Value of Aircraft.

The recent kaiser maneuvers in Silesia have given ample proof that dirigibles and aeroplanes have made completely new military fighting methods necessary. All tactical secrets are like an open book to Zeppelins and fliers, that is to say if the atmosphere be clear. In fog and mist the new engines of war are useless for reconnoitering purposes, but under ordinary circumstances they are far superior to cavalry.

During the maneuvers the commanders and officers of the opposing armies made use of all the latest technical inventions with most excellent result and even the antimilitaristic papers must admit that the training of the German army is perfect and absolutely up-to-date on every point. All foreign officers who attended the maneuvers expressed their admiration and took home with them the conviction that the German army in case of war would be an invaluable friend and a most formidable enemy. Of all the armies in Europe probably only the French is the equal, if not the superior, of the German, with the army of England left hopelessly far behind, judging from the reports of the English army maneuvers which have reached here and which mention a number of blunders committed by English officers which have been most carefully concealed by the English press.

COUNTESS OF GRANARD

PARIS, Oct. 4.—The Earl and Countess of Granard, the latter formerly Miss Beatrice Mills of New York, are in Paris visiting for a short time with friends.

At a house party the other evening the countess told some of those present that as soon as she returned to London she would, in company with some of her English friends, establish a private and very exclusive club along "cabaret" lines. It is planned to have afternoon dancing between 5 and 6 o'clock and from midnight until 2 a. m.

The countess expressed the opinion that dancing would be more of a craze this winter than it ever has been, especially in London. She has long been recognized as one of the best dancers in London society. The earl also is an enthusiastic and graceful dancer, and enters heartily into his wife's schemes.

COMPLETE MOST EXPENSIVE EUROPEAN RAILWAY STATION

GENEVA, Oct. 4.—One of the largest and most expensive railway stations in Europe has just been completed on the Swiss-German frontier at Basle.

The station, which is on German territory but touches the Swiss frontier, cost nearly $15,000,000 and the work of constructing took nearly three years. Most of the capital was found by the Duchy of Baden.

AMERICAN WOMEN'S LOVE OF THRILLS ASTOUNDS FRENCH

Even Young Girls Immensely Enjoy Horrible Dramas, They Exclaim

By GEORGE DUFRESNE

PARIS, Oct. 4.—How your women must love thrills and blood-curdling stage dramas!

I went to the Grand Guignol theater a few nights ago and found the best boxes and the front rows of the orchestra occupied by young Americans, many of them evidently still in their teens or just out of them, calmly and unconcernedly enjoying plays which would drive even the most blase Parisienne mad with fear, for this little theater produces only the most horrible melodramas, and it takes nerves of steel to sit through an evening's program.

The night when I was there the first drama was "Gardiens de Phares" (The Lighthouse Keepers), which shows a young man who, while tending a lighthouse on the lonely coast of Brittany, is suddenly seized with hydrophobia. To save himself, the father of the young man is compelled to kill his son. And the scenes of madness and murder are enacted with so many gruesome and realistic details that several times I felt the color leaving my cheeks and beads of cold perspiration covering my forehead, though I rather flatter myself that I am not a hypersensitive or impressionable person. But while I repeatedly shut my eyes to the scenes of horror and secretly wished myself miles away, your young and beautiful countrywomen without a single exception, as far as I could see, seemed to enjoy the drama thoroughly, and one of them, a very young girl, with a face of the most angelic beauty, who sat in the same row with me, actually told her companion that she was rather disappointed, as she had expected something much more gruesome.

One Drama Stirred Emotions.

I sincerely hope that she did not understand the next play, "Master Tom," written by M. Jose De Berys, the witty secretary of "La Vie Parisienne," the plot of which is quite unprintable and whose dialogue is the most daring that has ever been heard, even on a Parisian stage. Certainly no French young girl would have dared to sit through it.

The last drama, however, did stir up the emotions of the Americans and they certainly would not have been human if it had not. It was "Le Baiser Dans la Nuit" (The Kiss in the Night), by Maurice Level.

A young man has become blind after the most dreadful sufferings. His friend, a little midinette from the left bank of the Seine, has thrown vitriol in his face in a fit of jealousy, but he bears his fate and his sufferings with heroic patience. He refuses to make a complaint against her and she is acquitted by the jury. Her lawyer comes to thank the noble-minded young man, who has only one desire—to hear the voice of his beloved once more.

In the next act the young girl comes to him, penitent and crushed. She implores him to forgive her and trembles when she sees his horribly seared face. He begs her to let him have one more kiss, the last. She shudders at the thought of kissing this dreadful face, but she consents at last. He pulls her down on his lap and kisses her into the eternal night. His hand grips the back of her neck as if in a vise, and deaf to her cries of despair, he takes from his pocket a bottle of vitriol and blinds her slowly, one eye at a time, enjoying her maddening pain.

I watched the young American girl next to me several times during this revolting drama. She was staring at the stage as if in a trance, and she looked perhaps a trifle paler, but as soon as the curtain was down she appeared as cool and unconcerned as ever, the drama had left no lasting or at least no visible impression.

I admit that to a certain extent she aroused my admiration by her wonderful self-control, even if it seemed to me unnatural in one so young. But I asked myself if your wonderfully beautiful women are entirely devoid of emotions and I pitied the man who will some time marry her.

MOUNTAIN CLIMBER SEIZED WITH CRAMPS FALLS 1000 FEET INTO VALLEY BELOW

Frenchman Was Scaling Rax Mountain Near Vienna With Young Woman, Also Experienced Mountaineer.

VIENNA, Oct. 4.—M. Maurice de Lellental, a French teacher in Vienna, was seized with a cramp, while climbing Rax Mountain, in the Semmering range, recently, and fell 1,000 feet into the valley below.

He was accompanied by a young woman, who, like himself, was an experienced climber, and they had nearly reached the top, clinging to the chains and hooks fixed in the almost perpendicular side of the mountain when he was seized with cramp.

He implored his companion to massage his arms, and she complied at the risk of her life; but M. Lellental lost his hold and fell.

His companion succeeded in reaching the summit, where she collapsed.

M. Lellental's body was recovered yesterday, mutilated beyond recognition.

LADY DIANA MANNERS

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The American accent is now "the thing" in London society.

An accent of some kind has always been the vogue, and for a time it was the Oxford drawl, then the cockney twang. During these periods, Americans were ridiculed for their accent; but now they find they are pounced upon and their every inflection is studied and copied.

No doubt the growing number of American peeresses is largely responsible for this new fashion, but no one has served to popularise it as much as Lady Diana Manners, who believes in being a few minutes ahead of everyone else. She says she adores the American accent and intends to use it the rest of her life. It was she who introduced the cockney twang and mannerisms. In her childhood she was known as "Lady Perfect Manners."

ENGLISHMAN DOESN'T OWN OWN HOME WHEN MILITANT SUFFRAGETTE IS AROUND

Can't Wash My Street at Home When Sister-in-Law Is There, Says Nicholls.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—That an Englishman's home is not always his castle when a militant suffragette is around, was proven recently in the case of Alfred Nichols. The details of the militant invasion came out in court where Nichols had his sister-in-law, Florence Chapman, arraigned for assault.

"Mrs. Nichols was taken ill," the solicitor explained, "and Miss Chapman, who is a suffragette, visited the house to look after her. Then the troubles of Mr. Nichols began. He could not get his meals prepared or his linen washed.

"On Sunday, in desperation, the poor man set about washing a shirt and collar himself. He heated water and mixed starch ready for use, but his sister-in-law evidently objected to this. She invaded the kitchen armed with a walking stick, and belabored him over the head and shoulders.

"Mr. Nichols beat a hasty retreat, and locked himself in a bedroom. Then he issued this summons.

"He is of a forbearing nature. All he asks is for Miss Chapman to leave him in peace."

Miss Chapman said she could not leave, as Mrs. Nichols was ill. She was informed that she had no right to remain in the house if Mr. Nichols objected.

The case was adjourned for a week to see if she left.

Worthy Sheepdogs Form Ass'n and Hold Big Annual Meeting

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—Worthy sheepdogs to the number of several hundred assembled here recently to be put through a series of tests to prove fidelity to their masters' interests. They were the members of the Sheepdogs association.

Membership is limited to sheepdogs whose owners can boast that they have shown aptitude for being trained, or who have performed any service such as giving the alarm against burglars or saving any one from drowning. A monthly journal published by the association records the deeds of the animals.

The examination, which was held at Hoppegarten, embraced all the tricks and trades which a useful dog ought to know, and the successful candidates obtained certificates emphasizing their qualifications. Owners of those who have [illegible] ers.

LORD LOREBURN CONDEMNS ENTIRE RADICAL PROGRAM OF GOVERNMENT

BY PHILIP EVERETT

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The question of Home Rule overshadows everything else in political circles although it leaves the common people, with the exception of the Belfast Orangemen, quite cold. Lord Loreburn's much-discussed letter to the "Times" indeed came as a godsend to the Tories who until it appeared were even more at sea than they are now.

In vain, however, have the whole Tory press tried to make it appear that the former lord chancellor was acting on behalf of a perturbed liberal government and that the letter was to be looked upon as a radical flag of distress.

As a matter of fact Lord Loreburn, though nominally a liberal peer, no longer swears by the same Gods as he did before he was made a peer and so far from standing close to the present government he sharply condemns practically the whole radical program, including Welsh disestablishment, with the only exception of home rule, and even in regard to this measure his zeal has weakened and the Nationalists who formerly looked upon him as a warm friend are now anything but enthusiastic over him. Anyone who remembers the way in which he suddenly resigned will admit that it would take a very strong stomach to swallow the statement that he had been selected to act as the mouthpiece of the government, quite aside from the fact that his suggestion practically amounts to asking the government to withdraw the home rule bill and reopen the whole Irish question.

As matters look at present it is most unlikely that there will be a conference even should the Tories unbend and offer a basis of it acceptable to the government.

Must Face Ulster.

In a recent issue the editor of "Truth" dealing with the political situation says that no one who is not ready to face Ulster should touch home rule. So far the government has not shown any sign of weakening but "Truth" tells them that all attempts to pacify the Orangemen are sure to be looked upon as such a sign.

"Ascendency in Belfast," he says, "is a very ugly disease. It has got to be cured, and if there is a little bloodletting in the process the survivors will be all the better for the experience. As long ago as 1836 the report upon the Belfast riots commented severely upon the spirit of the Orange mob. It is no kindness and very bad statesmanship to surrender to that spirit. My own view is that the provisional army should be told plainly that if it plays the part of the Paris commune, the required whiff of grapeshot will undoubtedly follow. Such a declaration could cool much courage, and the government is merely inviting trouble when, in the person of Mr. Birrel, it allows any doubt to continue on the subject."

There is no doubt that the majority of the British people are ready to indorse this opinion.

The Tories have done themselves very much harm by their attempt to draw the king into the matter and were the present wearer of the crown a less [illegible] they would [illegible] even more rea son to feel sorry for having made suc a suggestion. It is a well known secret that Lord Lansdowne and Bona Law have made several attempts t persuade King George to come to thei assistance and the liberal press ha been so outspoken in its warning t the king not to interfere in the po litical [illegible] small wonde that [illegible] the presen king has found it wiser to listen t his responsible ministers rather tha to the irresponsible leaders of the op position.

"Never Go to King" Is Rule.

As one of our political weeklies wrot the other day: "In these days king retain their powers by not exercisin them, and they are bad friends of th monarchy who counsel any departur from this rule. In a sentence, the kin is a card which should never be playe in the game called party politics. Afte all, the cards which really count ar only two—the knave and joker."

A London magistrate recently com mented on the fact that no one ha ever heard a letter carrier or posta employe using bad language and it i quite sure that until now this clas of people in England have borne the fate with almost superhuman patienc

Now, however, their patience is an end and like most quiet men the are apt to prove formidable enemi when once roused into action. At meeting the other day they voiced the grievances and came to the conclusi that as the present postmaster gene has proved their most stubborn en opposing their very reasonable clai on every point, and as he could not re main in office if defeated at the poll the best way to get rid of him was put a candidate in the field again him, who was to look after the speci interests of postal employes in th house of commons. They have imme diately started to collect an electi fund.

Madame Curie Most Renowned Woman in Science---Sir Oliver

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Sir Oliver Lodge recently described Madame Curie as "the greatest woman of science of all time." When conferring an honorary degree of doctor of laws upon her at the university he recalls how she arrived in Paris from Warsaw as Marie Sklodowska; how she began in 189[illegible] metrical examination of the radio activity of minerals of all kinds, how working down some tons of [illegible] with exemplary skill and patience she obtained evidence first of a new element, which she christened polonium in memory of her own country, and how, after years of labor, she isolated a few grains of radium, which not only exhibited physical energy in a new form, but was likely to be of value to suffering humanity.

Russian and Foreign Papers Ask Seats at Beiliss Murder Trial

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 4.—As the date of the Beiliss ritual murder trial approaches, increasing applications are being received from Russian and foreign newspapers for seats in the Kieff court. Many of them will inevitably be rejected, owing to lack of accommodation.

Interest in the affair is enhanced by an interview published in the "Russkoe Slovo" with Senator Meissner, president of the Kieff law courts, who is represented having admitted that the alleged proofs against Beiliss were very weak, and that many of the witnesses for the prosecution were of the worst sort.

Mendel Beiliss, a Jewish clerk, is charged with the murder in March, 1911, of a boy named Andrew Yushinsky. The Russian reactionaries seized on the murder as an excuse for an anti-Jewish agitation [illegible]

Nothing but Stars in 'The Candy Shop'

ROCK AND FULTON

Who head the biggest musical success of the season, "The Candy Shop," at the Opera house, tomorrow and Tuesday nights.

What we have no hesitancy in calling the most remarkable organization of players ever gotten together in one show is the Anderson Gaiety company, that will present the new musical review "The Candy Shop" tomorrow and Tuesday nights, Oct. 6th and 7th, at the Opera house. The roster of artists makes it look as if the market for fun makers had been combed fine and only the highest priced artists in their lines had been given a place in the company.

William Rock and Maud Fulton head the organization. Not to know these great artists is to argue one's self unknown. Look over the programs of any of the big musical successes of recent years, "The Chocolate Soldier," "The Rose Maid," "The Count of Luxembourg," "The Spring Maid," "The Follies," and all the other big musical reviews and you will find these people as the stars in one or more of them. Al Sheen, Tom Waters, Will hilbrick, Oscar Ragland, Franklyn arnum, Andrew Brennan, Robert olan, Gene Laneska, the Russian rima-donna, Catherine Hayes, Bessie ranklyn, Hazel Cox, Peggy Dimison, ecilia Novasio, Kitty Doner and ozie Kimball. Then try to imagine e stars of a dozen different organizaions all being gathered into one and ou have the Anderson Gaiety company. With these are associated 40 f the handsomest, the cleverest, the est dancing and the best singing girls o be found in New York and 20 of he best singing and dancing boys and he organization is complete as to peronnel.

For the show itself John Golden nd Russell Tarbox have written new usic, George V. Hobart and Arthur illespie have evolved new lines and ituations, an army of scenic artists ave made new scenes and the gown akers have created new gowns and ats and other sartorial effects. Some 5 new musical numbers have been inerpolated, and the show is ready to pen one of the finest theaters in the ountry. A few lucky cities will see he show on its way to the coast. After hat one would have to travel to the olden Gate for a glimpse of it and s equal is not likely to be seen again n many seasons.

Finally imagine all those players in a abaret scene in the last act of the how, a scene in which all the artists fter their many stunts in the candy hop and at Coney island will exhibit heir specialties, and you have the romise of one of the most remarkable ntertainments that has ever been een in this country.

Outside of the music that carries the ay, there are the new songs which ill be heard. Foremost among these a waltz song written by Franz Leár, entitled "Come to My Land of ove Dreams." It was presented by e composer to Miss Laneska while e was in Vienna last summer and efore long it will be whistled and sung roughout the land. Other new songs e "Marry Me to the Tune of the Big rst Band," "I'll Marry My Mary in Maryland," "Naughty Widow Wise," "Just We Two," "I'll Make the Japs Walk Spanish to the Tune of Dixieland," "Live, Love and Learn," "Silvery Moon," "Now That I've Got It," "Whitewash Man," "Madame Butterfly McCann," "Smile, Smile, Smile," and a lot of others. "The Candy Shop" is in two acts and a revelation in scenic splendor and gowns, so it is promised. The first act is the candy shop, a veritable palace of sweets. Who does not remember the big sticks of striped candy of childhood. Well imagine a scene built up of the real candy sticks for the most part and the candy shop will indeed be a sweet morsel. In the second act we see first Coney Island and its thousands of delights. Then the action changes to the Panama canal, a remarkable bit of scenic construction and finally ends in the big cabaret scene where the artists do their various stunts and the chorus disports itself. For this part of the act we are promised one of the most extraordinary ensembles of [illegible] comedians.

Approximately [illegible] is the cost of the entertainment which will be presented in this scene in the last act. That sum represents the salaries of the principals, and the salaries of the acts and people who appear in this scene and by which the best known entertainers of the country will present their [illegible].

To miss "The Candy Shop" is to miss the best part of your life. Seats now selling.

[illegible] the big musical [illegible] travels with [illegible] identified with [illegible] season's [illegible] New York [illegible] began at the Grand Opera house in New York and before it [illegible] big city in the country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, will be visited. There will not be a second or a third company of this [illegible]. Mr. [illegible] play [illegible], for example, will see [illegible] the same costumes and production that New York applauded for so many months.

Klaw and Erlanger's company in "The Count of Luxembourg," Franz Lehar's [illegible] of romance adapted for the American stage by Glen MacDonough, is headed for the far west. Since the opening of the tour weather conditions varying from the freezing point to over 100 degrees above zero have been experienced, and this has been the subject of some remarks by Frank Moulan, who plays the part of the Grand Duke.

"The business of being funny," he said, "is absolutely weather-proof. The comedian must be prepared to be funny as [illegible] when the mercury [illegible] through the roof of the [illegible] and just as funny in [illegible] when the icy blasts of winter are swirling about. It's all a part of the game."

New York Theatrical Letter

By [illegible]

Below: Miss Gail Kain, in "Seven Keys to Baldpate," at the Astor theater.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—It has been definitely decided that the salacious, underworld drama is not going to be the keystone to the arch of the present New York dramatic season, as was threatened to be the case a few weeks ago. The cold reception given Mr. Paul Armstrong's latest play clearly indicates that the playgoing public of this city have been fed to repletion on the nauseating stuff put out with the hypocritical pretense that it makes for moral uplift.

There is not the slightest evidence to show that a so-called white slave drama adds one whit to the security of an unprotected girl in New York or anywhere else. There is nothing to show that the sympathy for an unfortunate character on the stage, which is aroused in the theater, ever extends itself into actual life. In fact, it is quite the contrary. If half the tears that have been shed over the misfortunes of the heroine of the old-time melodrama had been translated into concrete sympathy for the unfortunates in real life, we would not today have a white slave problem; all evil would have been banished from the world and we would now be living in a state of roseate loveliness. No, the stage does not reform. The field of the serious drama is solely that of art, and in that sense only can it advance or retrograde. Perhaps the public would have gone on accepting and commending the tenderloin dramas and melodramas if they had possessed real art, or even the grace of sincerity, for life in any of its manifold estates is legitimate material for the playwright—the artist—but a tenderloin play, executed by a crude hand, is not what the American stage needs.

"Seven Keys to Baldpate."

It is a pleasure to record another big success for that industrious young genius, Mr. George M. Cohan. In his "Seven Keys to Baldpate," which he made over from the novel of Earl Derr Biggers, he has revealed an increasing skill as a playwright. This farce opened at the Astor theater Monday night and it was immediately stamped with universal approval. Even those who had read the book found themselves keenly interested in the outcome of the thing, because of the ingenious way in which the clever author welded and dovetailed the unique situations of the book.

The story of the play is something like this:

William Hallowell Magee, who writes summer novels to go with hammocks and bon bons, comes to Baldpate Inn, a summer hotel. It is in the dead of winter, and he is there to win a bet made with the hotel owner that he can turn out a 10,000-word story in 24 hours. He is in possession of what he thinks is the only key to the hotel. He no more than gets launched on his frenzied literary stunts when real and thrilling melodrama descends on him. It develops that there are six other keys to Baldpate, which admit into the novelist's presence, one after another, a crook, an adventuress, a grafting mayor, a ghostly hermit, a corrupt corporation president and his aid, and also to the sentimental disturbance of the author, a beautiful "star" reporteress, whose first glance penetrates his heart.

Amid the howling of the storm outside a series of howling melodramatic scenes are enacted within. Plots, intrigues and even supposed murder, pile thickly one upon the other, and the spectacle of the harried author in the midst of these wild scenes makes the blood race through the veins of the spectators.

There are $200,000 involved in the plot. First one character has it then another, and finally the author, to protect his life, shoots the adventuress. Just as everyone is wondering how the thing is going to end, the keeper of the inn enters and explains that it was all a put-up job to keep the author from winning his bet. The reporteress agrees to give up newspaper work and concentrate her interests for all time to the promoting of the author's happiness. And then all the characters disappear from the scene save the author, who, with his manuscript in his hand, rises triumphantly and announces that he has not only won his bet, but that his new book will go into the millionth edition. The whole play, you see, was the story he wrote to win the bet.

Wallace Eddinger, as the author, was splendid. He imparted exactly the right touch to the role. Gail Kale, as the adventuress, was a charm and a delight, and Joseph Allen, as Peter, the Hermit, was a well of laughter. All the other members of the cast were very good, indeed. There is no risk in predicting a long New York run for Mr. Cohan's latest farce.

"The Marriage Market."

The most joyous thing about "The Marriage Market," a new musical comedy, which opened at the Knickerbocker theater Monday night, is the fond hope it has aroused that it might act as the opening wedge that is to pry us free from the ragtime incubus.

This piece showed that a musical comedy can be both musical and highly entertaining without a suggestion of ragtime in it, by the simple—perhaps—process of substituting real music of so captivating a quality that it will drive ragtime off the streets and out of the cabarets.

The music of "The Marriage Market" was written by Victor Jacobi; the book, a good one, by M. Brody and F. Martos; the lyrics by Arthur Anderson and Adrian Ross, and all adapted for the English stage by Gladys Unger.

The scene of the piece, which is in three acts, is laid in southern California, and the story revolves around the old Spanish custom of holding an annual marriage market, which has been kept alive by the proprietor of the Palace hotel. On this occasion the proprietor, who is also the sheriff of the county, substituted a real marriage for the mock ones of earlier seasons. It thus develops that Mariposa Gilroy, the daughter of a multimillionaire senator, finds herself married to Tulare Teddy, and that her friend, Kitty Kent, is the wife of a "silly ass" Englishman, Lord Hurlingham, whose "man," Blinker, is in love with Mariposa's maid, Emma. Of course, the usual complications follow, but in the end the two couples find that they love each other, the valet marries the maid and all ends happily.

Of course the feature of the performance was the dancing of the wonderfully graceful Donald Brian, who looks more youthful than ever.

The singing honors are shared between Venita Fitzhugh (Mariposa), Carroll McComas (Kitty Kent) and Moya Mannering (Emma.)

The music ran to the waltz style, as did also the dancing, but it was all captivating. Among the men, praise is due Percival Knight, the Lord Hurlingham, and Arthur Reynolds, as his valet.

This musical comedy afforded a thoroughly enjoyable evening, and in it Mr. Frohman has found a worthy successor to "The Sunshine Girl."

Sothern-Marlowe.

Monday night marked the opening of the Sothern-Marlowe season of five weeks at the Manhattan Opera house. The play presented was "much Ado About Nothing." That these two excellent artists still hold a vital grip on their admirers was manifest by the crowded house.

As Benedick, Mr. Southern was as whimsical and fiery as may be. His acting had the refreshing finish of the genuine artist—his touch was sure and perfectly satisfying.

As to Miss Marlowe's Beatrice, no new praise need be bestowed. She is charming in all her situations, and her rich, pure voice, capable of meeting the demands of any literature, is a delight to the ear.

The supporting company is one of the most competent ever seen here. Especial mention should be made of Mr. Frederick Lewis, Sidney Mather, J. Sayre Crawley and Lark Taylor. The Dogberry of George Wilson was delicious in its unctuous stupidity.

"The Escape."

The most satisfactory thing, perhaps the only pleasing thing about "The Escape," the latest Paul Armstrong play, at the Lyric theater, Monday night, was the one the audience made after the three morbid acts of east side "tenement" misery.

This play is merely a thesis by Mr. Armstrong on eugenics and the problem of the tenements. It should have been submitted to the department of sociology at Harvard or some other institution engaged in dissecting the various phases of sordid life.

Here we have a daughter of "the tenements" who decides to "escape" from her "boozy" father, her tatterdemalion mother, her consumptive sister and an unfortunate brother who has been hit over the head with a stove lid and thus developed a murder mania.

We next find her in the office of a United States senator, acting as his stenographer. They go out together for dinner and the next time we see her she is in a luxurious apartment kept by the senator. She tires of having her soul "degraded" and goes in for nursing and is finally led to the marriage altar by a most verbose doctor who had originally suggested stenography as the way of escape. In the meantime the consumptive sister dies and her brother kills her besotted husband. Then they take the brother out to trepan his skull to let the murder mania "escape." We didn't see the operation, but, as one of the critics expressed it, "we hoped for the worst."

It was about as sorry a lot of dejected derelicts as was ever brought together on the stage. And the play contained nothing new. Even the statistics had been used before. It was an ugly story, crudely told in an unending stream of uninspired words.

As the declamatory heroine Katherine Calvert did her best, but she has neither the age nor the experience to make such a part convincing. Harry Mestayer, as the brother with the skull that needed trepanning, was, strangely enough, the comedian. His slang drew laughs from the gallery, and he was quite a cutup.

The two best characterizations were those of the besotted couple, pa and ma, played by James A. Marcus and Miss Jessie Ralph.

It will be a strange thing if "The Escape" endures.

'Ready Money' Coming

"Ready Money," James Montgomery's comedy of love and romance, which William A. Brady, Ltd., will present at the Opera House Saturday, October 18, has the distinction of being distinctively out of the beaten path. In fact, it possesses an individuality all its own. The love story is told in a comedy vein, with tense and exciting moments mixed in, but the elements of the "weeping drama" are absent. The sentiment is love and romance as women are thinking about it today. It tells a story of a young man who makes a success just at the time when things look darkest for him, and affords a lesson in encouragement that cannot fail to make an impression on its beholders. That the subject is timely and universal cannot be better stated than by the fact that while the play was enjoying its remarkable run at the Maxine Elliott theater in New York, it was also being presented in London at the New theater by an English company where it was witnessed by the Royal family and the nobility of England during the eight months' engagement there. Chicago and Boston endorsed it for over four months each. It is a clean, snappy comedy that refreshes and invigorates its auditors and sends them away happy and contented. Manager Brady has provided a company of unusual excellence to interpret the Montgomery comedy. Among the best known players are Robert Ober of "Brewster's Millions" fame; Frank Mills who played "Stafford" in the Chicago run of "Bought and Paid For," Nena Blake, last seen in musical comedy; John C. Brownell, of the original "Fortune Hunter" company, Estelle Wynne, Adelaide Hastings, T. E. B. Henry, Walter Fredericks, Mary Carlisle, Clarence Rockefeller and others.

'The Count of Luxembourg'

Local theater goers will be given a real musical treat, it is promised, when Klaw and Erlanger's production of "The Count of Luxembourg" comes to the Opera House, Monday, October 13.

The piece comes with a statement that the entire original production will be on hand and that this latest Lehar success will prove one of the most enjoyable events of the season. Catchy music, bright comedy and an entertaining story are said to form a part of the ingredients which go to make "The Count of Luxembourg" a success.

Franz Lehar, who wrote "The Merry Widow" and numerous other operas, is also responsible for the music of "The Count of Luxembourg." Glen Macdonough adapted it from the German. 'The staircase waltz' is featured as one of the most enjoyable bits of melody and rhythm that has been seen on any stage in a long time. It is only because of the short mapped out for the company that Klaw and Erlanger are able to send the big company out that is now en tour. The entire Broadway chorus is carried intact.

In the American version, which was written by Glen MacDonough from the German of Willner and Bodansky, the lyrics of Adrian Ross and Basil Hood have been retained, so that the general story remains the same. The story is the most celebrated that Franz Lehar has ever written. Instead of a single waltz number combining the whole, the huge orchestra plays almost incessantly from the rise of the first curtain until the fall of the last, and there are 20 musical numbers, of which fully half a dozen are of the haunting kind.

The story deals with the Bohemian experiences of the bankrupt Count of Luxembourg, whose chief proclivities are falling in love and spending every cent he can lay his hands on. The cast includes Mildren Elaine, Maude Gray, Fern Rogers, Helen Gilmore, George Leon Moore, Frank Moulan, Fred Walton, J. H. Rebill, F. C. Jones, Edward Kirby, Paul Frenae and George Krugger. The huge chorus is said to be the best trained one that ever left New York.

GEORGE LEON MOORE AS THE COUNT, AND MILDRED ELAINE AS ANGELE

Plays and Players

Robert Hilliard had as a fortnight's guest, during his summer vacation at Siasconset, one of New Yorks' best-known dramatic critics. The latter at once developed a wild yearning for the open air and sunburn.

Simplicity of attire expedited the critic's toilette, enabling him, upon arising, to reach the open with the least possible delay. Canvas shoes, X-ray linen trousers and a silk shirt, worn shockingly decollete, constituted his regular morning garb.

Rising at daybreak, it was his custom to plunge into the tub, shake himself like a dog and then insert his willowy figure into the clothes of the day. He succeeded always in reaching the breakfast room long before his host had arisen. Hilliard, deliberate and fastidious in his habits, dressed leisurely one morning, and said to his English valet:

"Has my guest, by any chance, yet risen?"

"Yes, sir," replied William. "'E's just going into his bawth, sir."

"I wonder if I wouldn't have time to shave," remarked Mr. Hilliard.

"I think not, sir," replied William, "for 'e's a very quick dresser, sir. 'E's quite like a fire 'oss, sir."

"The Merry Martyr," the new musical play written by Glen MacDonough, with music by Hugo Riesenfeld, the first new musical production of the new season, has scored a very decided success. It is based on the comedy, "Narrentanz," by Leo Birinski, and the leading role, that of a Spanish provincial governor, is played by Maclyn Arbuckle. In his time Mr. Arbuckle has played a little of everything from farce to tragedy, but this is his debut in musical comedy and the fact that he has made good proves his versatility. Boston has already given the stamp of its approval to "The Merry Martyr," and now Philadelphia is to have the opportunity of judging it. Later in the season it will be seen in New York.

Are Headquarters for Bargains in Anything You Want

We have some of the best cattle ranches in the state, from 4,000 acres down to 160-acre farms. We have a party who has a 160-acre unimproved tract at a bargain for cash or terms. We also have a 320-acre farm, one of 560; must be sold. They are way below their value.

Have a party who wants $1,500 at 8% on an improved farm. The loan is good. I personally know the property.

If you have a good farm in Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa or Missouri, and want a home here, we can make you an exchange.

Have a rooming house here at a snap; party wants to leave the city.

Will exchange city residence, well located, worth $3,500, for stock of groceries or merchandise.

We can sell you anything you want or exchange for anything you want. Come in and let your wants be known.

We can trade your property, the other fellow has what you want and he wants your property. Have you a residence in Colorado Springs to trade for 80 acres of irrigated land, close to Denver? This land is absolutely level, good soil and under good ditch. It will produce 60 to 75 bushels of wheat, from 5 to 6 tons of alfalfa to the acre, and if you go into partnership with it, it will make you independent. You will have to have something worth $7,000 to exchange for it. Owner will assume some or carry back some encumbrance.

We will trade 160 acres of dry land, shallow water and in the rain belt in eastern El Paso county, for residence here, and assume.

Have 160 acres in Delta county, with paid-up water right, improved in fruit, grain and alfalfa, for city income. This is clear and first class.

Southern farmer will trade 1,000-acre plantation, with elegant and expensive improvements, for large stock ranch in Colorado. This place had an income of about $20,000 this year, but the doctor has ordered owner to live in Colorado, and you can make a good deal with him.

Are Headquarters for Bargains in Anything You Want

We have some of the best cattle ranches in the state, from 4,000 acres down to 160-acre farms. We have a party who has a 160-acre unimproved tract at a bargain for cash or terms. We also have a 320-acre farm, one of 560; must be sold. They are way below their value.

Have a party who wants $1,500 at 8% on an improved farm. The loan is good. I personally know the property.

If you have a good farm in Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa or Missouri, and want a home here, we can make you an exchange.

Have a rooming house here at a snap; party wants to leave the city.

Will exchange city residence, well located, worth $3,500, for stock of groceries or merchandise.

We can sell you anything you want or exchange for anything you want. Come in and let your wants be known.

SUITE 315 AND 316 MINING EXCHANGE BLDG.

PRIVATE SALE

We, the undersigned, having received a standing bid of 75 per cent of real cash value of their ranch of 107 acres and eight shares of High Line w located one and one-half miles west of Manzanola, Colorado, together about 300 tons of alfalfa, will offer and sell to the highest cash bidder, o before the 15th days of October, 1913, the ranch and hay together and the s and implements separate, to suit the purchaser.

The ranch is well improved with a good house of 6 rooms and a bath, yards of 4,000 head of sheep with hydrant water in each pen, fed from a 1, barrel reservoir and never-failing well. Convenient out-sheds, 6 acre orchard, balance in alfalfa, beets, etc. The ranch joins the Santa Fe rail and power line and is underlain with an extensive underflow of water.

The chattels consist of 7 head of horses, 2 cows, 11 shoats, 1 brood sow chickens, stacking outfit, wagons, plows, harrows and other articles numerous to mention. Call and get a bargain.

J. W. SCOTT AND SON, Manzanola, Colo.

YOUR OWN HOME

Think what it means. Thousands are enjoying privilege. Why not you? It is no longer a luxury, but economy. We have a long list of beautiful homes, la and small, that can be bought at greatly reduced figu on account of owners being nonresidents. Let's show some of these homes.

Our motto: low prices, easy payments.

We can trade your property; the other fellow has what you want and he wants your property. Have you a residence in Colorado Springs to trade for 80 acres of irrigated land, close to Denver? This land is absolutely level, good soil and under good ditch. It will produce 60 to 75 bushels of wheat, from 5 to 6 tons of alfalfa to the acre, and if you go into partnership with it, it will make you independent. You will have to have something worth $7,000 to exchange for it. Owner will assume some or carry back some encumbrance.

We will trade 160 acres of dry land; shallow water, and in the rain belt in eastern El Paso county, for residence here, and assume.

Cripple Creek Mines

IRONCLAD HILL MINES ARE UNUSALLY ACTIVE

CRIPPLE CREEK, Oct. 4.—Ironclad hill, with seven properties under development by lessees is unusually active at this time. Ore teams are kept busy and considerable surface prospecting is under way, while dumps are also being worked over and shipped.

The active mines are the W. P. H., [illegible] and Montrose, controlled through the United Gold Mines company by the Golden Cycle Mining company; the Jerry Johnson, owned by the company of the same name, the Damon block of the Jerry Johnson company, the Forest Queen mine owned by the Auraria Gold Mining company, and the Blonger brothers of Denver, and the Pride of Cripple Creek owned by a company of the same name, a close corporation.

At this time the W. P. H. mine, famous for the rich gold ore mine in 1894 by L[illegible] Harrison and Sevier, under lease to Gus Johnson and John Connors, each operating under district lease, is making the heaviest output from this section. Both lessees are shipping and the September production will approximate 20 broad-gauge cars with a content of between 600 and 700 tons. This ore is of a good average milling grade.

The Damon mine, also controlled by the United Gold Mines company, is active under lease to Frank Doyle, who is mining a fair grade of mill dirt. A car was loaded out yesterday and is estimated at about one-ounce ore.

The Montrose mine, owned by the Montrose Gold Mining company, a corporation controlled by the United Gold Mines company, is under lease to Alex Morrison and St. Paul associates and will be worked through the shaft on the Pride of Cripple Creek.

The Jerry Johnson mine, owned by the Jerry Johnson Mines company, is under lease to Caley & Carlton, and while the production for September will be light, the mine is producing.

The Damon block of the Jerry Johnson company, adjoining the Jerry Johnson claim, under lease to Dave Stafford and C. S. Smith, is back on the shipping list, due to systematic prospect work by the lessees. A promising shoot has been opened up and is under development and the output at present is about 30 tons a car a week.

The Forest Queen mine is owned in part by the Blonger brothers of Denver, and the Auraria Gold Mining company, a close corporation, each owning an undivided one-half interest. The mine is under lease to John Connors of this city, and the lessee has taken out a fortune from this Ironclad hill mine. The September production due to the dead work, the lessee is prospecting for a new ore shoot by crosscut and raise, will be nominal. The dump is being worked over by a sublessee, and a few cars of ore of the value of from $6 to $10 have been hauled off from the property.

The Pride of Cripple Creek, under lease to Alex Morrison and St. Paul capitalists, for a 10-year term, has been equipped with the most powerful and complete mining plant installed on the hill.

The plant was steamed up last week, and the exploitation of the territory embraced in the Pride of Cripple Creek and Montrose lode mining claims, has been commenced. Morrison has planned to prospect the ground at depth and by an elaborate lateral system, and this work should result in the discovery of unknown ore bodies and veins new to this section.

Prospectors are looking over the Teutonic, some surface work by trench is being carried on the ground between the Newark and the McConnel group to the south, and also on the tract better known as the Cameron townsite.

Ore from Ironclad Hill mines is all loaded out from the Cameron station of the Colorado Springs and Cripple Creek Railroad company, "The Short Line," and the billings are made out from this point.

Lessee J. H. White of Colorado Springs, operating the Orpha May mine on Bull hill owned by Stratton's Cripple Creek Mining and Development company—the Stratton estate holding corporation—is making heavy increases in production this month. Ore teams have been engaged hauling from this property three and four days each week loading out cars for consignment to the mill of the Portland Gold Mining company at Colorado City for treatment. The Stratton estate owns a heavy block of stock in the Portland company, and all ores mined by the lessees must be shipped to the Portland mill under the lease conditions.

Mine carpenters at the Vindicator Consolidated Gold Mining company's No. 1 or main shaft are framing square sets and mine timbers and other a[illegible]s making ready for the expected order to resume sinking.

Superintendent H. J. Nagle, Jr., will have everything in readiness for the work, and when commenced the shaft will be sunk in record time. The present depth of the No. 1 shaft is 1,650 feet and while it is not officially confirmed it is rumored that an additional 200 feet will have been attained before work ceases.

An affidavit of labor performed, as required by the mining laws of this state, on the Moon and Star lode mining claims was filed for record with the county clerk and recorder, Thos. T. Barnard by Aaron McClure, who performed the work for Wm. Small, the Boston capitalist, who owns large acreages of patented and unpatented mining claims in Pony Gulch, on Mt. Ervay and other hills of that western section. McClure was notified recently by William Small that he would be in Cripple Creek late this month or in the month of October to resume work on the property. It is proposed to continue driving a tunnel on one of the properties on Mt. Ervay. A dike of low grade mineral has been exposed in surface workings and the owner by working the tunnel will cut the dike at depth.

NEW YORK MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—A general decline in the steel stocks was the conspicuous movement of the day in the securities market. Republic Steel, common and preferred; Colorado Fuel, Lackawanna Steel, Bethlehem Steel, common and preferred, and both of the United States Steel issues were under pressure, and their losses ranged from fractions to 4 points. In the remainder of the list the movement was wavering, with a downward trend.

At the outset the tone was firm, but in the second hour the list developed increasing heaviness. Reading was depressed 2 points, and St. Paul, Lehigh Valley and Amalgamated, a point or more each. In the last few minutes several issues were bid up quickly, resulting in net losses on the day.

The steel group was associated with a reduction in the price of steel billets, announced today. The opinion was expressed that further cuts would be made in steel products.

Additional unfavorable railroad reports for August were influential in weakening railroad shares.

Instead of the small cash gain predicted, the bank statement revealed an actual loss of more than $2,588,91[illegible]. The surplus was cut from $11,044,000 to $8,696,000. The loss was ascribed to unusually large October interest and dividend payments.

Bonds were steady. Total sales, par value, $770,[illegible].

United States 2s and Panama 2s declined a point, and the 4s, ½ on call on the week.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Anxiety over the future caused the hesitation and intermittent weakness of the stock market during the week. This feeling had to do with the prospects for commerce and finance, abroad as well as at home.

The outlook at home, in fact, is now more than usually dependent upon the money market conditions elsewhere.

The action of the international exchanges in response to the advance of the Bank of England discount rate gave notice that no relief was to be looked for in New York, in the immediate future, at least, by resort to London gold supplies.

The effect is especially marked on plans for enlisting new capital. Banking authorities express satisfaction over the conduct of the banks in the last few months in having strictly limited the extension of credits, a course which leaves them in much better position to meet the coming requirements than seemed possible six months ago.

In relations with foreign markets the United States is fortified by the favorable trade balance growing out of heavy exports of grain. Also the holdings of American securities in the hands of foreigners have been reduced by a lengthy process of liquidation.

The home market for steel products remains unsettled, buyers still holding off while price concessions are extended.

CHICAGO MARKET

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—Sentimental effects of the signing of the tariff bill showed themselves today in the wheat pit. The market, though steady at the close, was ⅝c to ⅝@¾c net decline.

Corn finished ⅜@½c to ⅝c down; oats, off ⅛c to ⅛@¼c, and provisions, varying from 10c decline to a rise of 2½c.

Notwithstanding that it has been a foregone conclusion in regard to the tariff measure receiving the president's signature, the knowledge that the new law was actually in operation had considerable to do today with depressing wheat. Competent observers declared that new buyers were kept out, and that short sellers were encouraged. Attention again fixed itself on the point that the only protection now against Canadian wheat was purely optional with Canada.

Chances of a generous increase in the visible supply was responsible in part for the bearish feeling as to wheat. Better weather in Argentina tended also to depress prices, which at no time showed signs of power to make any important rally.

For the first time corn traders took fright at the new tariff.

Possibility of imports from Argentina formed a bogie, although all informed authorities asserted that there was but little danger from that quarter until the next crop. Several of the bull leaders sold out on the decline. Predictions of rough weather that might delay the movement to market or be an injury to corn standing in shocks caused some reaction in the last hour.

Oats suffered from selling based on the offerings of Canadian oats, both east and west. Much of the unloading for longs was done under stop-loss orders.

Weakness of grain and hogs pulled down the active deliveries of provisions. There was a forecast of liberal receipts at the yards next week.

Neatness in Neck-Wear and Veils Suggest Success in Business

A Nice Balancing of Inclination and Economy—Stocking Up At Bargain Season—The Everyday Hat Must Meet All Weather Conditions—No Maid Under Thirty Wants To Be Minus a Dancing and Theater Gown.

NOBODY knows better than the girl who goes to business, or teaches school all day, or spends her time at music, painting or other professional work, how little opportunity there is to keep the wardrobe in proper shape—and how great is the disinclination to bother about clothes in hours that might be spent in recreation or resting. Yet the busy girl must be suitably dressed to take her place in the workaday world and in the social circle which claims her play hours, and she must compete to a certain extent with other girls who have every blessed hour of the livelong day to shop, sew and contrive fetching toggery.

There is also the question of expense, for the girl who earns her own living has many other things to think of when apportioning out her weekly or monthly stipend, besides pretty things to wear. There is board, for instance, and carfare, and laundry, the sitting in church perhaps, club dues very likely, Christmas, Easter and the birthdays of friends, and—if she is a provident little woman—the small weekly sum set aside against the inevitable rainy day. All these, to say nothing of dentist and doctors' bills, must come out of the slender sum before raiment is thought of. It is a lucky—or rather, a capable business or professional woman who can scrape together more than five or six dollars a week for clothes; and that means a good deal less than three hundred dollars a year. Now just take pencil and paper and jot down the things it seems absolutely necessary for a young woman to have, including winter and summer hats and wraps, warm underwear, boots for all seasons, lingerie, umbrellas, handbags, parasols and fresh neckfixings, and see whether you, yourself, gentle feminine reader, who maybe send in your bills for raiment to a husband or generous papa, could manage to look always fresh, dainty and smart under three hundred dollars a year!

How She Does It.

Yet many a business girl does look smart and charming at less expenditure than three hundred dollars and nobody guesses at her brave little makeshifts of the evenings she spends sewing, pressing-out, manicuring and shampooing to keep herself up to her own dainty ideal of feminine perfection. Small wonder you say, that the business girl is prone to accept make-believes in her youthful longing for attractive wearables, that she invests in near-silks, near-furs, half-silk hose, plated gilt trinkets, imitation laces and cleverly cut tailored garments made of poor materials. Of course all this is poor economy for such things wear out speedily and look worse when half worn than articles of good material; but fashions whisk about like a weathervane in a midsummer squall these days and it is a strong-minded maid indeed who will pass by a fetching tailor-made of flimsy half cotton stuff in favor of an austerely plain and practical suit of all-wool that looks just about as chic and modish when new as it will a season hence, and vice versa.

The really canny business or professional girl looks a long way ahead in her purchases and buys her tailored garb at mid-season when prices have come down and smart things which will remain in good style through a second season may be picked up at almost half the early season price. Her lingerie is simple and of fine but substantial cambric rather than of flimsy batiste and lace; and she selects petticoats and combinations trimmed with embroidery which comes unscathed from the hands of the laundress. Nor does she invest in garments honeycombed with ribbon-run beadings. Knowing from past experience the discouraging amount of time it takes to run ribbons into things, of an evening when she would rather be reading an interesting magazine. She buys her stockings by the half dozen pairs so that there are enough to "go round" between darning fests. Out of the three hundred dollars or even the meagre two hundred at her command for clothes, she apportions a certain amount for underwear and buys all that underwear at one time, taking advantage of a white sale at mid-season. Then the matter is off her mind for twelve months and she has always ready a suitable amount of fresh undermuslins, corsets and stockings, without further worry in this respect.

Some Things Must Be Bought at High Tide Prices.

There are certain wearables which the well dressed woman must purchase at the beginning of a season, and certain articles of dress on which prices do not fluctuate. Hats for instance may not be left for economical buying, and it is a thrice fortunate maid who has the knack of trimming her own headgear, for it is almost impossible now to obtain a really smart hat, ready trimmed, under an exorbitant price—to the girl dressing on a two or three hundred dollar outlay. For a modern and modish shape covered with velvet one may pay from five to twenty dollars according to the quality of the velvet and the locality of the shop; but fortunately very little trimming is used on modern millinery and given the shape and a smart feather ornament or cleverly tied ribbon bow (which the saleswoman at the ribbon counter will fashion gratis) almost any maid capable enough to earn her own living can evolve a presentable chapeau.

The Average Business Girl Trims Her Own Hat.

Of the five hats pictured in today's illustrations, there is not a single model which could not be trimmed by a clever young woman, cognizant of current fashions. Two of these hats are, of course, dressy models unsuitable for everyday office or workaday wear, but they are charming hats for Sunday or for restaurant dinner wear and in the latter capacity might make an occasional appearance during business hours discreetly covered with a veil that will confine the plumes in trim, tailored lines against the hatbrim.

The woman who must go out everyday in all sorts of weather knows that a small hat is much the wisest choice. It is better protected by the umbrella, resists the onslaughts of the wind, and is much easier to keep neatly brushed. When it becomes a little shabby also a well-adjusted veil will freshen up its effect considerably. Three very good looking hats suitable for everyday wear are pictured. The sailor model was made by a business girl one evening last week and its possessor has allowed its picture to be taken for the benefit of other business maids. A buckram shape was purchased for thirty-five cents. Brim and crown were covered flatly with navy blue velvet and more of the velvet was draped in folds around the sides of the crown. A curved quill in shaded browns was poised slantwise across the back, the sharp quill end projecting over the brim at the right while the feathered end of the quill points rakishly forward and upward at the left. The quill is held in place by a flat bow of blue moire ribbon.

The girl in a tailored suit of plain and striped serge wears a captivating toque also built over a buckram frame. This toque has a crown of draped black silk and a deep brim of black velvet. A peacock blue quill rises at the front from a smartly tied bow of black picot edged ribbon. A third practical hat is an inexpensive roll-brim model of taupe gray velour with a shaded Copenhagen blue feather curling over at the back. A small cut steel buckle holds the feather against the brim. This hat harmonizes with the coat of imitation Persian lamb with collar and cuffs of taupe plush. Though made of inexpensive materials, this coat has a cut and style not to be questioned, and will make an excellent winter wrap for use over trotteur frocks of serge or mohair; or over theatre gowns of silken stuff. It is worn here over a draped black lansdowne gown, beneath the hem of which peep well fitting buttoned boots.

Simple Tailleurs in Best Taste.

Not for the business woman is the elaborate and extreme product of the tailor's art, combining intricate drapery, slashes, braid, belt and pockets. Such a suit will go out of fashion the moment the tailor thinks of something else; while a simpler model, more moderately designed will be wearable at least a season and a half. Most practical is the attractive little tailleur of plain and striped serge. The skirt is well cut and is short enough to show a neat buttoned calf walking boot. The cutaway coat is made modish by the button-trimmed sleeve and collar of striped material. When desired a bright silk or tapestry waistcoat may be worn with it. The muff and stole of imitation seal are graceful and in good taste. The skirt of another simple tailored suit of dark blue serge is shown with a pretty blouse of blue and green checked silk, draped surplice fashion and trimmed with fancy ribbon stitched together in rows. Another blouse pictured today shows how a very simple costume may be dressed up for matinee day by a distinctive bit of neckwear. This frock of black lansdowne, is piped with black velvet and has a shaped sash of the velvet, knotted at the back of the hips. Under the lansdowne bodice on this occasion is a guimpe of accordion plaited flesh pink chiffon, a collar and revers of fine machine embroidered batiste turning back on the dark bodice.

The Question of Evening Frocks.

Where is the girl in her twenties who does not desire, each season a delectable little frock for evening wear? And if the girl who earns her own living may have only one such frock she wants that one just as dainty and desirable as her purse can afford. Not too expensive yet admirably girlish and dainty is the little dancing dress pictured. The draped foundation is of pale blue crepe de chine and over this is a graceful tunic of lace confined under a sash of pale pink ribbon. A nosegay of tiny pink roses and violets adds a significantly smart touch. Such a frock may be accompanied by long gloves of silk, the silk gloves with Niagara Maid embroidery on the wrist are particularly pretty for evening wear. Buttoned strap slippers of black kid with bead embroidery on the toe may be worn with the white frock and will match other frocks of dark material.

Footwear a Vital Question Also.

The business girl is always in a hurry in the morning, and usually she is tired at night; so if she is a wise girl she has two pairs of wearable boots and then there is never a frantic rush while dressing for breakfast, to sew on boot buttons or polish boots damp and muddy from last night's homeward trip. High-heeled, thin-soled boots are out of place in an office and the everyday costume should be accompanied by well fitting but sturdy boots of black or tan calf with welted soles and moderate heels. Buttoned boots are now the most correct style and the buttoned tops may be of cloth if the business girl so prefers. For dress wear she may have a thinner-soled pair of patent leather boots with buttoned tops of kid or cloth. Dancing boots come now with buttoned tops and dainty heels and are as pretty on the feet as slippers. Of course the business maid will have comfortable pumps to wear around the house, at home, and heel-less slippers for rest hours in her own room.

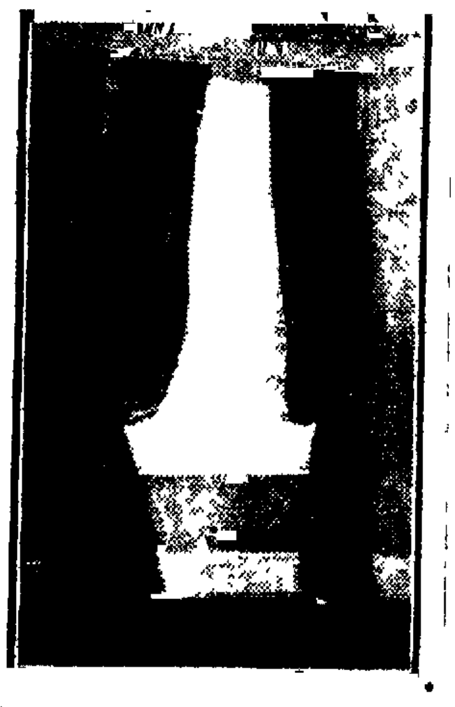
WHEN THE VACATION TRUNK IS PUT AWAY.

DO not send the new dress trunk down cellar for the winter and expect it to appear for next summer's packing as fresh and smart a piece of baggage as in its brand new guise, for even the dryest cellar will turn a trunk dingy and rusty unless special care is taken. Before the trunk goes down stairs go over every bit of it except the leather straps with a cloth dipped in sweet oil. Two coats of the sweet oil will be better yet. Then with a clean, dry cloth, rub the trunk well, especially the metal work. Next season the piece of baggage will look just as fresh and bright as when first purchased.

The Light O' Home

IT is more than an axiom—it is a veritable truth of house furnishing, that treatment of windows may make or mar a room. Yet exceptional is the woman, untrained in artistic matters who has the instructive ability to "see in her mind's eye," plan and purchase exactly the right sort of window hangings to make perfect the home interiors. A sense of proportion, a sense of color, perfect good taste—all these are requisite in the decorator and training and experience count for much beside. The woman who is not certain she can make her drawing, dining, living and bedrooms exactly what they ought to be in the matter of window draperies will be wise in consulting with a professional decorator. Many of the large department stores maintain on the staff of the upholstery department such a decorator, whose services are furnished without cost, provided all drapery materials are purchased in the shop which she represents.

Windows are intended of course, primarily, to give light and air to the rooms within. Now a window can scarcely provide too much air, but it can furnish a great deal too much light for the attractive effect of the interior. Light is a priceless boon, and sunlight is worth its weight in mere solid gold as far as health and happiness are concerned to the occupants of the house, but crude, glaring light, unshaded and unsoftened is not only unbecoming to the complexion but actually injurious to the nerves. The first thing an experienced nurse does on entering a sickroom, is to draw the shades so that a soft, dim light rests rather than irritates the invalid, and draws them evenly so that the room presents an orderly serene suggestion which no room ever had with its window shades at all sorts of heights and angles.



Draperies Need Not Obscure the Light Of Day.

The first thing to consider in planning out the winter window draperies, is the location of the rooms themselves. A north room into which the sun never penetrates should never be decorated in blue or green. Such a room demands rosy tones, or sunny yellow tints and its window hangings must not be heavy enough to shut out what light there is on a stormy day. The south or west room, on the contrary must be provided with window hangings which soften and diffuse the direct glare of the sun, for it is irritating to the nerves to try to sew or write in a room into which the sunshine pours, reflecting itself from polished furniture and metal surfaces and making the light uneven and trying to the eyes. Lace curtains, or net curtains with their open weave, will not diffuse the light sufficiently in very sunny windows and under them—against the pane should be sash curtains of very thin scrim or silk, which may be drawn on slender rods when desired. On dark days, or when no one is working in the sunny room, the thin curtains may be pushed back and will be hidden under the lace curtains and outer draperies of opaque fabric.

All windows that make any pretension to modishness of effect are now draped with two sets of hangings—with the possible exception of windows in simply furnished bedrooms, small oriel windows in hallways, and windows in bathrooms which are always curtained as simply as possible with fresh white washable material drawn on slender rods.

The curtains against the pane, in formal rooms are usually of lace, embroidered net or fine madras and sometimes scrim is used with insertions of handsome lace as in the illustration picturing a corner window in a formal reception room. In this instance the curtains of dull gold brocaded silk are in a tone slightly deeper than the gold tinted wall paper and the curtain veiling the window is of cream scrim trimmed with bands of real Cluny lace. Not every woman however may have a salon hung with gold brocade and real Cluny trimmed curtains and when handsome lace cannot be afforded it is much better to have inner curtains of fine madras simply hemmed at the edges and put most of the money laid out for window hangings in the draperies which fall at either side of the window over the transparent [illegible]. In the [illegible] red madras [illegible] Tapestry and velour are rather high priced, and for small rooms the colored madras draperies are very effective. Sunfast window draperies are always successful in dining or living rooms where there is no great pretense toward elegance, and these draperies come in charming shades of warm brown, tan and various greens.

The dining room window is especially graceful in arrangement. Papered in brown and dull blue striped paper this room has a Dutch frieze combining blue, tan and cream tones, and the window opening is dropped low beneath the frieze. This is a casement window opening from the center outward and the deep sill is tinted cream color to correspond with the other woodwork of the room.

Against the pane is a sash curtain of embroidered cream net edged with imitation Cluny and the valance and side [illegible] of light brown raw silk bordered with a silk trimming showing tones of dull blue, brown and cream like the frieze of the room. Sephia prints in brown wood frames are hung in this dining room. The furniture is dark oak and the chairs have seats of brown leather. Upon the dining table, between meals, is a cover of dull blue linen embroidered in browns and deeper blues.

Machine embroidery makes a pretty trimming for bedroom window curtains and some modern bedrooms have entire curtains of allover embroidery edged with wide banding, or ruffling. When the bedspread, dresser and table covers are also of white embroidery the effect is charmingly fresh and dainty and these embroideries are especially attractive in young girls' bedrooms having wall paper in pink or Dutch blue, with furniture of white wood and white wicker.

Rich Effect of Dining Room Hangings.

IRONCLAD HILL MINES ARE UNUSALLY ACTIVE

CRIPPLE CREEK, Oct. 4. Ironclad hill, with seven properties under development by lessees is unusually active at this time. Ore teams are kept busy and considerable surface prospecting is under way while dumps are also being worked over and shipped.

The active mines are the W. P. H., Damon and Montrose, controlled through the United Gold Mines company by the Golden Cycle Mining company, the Jerry Johnson, owned by the company of the same name, the Damon block of the Jerry Johnson company, the Forest Queen mine owned by the Auraria Gold Mining company, and the Blonger brothers of Denver, and the Pride of Cripple Creek owned by a company of the same name, a close corporation.

At this time the W. P. H. mine, famous for the rich gold ore mine in 1904 by Lessees Harrison and Sevier, under lease to Gus Johnson and John Connors, each operating under district lease, is making the heaviest output from this section. Both lessees are shipping and the September production will approximate 20 broad-gauge cars with a content of between 600 and 700 tons. This ore is of a good average milling grade.

The Damon mine also controlled by the United Gold Mines company, is active under lease to Frank Doyle, who is mining a fair grade of mill dirt. A car was loaded out yesterday and is estimated at about one ounce ore.

The Montrose mine owned by the Montrose Gold Mining company, a corporation controlled by the United Gold Mines company, is under lease to Alex Morrison and St. Paul associates and will be worked through the shaft on the Pride of Cripple Creek.

The Jerry Johnson mine owned by the Jerry Johnson Mines company is under lease to Gales & Carlton and while the production for September will be light the mine is producing.

The Damon block of the Jerry Johnson company, adjoining the Jerry Johnson claim under lease to Dave Stafford and C. S. Smith is back on the shipping list due to systematic prospect work by the lessees. A promising shoot has been opened up and is under development and the output at present is about 30 tons a car a week.

The Forest Queen mine is owned in part by the Blonger brothers of Denver and the Auraria Gold Mining company, a close corporation each owning an undivided one half interest. The mine is under lease to John Connors of this city and the lessee has taken out a fortune from this Ironclad hill mine. The September production due to the dead work the lessee is prospecting for a new ore shoot [illegible] and raise will be nominal [illegible] dump is being worked over [illegible] lessee and a few cars of ore of the [illegible] from $6 to $10 have [illegible] from the property.

The Pride of Cripple Creek [illegible] lease to Alex Morrison and St. [illegible] capitalists for a 1 year term has been equipped with the most [illegible] and complete mining plant installed in the hill.

The plant was steamed up last week and the exploitation of the territory embraced in the Pride of Cripple Creek and Montrose [illegible] mining claims has been [illegible]. Morrison has planned [illegible] ground at depth and [illegible] system and [illegible] result in the discovery of unknown ore bodies and veins new to this section.

Prospectors are looking over the Teutonic, some surface work by trench is being carried on the ground between the Newark and the McConnel group to the south, and also on the tract better known as the Cameron townsite.

Ore from Ironclad Hill mines is all loaded out from the Cameron station of the Colorado Springs and Cripple Creek Railroad company, "The Short Line," and the billings are made out from this point.

Lessee J. H. White of Colorado Springs, operating the Orpha May mine on Bull hill owned by Stratton's Cripple Creek Mining and Development company—the Stratton estate holding corporation—is making heavy increase in production this month. Ore teams have been engaged hauling from this property three and four days each week loading out cars for consignment to the mill of the Portland Gold Mining company at Colorado City for treatment. The Stratton estate owns a heavy block of stock in the Portland company, and all ores mined by the lessees must be shipped to the Portland mill under the lease conditions.

Mine carpenters at the Vindicator Consolidated Gold Mining company's No. 1 or main shaft are framing square sets and mine timbers and otherwise making ready for the expected order to resume sinking.

Superintendent H. J. Nagle, Jr., will have everything in readiness for the work, and when commenced the shaft will be sunk in record time. The present depth of the No. 1 shaft is 1,650 feet and while it is not officially confirmed it is rumored that an additional 200 feet will have been attained before work ceases.

An affidavit of labor performed as required by the mining laws of this state on the Moon and Star lode mining claims was filed for record with the county clerk and recorder, Thos. T. Barnard by Aaron McClure who performed the work for Wm. Small the Boston capitalist who owns large acreages of patented and unpatented mining claims in Pony Gulch on Mt. Ervay and other hills of that western section. McClure was notified recently by William Small that he would be in Cripple Creek late this month or in the month of October to resume work on the property. It is proposed to continue driving a tunnel on one of the properties on Mt. Ervay. A dike of low grade mineral has been exposed in surface workings and the owner by working the tunnel will cut the dike at depth.

NEW YORK MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—A general decline in the steel stocks was the conspicuous movement of the day in the securities market. Republic Steel, common and preferred, Colorado Fuel, Lackawanna Steel, Bethlehem Steel, common and preferred, and both of the United States Steel issues were under pressure, and their losses ranged from fractions to 4 points. In the remainder of the list the movement was wavering, with a downward trend.

At the outset the tone was firm, but in the second hour the list developed increasing heaviness. Reading was depressed 2 points, and St. Paul, Lehigh Valley and Amalgamated, a point or more each. In the last few minutes several issues were bid up quickly, resulting in net losses on the day.

The steel group was associated with a reduction in the price of steel billets, announced today. The opinion was expressed that further cuts would be made in steel products.

Additional unfavorable railroad reports for August were influential in weakening railroad shares.

Instead of the small cash gain predicted, the bank statement revealed an actual loss of more than $9,500,000. The surplus was cut from $17,044,000 to $8,696,000. The loss was ascribed to unusually large October interest and dividend payments.

Bonds were steady. Total sales, par value, $770,000.

United States 2s and Panama 2s declined a point, and the 4s, ½ on call on the week.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Oct. 4. Anxiety over the future caused the hesitation and intermittent weakness of the stock market during the week. This feeling had to do with the prospects for commerce and finance abroad as well as at home.

The outlook at home in fact is now more than usually dependent upon the money market conditions elsewhere.

The action of the international exchanges in response to the advance of the Bank of England discount rate gave notice that no relief was to be looked for in New York in the immediate future at least, by resort to London gold supplies.

The effect is especially marked on plans for enlisting new capital. Banking authorities express satisfaction over the conduct of the banks in the last few months in having strictly limited the extension of credits, a course which leaves them in much better position to meet the coming requirements than seemed possible six months ago.

In relations with foreign markets the United States is fortified by the favorable trade balance growing out of heavy exports of grain. Also the holdings of American securities in the hands of foreigners have been reduced by a lengthy process of liquidation.

The home market for steel products remains unsettled, buyers still holding off while price concessions are extended.

CHICAGO MARKET

CHICAGO, Oct. 4. Sentimental effects of the signing of the tariff bill showed themselves today in the wheat pit. The market though steady at the close, was ⅜c to ⅝@¾c net decline. Corn finished ⅝@¾c to ⅞c down, oats, off ⅛c to ⅜@½c, and provisions, varying from 10c decline to a rise of 2½c.

Notwithstanding that it has been a foregone conclusion in regard to the tariff measure receiving the president's signature, the knowledge that the new law was actually in operation had considerable to do today with depressing wheat. Competent observers declared that new buyers were kept out, and that short sellers were encouraged. Attention again fixed itself on the point that the only protection now against Canadian wheat was purely optional with Canada.

Chances of a generous increase in the visible supply was responsible in part for the bearish feeling as to wheat. Better weather in Argentina tended also to depress prices, which at no time showed signs of power to make any important rally.

For the first time corn traders took fright at the new tariff.

Possibility of imports from Argentina formed a bogie, although all informed authorities asserted that there was but little danger from that quarter until the next crop. Several of the bull leaders sold out on the decline. Predictions of rough weather that might delay the movement to make or be an injury to corn standing in shocks caused some reaction in the last hour.

Oats suffered from selling based on free offerings of Canadian oats, both east and west. Much of the unloading for longs was done under stop-loss orders.

Weakness of grain and hogs pulled down the active deliveries of provisions. There was a forecast of liberal receipts at the yards next week.

Neatness in Neck Wear and Veils Suggest Success in Business

A Nice Balancing of Inclination and Economy—Stocking Up At Bargain Season—The Everyday Hat Must Meet All Weather Conditions—No Maid Under Thirty Wants To Be Minus a Dancing and Theater Gown.

NOBODY knows better than the girl who goes to business, or teaches school all day, or spends her time at music, painting or her professional work, how little op- ortunity there is to keep the ward- obe in proper shape and how great the disinclination to bother about othes in hours that might be spent recreation or resting. Yet the busy rl must be suitably dressed to take r place in the workaday world and the social circle which claims her ay hours and she must compete to certain extent with other girls who ave every blessed hour of the live- ng day to shop, sew and contrive tching toggery.

There is also the question of ex- nse, for the girl who earns her own ing has many other things to think when apportioning out her weekly monthly stipend, besides pretty ngs to wear. There is, board, for stance and carfare, and laundry, e sitting in church perhaps, club es very likely, Christmas, Easter d the birthdays of friends, and— she is a provident little woman— small weekly sum set aside ainst the inevitable rainy day. All ese to say nothing of dentist and ctors bills must come out of the nder sum before raiment is thought.

It is a lucky—or rather, a capa- -business or professional woman o can scrape together more than or six dollars a week for clothes; d that means a good deal less than ee hundred dollars a year. Now t take pencil and paper and jot wn the things it seems absolutely essary for a young woman to have, luding winter and summer hats d wraps warm underwear, boots for seasons lingerie umbrellas, hand- s parasols and fresh neckfixings, d see whether you yourself, gentle minine reader who maybe send in r bills for raiment to a husband generous papa, could manage to k always fresh dainty and smart der three hundred dollars a year!

How She Does It.

et many a business girl does look art and charming at less expendi- than three hundred dollars and ody guesses at her brave little keshifts or the evenings she spends ing pressing-out manicuring and mpooing to keep herself up to her dainty ideal of feminine perfec- Small wonder you say that business girl is prone to accept ke-believes in her youthful long- for attractive wearables that she sts in near-silks near-furs, half- hose plated gilt trinkets imita- laces and cleverly cut tailored ments made of poor materials. Of se all this is poor economy for things wear out speedily and worse when half worn than ar e of good material last fashions k about like a weathervane in a summer sea [illegible] these days and it ng-minded maid indeed who will pass by a fetching tailor-made of flimsy half cotton stuff in favor of an austerely plain and practical suit of all-wool that looks just about as chic and modish when new as it will a season hence, and vice versa.

The really canny business or professional girl looks a long way ahead in her purchases and buys her tailored garb at mid-season when prices have come down and smart things which will remain in good style through a second season may be picked up at almost half the early season price. Her lingerie is simple and of fine but substantial cambric rather than of filmy batiste and lace; and she selects petticoats and combinations trimmed with embroidery which comes unscathed from the hands of the laundress. Nor does she invest in garments honeycombed with ribbon-run beadings, knowing from past experience the discouraging amount of time it takes to run ribbons into things, of an evening when she would rather be reading an interesting magazine. She buys her stockings by the half dozen pairs so that there are enough to "go round" between darning fests. Out of the three hundred dollars or even the meagre two hundred at her command for clothes, she apportions a certain amount for underwear and buys all that underwear at one time, taking advantage of a white sale at mid-season. Then the matter is off her mind for twelve months and she has always ready a suitable amount of fresh undermuslins, corsets and stockings, without further worry in this respect.

Some Things Must Be Bought at High Tide Prices.

There are certain wearables which the well dressed woman must purchase at the beginning of a season and certain articles of dress on which prices do not fluctuate. Hats for instance may not be left for economical buying, and it is a thrice fortunate maid who has the knack of trimming her own headgear, for it is almost impossible now to obtain a really smart hat, ready trimmed under an exorbitant price—to the girl dressing on a two or three hundred dollar outlay. For a modern and modish shape covered with velvet one may pay from five to twenty dollars according to the quality of the velvet and the locality of the shop, but fortunately very little trimming is used on modern millinery and given the shape and a smart feather ornament or cleverly tied ribbon bow (which the saleswoman at the ribbon counter will fashion gratis) almost any maid capable enough to earn her own living can evolve a presentable chapeau.

The Average Business Girl Trims Her Own Hat.

Of the five hats pictured in today's illustrations there is not a single model which could not be trimmed by a clever young woman cognizant of current fashions. Two of these hats are of course dressy models unsuitable for everyday office or workaday wear but they are charming hats for Sunday or for restaurant dinner wear and in the latter capacity might make an occasional appearance during business hours [illegible] covered with a veil that will confine the plumes in trim, tailored lines against the hatbrim.

The woman who must go out every day in all sorts of weather knows that a small hat is much the wisest choice. It is better protected by the umbrella, resists the onslaughts of the wind, and is much easier to keep neatly brushed. When it becomes a little shabby also a well-adjusted veil will freshen up its effect considerably. Three very good looking hats suitable for everyday wear are pictured. The sailor model was made by a business girl one evening last week and its possessor has allowed its picture to be taken for the benefit of other business maids. A buckram shape was purchased for thirty-five cents. Brim and crown were covered flatly with navy blue velvet and more of the velvet was draped in folds around the sides of the crown. A curved quill in shaded browns was poised slantwise across the back, the sharp quill end projecting over the brim at the right while the feathered end of the quill points rakishly forward and upward at the left. The quill is held in place by a flat bow of blue moire ribbon.

The girl in a tailored suit of plain and striped serge wears a captivating toque also built over a buckram frame. This toque has a crown of draped black silk and a deep brim of black velvet. A peacock blue quill rises at the front from a smartly tied bow of black picot edged ribbon. A third practical hat is an inexpensive roll brim model of taupe gray velour with a shaded Copenhagen blue feather curling over at the back. A small cut steel buckle holds the feather against the brim. This hat harmonizes with the coat of imitation Persian lamb with collar and cuffs of taupe plush. Though made of inexpensive materials, this coat has a cut and style not to be questioned, and will make an excellent winter wrap for use over trotteur frocks of serge or mohair or over theatre gowns of silken stuff. It is worn here over a draped black lansdowne gown beneath the hem of which peep well fitting buttoned boots.

Simple Tailleurs In Best Taste

Not for the business woman is the elaborate and extreme product of the tailor's art, combining intricate drapery, slashes, braid, belt and pockets. Such a suit will go out of fashion the moment the tailor thinks of something else, while a simpler model more moderately designed will be wearable at least a season and a half. Most practical is the attractive little tailleur of plain and striped serge. The skirt is well cut and is short enough to show a neat buttoned calf walking boot. The cutaway coat is made modish by the button trimmed sleeve and collar of striped material. When desired a bright silk or tapestry waistcoat may be worn with it. The muff and stole of imitation seal are graceful and in good taste. The skirt of another simple tailored suit of dark blue serge is shown with a pretty blouse of blue and green checked silk, draped surplice fashion and trimmed with fancy ribbon stitched together in rows. Another blouse pictured today shows how a very simple costume may be dressed up for matinee day by a distinctive bit of neckwear. This frock of black lansdowne is piped with black velvet and has a shaped sash of the velvet, knotted at the back of the hips. Under the lansdowne bodice on this occasion is a guimpe of accordion plaited flesh pink chiffon, a collar and revers of fine machine embroidered batiste turning back on the dark bodice.

The Question of Evening Frocks.

Where is the girl in her twenties who does not desire each season a delectable little frock for evening wear? And if the girl who earns her own living may have only one such frock she wants that one just as dainty and desirable as her purse can afford. Not too expensive yet admirably girlish and dainty is the little dancing dress pictured. The draped foundation is of pale blue crepe de chine and over this is a graceful tunic of lace confined under a sash of pale pink ribbon. A nosegay of tiny pink roses and violets adds a significantly smart touch. Such a frock may be accompanied by long gloves of silk—the silk gloves with Niagara Maid embroidery on the wrist are particularly pretty for evening wear. Buttoned strap slippers of black kid with bead embroidery on the toe may be worn with the white frock and will also match other frocks of dark material.

Footwear a Vital Question Also.

The business girl is always in a hurry in the morning, and usually she is tired at night, so if she is a wise girl she has two pairs of workaday boots and then there is never a frantic rush while dressing for breakfast, to sew on boot buttons or polish boots damp and muddy from last night's homeward trip. High heeled, thin soled boots are out of place in an office and the everyday costume should be accompanied by well fitting but sturdy boots of black or tan calf with welted soles and moderate heels. Buttoned boots are now the most correct style and the buttoned tops may be of cloth if the business girl so prefers. For dress wear she may have a thinner soled pair of patent leather boots with buttoned tops of kid or cloth. Dancing boots come now with buttoned tops and dainty heels and are as pretty on the foot as slippers. Of course the business maid will have comfortable pumps to wear around the house at home and heel-less slippers for rest hours in her own room.

WHEN THE VACATION TRUNK IS PUT AWAY.

Do not send the new dress trunk down cellar for the winter and expect it to appear for next summer's packing as fresh and smart a piece of baggage as in its brand new guise, for even the dryest cellar will turn a trunk dingy and rusty unless special care is taken. Before the trunk goes down stairs go over every bit of it except the leather straps with a cloth dipped in sweet oil. Two coats of the sweet oil will be better yet. Then with a clean dry cloth rub the trunk well especially the metal work. Next season the piece of baggage will look just as fresh and bright as when first purchased.

The Light Home

IT is more than an axiom—it is a veritable truth of house furnishing that treatment of windows may make or mar a room. Yet exceptional is the woman untrained in artistic matters, who has the instructive ability to "see in her mind's eye," plan and purchase exactly the right sort of window hangings to make perfect the home interiors. A sense of proportion a sense of color, perfect good taste—all these are requisite in the decorator and training and experience count for much beside. The woman who is not certain she can make her drawing, dining living and bedrooms exactly what they ought to be in the matter of window draperies will be wise in consulting with a professional decorator. Many of the large department stores maintain on the staff of the upholstery department such a decorator whose services are furnished without cost, provided all drapery materials are purchased in the shop which she represents.

Windows are intended of course, primarily, to give light and air to the rooms within. Now a window can scarcely provide too much air but it can furnish a great deal too much light for the attractive effect of the interior. Light is a priceless boon, and sunlight is worth its weight in mere solid gold as far as health and happiness are concerned to the occupants of the house but crude glaring light unshaded and unsoftened is not only unbecoming to the complexion but actually injurious to the nerves. The first thing an experienced nurse does on entering a sickroom is to draw the shades so that a soft dim light rests rather than irritates the invalid and draws them evenly so that the room presents an orderly serene suggestion which the room [illegible] had with its window shades at all sorts of heights and angles.

The first thing to consider in plan

ning [illegible] window draperies, is the [illegible] of the rooms themselves. A north room into which the sun never penetrates should never be decorated in blue or green. Such a room demands rosy tones, or sunny yellow tints and its window hangings must not be heavy enough to shut out what light there is on a stormy day. The south or west room, on the contrary, must be provided with window hangings which soften and diffuse the fierce glare of the sun for a [illegible] the nerves to try [illegible]

[illegible] ing to the eyes. Lace curtains or net curtains with their open weave, will not diffuse the light sufficiently in very sunny windows and under them against the pane should be sash curtains of very thin scrim or silk which may be drawn on slender rods when desired on dark days or when no one is working in the sunny room, the thin curtains may be pushed back and will be hidden under the lace curtains and outer draperies of opaque fabric.

All windows that make any pretension to modishness of effect are now draped with two sets of hangings, with the possible exception of windows in simply furnished bedrooms, small oriel windows in hallways and windows in bathrooms which are always curtained as simply as possible with fresh white washable material drawn on slender rods.

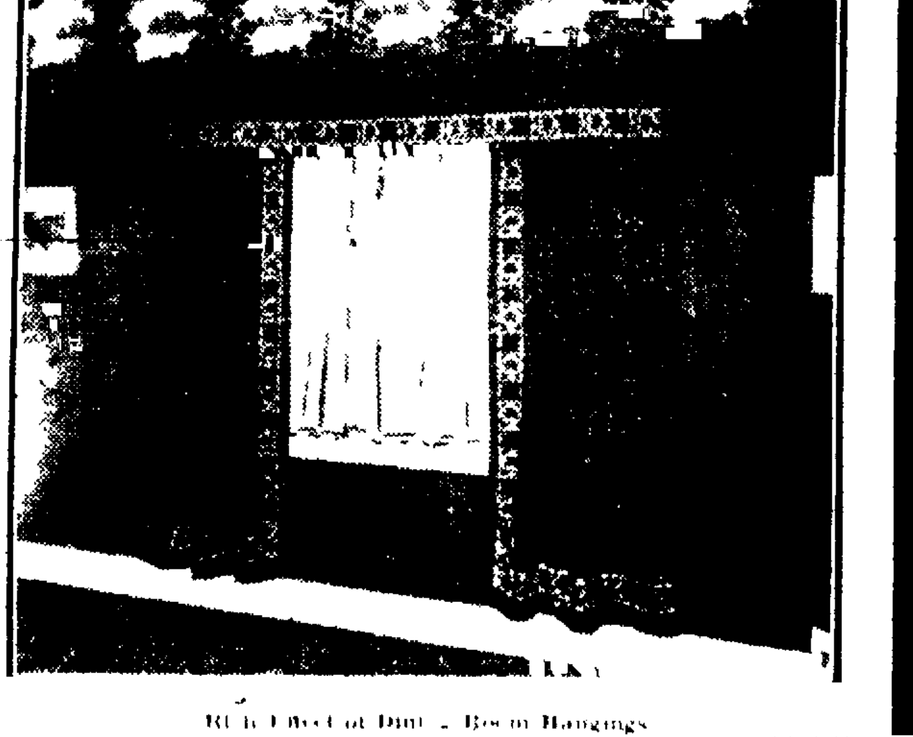
The curtains against the pane in formal rooms are usually of lace, embroidered net or fine madras and sometimes scrim is used with insertions of handsome lace as in the illustration picturing a [illegible] window [illegible] formal reception [illegible] the curtains of [illegible] shaded silk are [illegible] rather than the [illegible] and the curtain [illegible] the window is of cream scrim trimmed with bands of real Cluny lace. Not every woman however may have a salon hung with gold brocade and real lace trimmed curtains and when handsome lace cannot be afforded it is much better to have simple curtains of fine madras simply hemmed at the edges and [illegible] for window hangings in the [illegible]

Tapestry and velour are rather high priced and for small rooms the colored madras draperies are very effective. Sunfast window draperies are always successful in dining or living rooms where there is no great pretense toward elegance and these draperies come in charming shades of [illegible] brown tan and [illegible] greens.

The dining room window was especially graceful in arrangement. [illegible] striped [illegible] this room has a [illegible] frieze combining blue tan and cream tones, and the window [illegible] is dropped [illegible] frieze. [illegible]

Against the pane is a sash curtain [illegible] trimmed with [illegible] and the valance and [illegible] silk bordered with a silk trimming showing tones of dull blue, brown and cream like the frieze of the room. [illegible] prints in brown wood frames are hung in this dining room. The furniture is dark oak and the chairs have seats of brown leather. Upon the dining table between meals, is a cover of [illegible] blue linen embroidered [illegible] flowers and deeper blues.

Machine embroidery makes a pretty trimming for bedroom window curtains and some modern bedrooms have entire curtains of allover embroidery edged with wide banding, or ruffles. When the bedspread, [illegible] covers are also of [illegible] the effect is charming [illegible] and these embroidered [illegible] covers are especially [illegible] young girls' bedrooms [illegible] paper in pink or [illegible] furniture of white [illegible]



Rich Effect of Dining Room Hangings

FLOODING OF CULEBRA CUT WILL MARK END OF NINE-YEAR TASK OF DIGGING

Big Ditch in Which Major Portion of Excavation in Panama Canal Has Been Done Will Be Filled With Waters of the Vast Gatun Lake Today

AFTER nine years' work at the most stupendous task ever attempted by man, the greatest diggers the world has ever known have cast aside their shovels with a great sigh of supreme satisfaction. And the biggest ditch on this earth of ours has been dug. Culebra cut is being filled today with the waters through which vessels in a few short months will be steaming on voyages between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans via the Panama canal.

The work of the army of gigantic steam shovels which for so long have been eating their way through the vitals of the Isthmian mountains came to an end a month ago. Workmen during the last few weeks have been busily engaged in taking out of the nine mile Culebra cut the enormous amount of machinery, tracks and other equipment preparatory to the letting in of the waters. This will begin gradually today, and next Friday, just five days hence, the sole barrier between the waters of the vast Gatun lake and the cut will be demolished by dynamite. With the blowing out of Gamboa dike there will disappear the last obstruction, with the exception of the canal locks themselves, beween the waters of the two greatest oceans.

Yes, there still remain in Culebra cut a few million cubic yards of earth and rock which must be taken out before the job can be called absolutely complete. But what is this task compared to the removal of 100,000,000 cubic yards of material - in round numbers the amount already taken out of the gigantic cut? What of it when any one of the fleet of dredges can get away with 685 cubic yards of material an hour? Surely a force that has to its credit a marvelous succession of world's record breaking performances in digging can be counted on making short work of this little job.

JUST PLAIN JOB OF DITCH DIGGING

To the mind of the engineer there are many features of the work of building the Panama canal which presented much greater difficulties, much more intricate problems than the digging of Culebra cut. But to the lay mind the making of the canal has always presented itself as a job of ditch digging—the biggest job of its kind ever known, to be sure, but still essentially work for diggers. And even the engineers who have worked out all the niceties of the task of lock construction are obliged to admit that the digging has been the fundamental of the great canal now so near completion; that it has been the body of which locks and dams and other features have been but the limbs.

That is why the practical completion of Culebra cut is an event so thoroughly worthy of notice by the American people for whose benefit it has been dug, for it is in Culebra cut that the bulk of canal digging has been done. It is also the cut which is making the Panama canal possible.

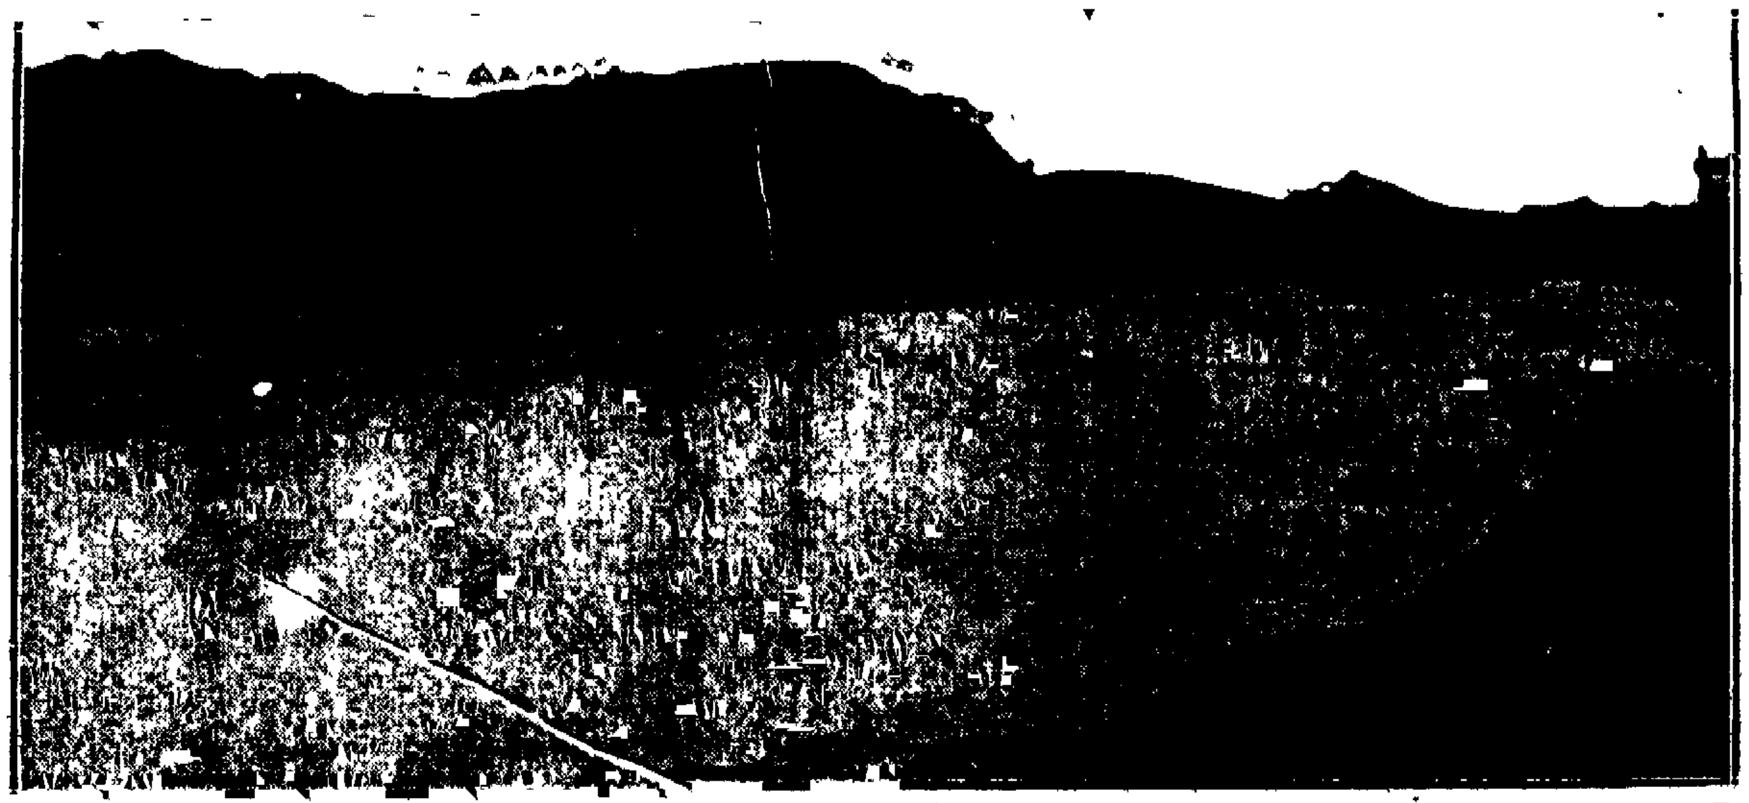
What is Culebra cut? It is simple enough when expressed in figures, quickly spoken. It is a great ditch, nine miles long, averaging 120 feet in depth, not less than 300 feet wide at the bottom, and from a quarter to a half mile wide at the top. Its bottom lies 45 feet above the level of the sea, and will soon be covered with water to a minimum depth of 40 feet, and thus will a great part of the work which has been done there be obscured.

CULEBRA WILL COST U S. $90,000.000

The cut represents the removal of more than 130,000,000 of cubic yards of earth, counting what both the French and the American diggers did. The Americans alone will have spent $90,000,000 in the cut when it is all finished.

Passing through the canal from the Atlantic side, Culebra cut lies at the distant end of Gatun lake, that artificial body of water, 34 miles long with a surface area of 164 square miles, which has been created at Panama. Gatun lake will be 85 feet above the level of the sea, and with the blowing out of the Gamboa dike this week vessels will be afforded a continuous passage from Gatun dam, across the lake and through the cut, without encountering any locks.

The vast difference between the estimates of the amount of work necessary to make Culebra cut, and what actually has been done, shows with striking clearness how much bigger the job was than anything engineers had ever tackled up to 10 years ago. The digging of Culebra cut has, for one thing, given the engineering world a new set of standards by which to measure the requirements of future works of a similar character.



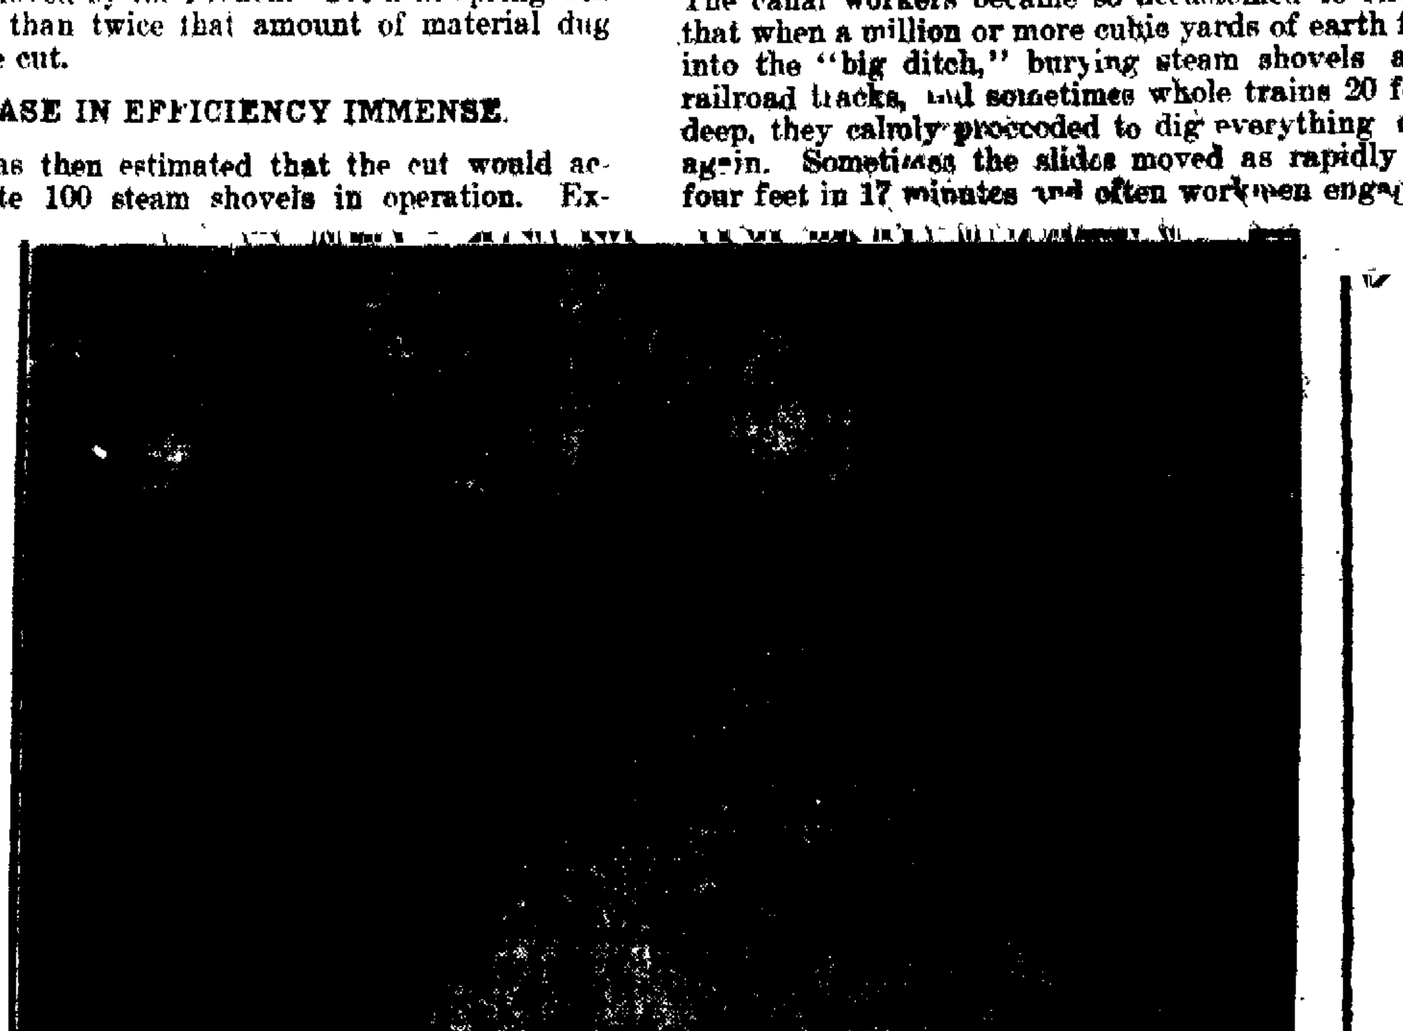
A view of the great expanse of water now gradually filling the Panama canal, which is almost ready for the admission of the big ships. To look at the picture, you would think the canal is finished. The embankments that flank the channel, the broad even expanse of water, and the Miraflores locks in the distance are just as they will be when the opening of the canal takes place.

This is the only photograph received up to the present time which shows the canal as it will appear at the opening of the big waterway connecting the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

It was estimated in the beginning that 53,000,000 cubic yards of earth would have to be taken out of Culebra cut, not counting the 24,000,000 cubic yards removed by the French. Yet next spring will see more than twice that amount of material dug out of the cut.

INCREASE IN EFFICIENCY IMMENSE.

It was then estimated that the cut would accommodate 100 steam shovels in operation. Experience has shown that the maximum number which could work at one time in the cut was 46, and no one has ever chided Colonel Goethals for not digging industriously. Yet had the original estimate of the capacity of these steam shovels been verified by experience the United States would be today looking forward to a celebration of the opening of the Panama canal in 1926, instead of in 1914 or 1915. So great has been the increase of efficiency among the canal builders that even though the estimates of total excavation have been increased from time to time until more than 100,000,000 cubic yards have been added not a single day has been added to the time required for the digging nor a single dollar added to the cost.



The explosion of 20 tons of dynamite, August 31, at a dike a mile below the Miraflores locks, permitting the waters of the Pacific ocean to reach the locks on the high tide following. The whole channel was filled. This view shows the canal looking south from the Miraflores locks since August 31.

The slides alone in Culebra cut added about 25,000,000 cubic yards to the work of the diggers there. If all the horses in the United States were hitched up to wagons containing the material dumped into the cut by slides they would not be able to move it an inch. Think of a farm of 67 acres sliding downhill into the partially completed cut at one time. Think of this happening not once but scores of times, though usually on a somewhat smaller scale.

There is only one method of treatment of slides, that is to dig the material out as fast as it slides in. The canal workers became so accustomed to slides that when a million or more cubic yards of earth fell into the "big ditch," burying steam shovels and railroad tracks, and sometimes whole trains 20 feet deep, they calmly proceeded to dig everything out again. Sometimes the slides moved as rapidly as four feet in 17 minutes and often workmen engaged in digging out a slide continued at their work with great danger to their own lives.

SLIDES ENTIRELY NEW FEATURE

The slides were an entirely new, unsuspected and vexatious feature of the Culebra cut, for the French never dug deep enough in the score of years they gave to the job to cause any sliding of the sides. The Culebra cut was the only section of their proposed canal on which the French did any work after 1889, when the first failure occurred. In 1904, when the United States took over the canal and the French equipment, the Culebra cut looked as if the French had done nothing.

Even in the places where they had dug the deepest the channel was so narrow and the vegetation so thick that there were scarcely any visible traces of what they had done. The maximum of excavation by the French was 33,000 cubic yards a month, which is 30 per cent less than the American diggers took out in a single day in the cut.

It is interesting to read the accounts of the day, February 1, 1882, when the French began work on Culebra cut. There were flowers and flags and speeches and champagne, the festivities ending with a grand ball. Even then they had ready the motor boats in which they intended to sail through the waters of the canal they were about to dig in so short a time.

On the sides of Culebra's hills when the United States took possession in 1904 were standing old excavators and other machinery which they had used. The American engineers say now that the French did well considering the inadequate equipment they had. The United States used their old excavators the first few months and it was not until November, 1904, that the first modern steam shovel arrived on the job. By June, 1905, the last of the French excavators had been discarded from the job and replaced by a giant steam shovel. Even at that the French took out a total of 24,000,000 cubic yards -about 18 months' work for the battery of shovels that Col. Goethals put to work in the cut.

Yet it is admitted that the Americans could have done little better had they been compelled to get along with the French equipment. Not only in the actual excavating but also in the matter of disposing of the spoil from the cut were the French equipment and methods inadequate. Even with improved machinery it was not until Colonel Goethals took charge of the job in April, 1907, that really rapid progress was made in digging out the cut.

When Colonel Goethals went down to see if an army engineer with semimilitary system could do what two civilians had failed to do the country had begun to lose faith in the canal job. Colonel Goethals felt that the first thing to be done was to restore the confidence of congress and the people of the United States in the capability of the canal workers and that to accomplish this end he must manage somehow to "make the dirt fly."

By establishing the principle of competition between shovels, by reorganizing the transportation methods for getting the spoil out of the cut and by eliminating all red tape which was blocking the actual work of digging, Colonel Goethals began to get results. Bearing in mind that he arrived on the job in April, 1907, the following record of excavation by years shows what was done:

Year.	Amount Excavated from Culebra Cut, Cu. Yd.
1905-06	1,250,570
1906-07	4,861,570
1907-08	11,285,217
1908-09	13,955,753
1910-11	15,925,976
1911-12	16,448,513

RAILROADS MADE SPEED POSSIBLE.

Anyone who has been through Culebra cut in the last few years will remember the apparent endless confusion of railroad tracks in the cut. Yet it was this mass of railroad transportation facilities that made possible the amazingly rapid digging of the cut. What seemed to be a tangle of tracks and trains was really one of the most efficient systems in the world, which has established a new set of records for the handling of heavy traffic.

The canal builders used in the cut an average of 75 trains a day, all going all the time. Each train was usually made up of 21 flat cars, each car having a capacity of about 19 cubic yards of spoil, weighing roughly about 30 tons. The haul for each train in carrying spoil away from the shovels to the dumps averaged eight miles. One hundred and nineteen locomotives and 2,000 cars, most of them unloaded by the Lidgerwood scraper, were in constant use all the time in the cut.

There were 37 miles of track in the nine mile cut, while in the entire central division, over which the cut spoil had to be hauled, there were more than 132.7 miles. The traffic on this mileage has exceeded that of the Panama railroad, which carries the heaviest traffic a mile of any railroad in the world. The tonnage a mile a month on the working tracks for the cut has been 10,610.5 tons.

In the handling of this traffic there were employed 1,923 men, of which 384 were highly skilled employes, whose wages averaged $210 a month, gold. This was said to have been the largest force commanding such high wages employed in any one department of work in all the world. The track shifting force was accustomed to lay a mile of track each day, constant shifting being always necessary because of slides and excavation to lower levels. In this phase of the work alone the Panama workers in Culebra cut established a new record by means of a special type of machine invented on the canal.

SLIDES INTERFERE WITH TRAFFIC

With the concentration of the heavy digging in the cut down to a strip three miles long and then a mile and a half long the transportation problems were intensified. The slides were always interfering with the railways. Opposite Gold hill there were usually seven tracks, in parallel, and it became a common thing for five or six of them to be put entirely out of commission by a single slide. But by a highly developed system of train operation things were kept going. Dispatchers knew where each of the 75 trains were every minute, and yard masters in the cut and on the dumps cooperated wonderfully to keep the dirt moving.

Colonel Goethals has disappointed those who had looked forward to the blowing out of Gamboa dike this week as a spectacle, by taking out of the task all possible spectacular features. In the first place, water from Gatun lake will be admitted to Culebra cut today, five days before the dike is actually blown out. This will be done by means of four 26-inch pipes extending through the dike. The water thus to be let in will act as a cushion when the dike is blown. Workmen have just completed drilling [illegible] holes in the dike to take charges of dynamite which will be set off next Friday. But these charges will not demolish the dike; they will only loosen the material so that water will be able to trickle through gradually. The water itself is counted on to wear a channel through the dike and further loosen it so the dredges can entirely remove it.

Gamboa dike was built in 1908 to protect the deepening [illegible] from the freshets of the Chagres river, which empties into Gatun lake at that point. In 1912 the dike was raised to its present dimensions, 78.2 feet above sea level and [illegible] feet wide at the top. The rising waters of Gatun lake were on June [illegible] feet above the level of the sea and will be at the 71-foot level when the dike is blown next month. By December 1 it is estimated Gatun lake will reach the [illegible] Culebra cut and then nothing will remain [illegible] the cut and the final touches to the lock machinery [illegible] the first ship through the great canal from Atlantic to Pacific.

Twenty tons of dynamite were used by the engineers of the Panama canal to open it to the waters of the Pacific ocean. They shot a blast on the dike below Miraflores to tear out the dam which had kept the ocean waters out.
